Poll Shows F. D. R. Leading in Electoral Votes

MICHIGAN'S SHIFT FROM G. O. P. GIVES PARTY 274 TO 257

VOTES FOR LEMKE ADVANCE SHARPLY

Roosevelt's Popularity Up
5 Points in Maine After His Visit of Inspection at Passamaquoddy.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The Institute of Public Opinion's thirty-second presidential poll, covering the last two weeks, shows the following developments:

First—President Roosevelt's national popular vote remains virtually unchanged — 52.5% against 52.4% two weeks ago—but he has taken the lead from Governor Landon in electoral votes. The President's total is now 274 to Landon's 257. Last fortnight Landon was ahead, 276 to 255. The change came about because Michigan, with 19 electoral votes, shifted to the democratic side.

Second—Continuing its upward trend, the total vote for William Lemke has risen sharply. The union party candidate receives 4.6% of the ballots cast in today's poll—a rise of more than one point since the poll two weeks ago. In terms of actual votes, his strength is now more than 2,000,000.

Third—Roosevelt's popularity has increased five points in Maine following the President's visit of inspection to the Passamaquoddy project. As a result, Maine has ceased to be the most republican state in the Union, giving way to Vermont. However, Maine voters still give Landon a comfortable majority of 66%.

Fourth—Among the five principal "borderline" states, whose voters will probably decide the election, Governor Landon has gained between one and two points in Pennsylvania and Illinois.

Fliers' Bodies Found In Wrecked Airplane

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 22.—(AP)—The bodies of Captain Harold Braun and Lieutenant Anthony Curcio, Moffett field army fliers, were found in their wrecked observation plane today in Altamont Pass, eight miles east of Livermore.

The plane had hit a hill as the aviators were returning from a flight to Bakers field.

Captain Braun, the observer, and Lieutenant Curcio were still strapped in their seats. The plane did not catch fire.

Couzens To Support Campaign of F. D. R.

DETROIT, Aug. 22.—(AP)—United States Senator James Couzens, republican, in a statement today announced his intention of supporting President Roosevelt for re-election.

Senator Couzens' statement in full read: "Believing as I do that the most important matter confronting the nation is the re-election of President Roosevelt, I intend to support him."

"The outcome of my own candidacy for the senate, is neither important to the nation nor to me, but I believe it is important that my many loyal supporters in Michigan be advised in advance of the primary September 25."

"The reasons for this conclusion will be advanced from time to time between now and election next November."

'UNHOLY ALLIANCE' OPPOSING RIVERS, BACKERS CHARGE

Hearst's Georgian, Fortson, Redwine, Seeking Republican Control of State, Statement Says.

Labeling the publication of charges in Hearst's Atlanta newspaper accusing Speaker Rivers of negotiating with republicans an "unholy alliance" between Charles D. Redwine and Judge Blanton Fortson, Rivers campaign headquarters yesterday announced that "Speaker Rivers will reveal the entire republican plot to control Georgia" in his Monday night radio address from Atlanta.

Issuing a statement declaring that Speaker Rivers "does not want fair treatment from a newspaper in democratic Georgia espousing the cause of republicanism," the Lakeland candidate's headquarters bitterly attacked the participation of an Atlanta Georgian reporter in the obtaining of affidavits from republicans in south Georgia in the Fortson campaign.

"The republican scheme will not work," the Rivers organization declared in asserting that already the reaction has set in favor to the speaker's candidacy.

GOVERNOR RENEWS RUSSELL ATTACKS

Talmadge at Waycross, Jesup, Again Denies He Called CCC Boys 'Bums'

By GLENN RAMSEY, Associated Press Staff Writer.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Governor Talmadge delivered two campaign speeches in south Georgia today, telling his listeners he would be a "fighting senator" if they would send him to Washington to succeed his opponent, Senator Richard B. Russell Jr.

The Governor spoke here in the rain during the morning and moved on to Jesup for an afternoon speech. The rain which fell for the second time in two days on his audiences failed to interrupt the proceedings.

He charged the persons who sought to block the administration of the state's affairs through court action.

GOVERNOR'S RACE PUT IN SPOTLIGHT AS CHARGES FLY

Injection by Fortson of Republicanism Issue Shifts Fire to Rivers Instead of Talmadgeite.

With the open injection of the republicanism issue into the gubernatorial race, the hotly contested battle between Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. and Governor Talmadge for the time being, at least, last week was somewhat overshadowed but as all candidates prepare for their gruelling drive down the stretch it was apparent that in both of the major races and to a lesser degree in the minor races that the battle will be fought out on September 9 with democracy the vital issue.

Carefully studied reports from all sections of the state reveal that Senator Russell is still running at the fast pace he reached two weeks ago. They indicate that while Talmadge remains strong in several spotted sections, chiefly where the republican party always has been a factor in Georgia politics, that Russell will poll a great unit vote majority and that his popular vote majority will be large enough to satisfy his staunchest followers.

Republicanism Controversy

The heated controversy over republicanism which was injected into the governor's race openly for the first time during the last week has not yet simmered to a point where observers definitely can note its effect on the campaign.

The forces of Speaker E. D. Rivers, charged by Judge Blanton Fortson in affidavits furnished by republican leaders themselves with having attempted to sell his now extinct weekly newspaper to the G. O. P. and become its congressional candidate in 1932 strongly assert that the charges, coming from republican sources, and the charges show collusion between Fortson and the republican party and because that even if they took votes away from Rivers those votes would

The bodies were burned beyond recognition and it was some time before identifications could be established.

$246,000 Is Provided For City Auditorium

WPA yesterday made an additional $246,000 available to the city for completion of the renovation of the auditorium-armory. Councilman John A. White, chairman of the committee in charge of public buildings and grounds, announced.

White was informed of the new allocation by T. J. Durrett, district projects director for WPA, and work will continue steadily on the undertaking, it was said.

Previously the government provided $210,000 for the project and the city will contribute about $40,000 in addition. Thus the entire job of completing the work on the main auditorium exclusively of new seats will be $490,000.

"Action of federal authorities yesterday insures completion of the main auditorium work," White said. "We should be extremely proud and grateful for this additional allocation to Atlanta."

"It means that Atlanta will have one of the finest auditoriums of any city in the entire south, and will be able to provide adequate facilities equal to or better than any other city of our size."

RULE BY BAYONET IS HIT BY RUSSELL

TRION, Ga., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. said in a speech here today that he was fighting a battle against deception, deceit and rule by bayonet.

"And Georgia, on September 9, will be freed from the reign of the most ruthless and unscrupulous political machine that ever cursed any state," this he added, referring to the date of the democratic primary.

He accused the Governor of being "a traitor to the party which honored him with the highest state office in the gift of the people," and repeated his attack on Talmadge's use of the national guard.

"In only one thing has he been consistent in the past two years," the senator said, "and that is in his denunciation of the national democratic administration and his adherence to republican principles."

Russell charged that Talmadge "at one moment has been in favor of a third party, the next minute he turns about."

"He makes an utterance one day and the next day he declares the man who says he said it is a deliberate liar."

Referring to a speech Talmadge made at the tomb of Abraham Lincoln at Springfield, Ill., Russell said:

"He says you are doing the anomalous thing of running on the republican platform in a democratic primary. You are showing the same hatred for your state and the former Confederate states as is shown by the most ardent southern hater that is to be found on the American continent."

NEGRO CONVICTED IN CO-ED MURDER

Hallboy Will Pay Penalty for Cleverly Slaying in Lethal Gas Chamber.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Martin Moore, convicted negro slayer of Helen Cleveland, left Asheville in a bullet-proof motor car tonight for Raleigh, where he will be turned over to Warden H. H. Honeycutt, of Central state prison.

Moore was handcuffed and accompanied by deputy sheriffs.

Honeycutt is charged with carrying out the sentence of death by lethal gas imposed by Judge Don Phillips following Moore's conviction of first degree murder in the slaying of the pretty, blond New York girl here July 16.

The bullet-torn body of the co-ed was found in her room at a fashionable hotel here on July 16. Moore, a hallboy at the hotel, was charged with the murder when police produced a signed confession in which he purportedly admitted slaying the girl.

GOVERNOR OLSON, F. D. R. ALLY, DIES

Minnesota Executive Succumbs to Stomach Ills in Midst of Campaign.

ROCHESTER, Minn., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Floyd B. Olson, of Minnesota, the nation's only farmer-labor governor, tonight succumbed to a stomach ailment at 9:29 o'clock (Atlantic time), in the famous Mayo clinic. He was 44 years old.

Death came in the midst of his campaign for election to the United States senate.

With him at the time of death, were Mrs. Olson, his daughter, Patricia; Maurice Rose, the chief executive's personal aide; Mrs. Hunter Sheldon and Carl Hygaard, and three nurses.

Barred from the hospital, a crowd stood on the street outside the building, awaiting the sad tidings.

Abe Harris, political affiliate and long-time friend of the Governor, informed Marvin McIntyre, President Roosevelt's secretary of the death of the Governor, his staunch supporter, Wednesday.

The last words the Governor came to utter before losing consciousness at 7:30 p. m., were:

"This has got us licked. But don't worry or feel bad, because it must be for the best."

The seriousness of Olson's condition was not apparent even to members of his family when the Governor came to Rochester for the first time, December 20, 1935.

No Time for Health.

He had suffered with an ulcer of the stomach for some time and though urged by friends and associates to take time off from his duties as governor, and place himself under medical treatment, Olson never quite found time.

Last December, however, his condition grew worse and he consulted the Mayo clinic. An exploratory operation followed, growths were found on

LOSER IS LIKELY TO FORCE ACTION BY OTHER POWERS

Madrid's Promise To Make Proper Apologies to Nazis for Ship Search Lifts a Bit of Gloom From Neutrality Hopes.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The nearer either side in Spain comes to ultimate victory, the greater may be the danger of international complications, it was feared tonight in circles closely following the situation.

The losing side, it was declared in diplomatic circles, might no longer be interested in avoiding European entanglements, and indeed might even see its only source of salvation in bringing on intervention by European powers sympathetic to its political cause.

As the fascist-marchers battle the socialist-communists loyal government in Spain, the European support now would be:

For Madrid government—Socialist France, Soviet Russia.

For fascist rebels—Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany.

Neutral, politically—Great Britain.

Tonight—three weeks after France first breached her neutrality proposal, the fate of negotiations still hung in the balance.

France joined Great Britain in exerting pressure on Germany on whose acceptance or refusal the neutrality pact now depends.

The official German answer to the proposed pact remained still unsigned as another week-end held up the final negotiations.

Considerable relief was felt by the French over the Madrid government's promise to Great Britain that English ships would not be molested on the high seas. London had sent a sharp note to Madrid demanding this be made plain.

NO FURTHER WORD FROM ITALY ON PACT

ROME, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini today flew to the island of Elba as observers wondered whether 11 Duce planned to establish another sea plan base there.

This speculation was caused by Mussolini taking with him on the flight Achille Starace, secretary of the fascist party, and General Giuseppe Valle, undersecretary of the air ministry.

It was explained, however, that 11 Duce had flown to Elba merely to inspect some iron mines which he planned to develop.

Fascist political circles, in the absence of the premier, watched and waited to see what would be the reaction of the powers to Italy's contingent acceptance of the proposed neutrality pact in the Spanish civil war.

Italy said she would pledge herself not to ship arms to Spain if all other European powers would promise to do likewise.

Diplomatic observers particularly were interested in foreign reaction to Italian insistence that financial contributions and enrollment of volunteers for either Spanish cause be construed as violating neutrality.

The Italian reply to the French neutrality proposal reserved the right to make further comments on such

RIVERS URGES FIGHT FOR SOCIAL SECURITY

Gubernatorial Aspirant Is Pledged to Co-operate With New Deal.

CARROLLTON, Ga., Aug. 22.—Co-operation with the federal government in a program of health improvement to insure better conditions for all citizens was pledged here today by E. D. Rivers in his campaign for governor.

Rivers, speaker of the house of representatives, declared many lives and much preventable illness constituted the toll of the "do-nothing policy" of the present state administration. "I propose that the state shall go hand in hand with the federal government in establishing hospitals and other necessary facilities to insure an equal chance to all children, as well as to protect the health of all adults," he said.

Cost Paid In Suffering. "The social security bill provides aid for youngsters who hold the future of Georgia in their hands. Yet failure to profit by this measure has cost Georgia much money and much individual suffering.

"If you want to count the cost for youngsters, go over to the state hospital department and see how many wives of poor people go down into the shadows of death in childbirth without the proper medical care or sanitary attention.

"See for yourselves how this results in needless suffering and how many innocent little children are maimed and go through life with some physical defect that is a direct result of this neglect.

"All this can be changed by the benefits held out to Georgia by the federal government—benefits which the present state administration have seen fit to ignore. I propose to work hand in hand with the federal government to improve the health of our people.

"Wild animals were to invade Georgia every year and take the lives of thousands of our citizens we would have every policeman, every soldier, every able bodied man on our borders to protect us and our families.

Invasion by Disease. "And yet, as things are now, we allow our state to be invaded by all sorts of diseases that prey upon thousands, and many of them are preventable if we only take advantage of the facilities the federal government holds out to us.

"Why is it that the present state administration places the health of our people on the lowest rung of the ladder, below that of the cattle and hogs on our farms?

"I ask each of you how important your own health is to you. "If I am elected governor I will work wholeheartedly with this program to eliminate preventable diseases and to assure every citizen of Georgia a healthy place in which to live."

RIVERS UPHOLDS RIGHT OF COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

JONESBORO, Ga., Aug. 22.—Right of labor to organize and bargain collectively for their protection was upheld here today by E. D. Rivers, candidate for governor, in a speech before an enthusiastic crowd.

Rivers promised his full co-operation with the program of the federal government in its recognition of the rights of those who work to look after their own interests.

"The President and the democratic party in charge of the federal government have pointed the way that has been generally acceptable to the people of the nation," he said.

"By this plan those who work by the sweat of their brow for their bread have the right to organize and collectively bargain for their protection."

"I heartily endorse the program of the President and the federal government as it relates to organized labor. In event I am elected governor, I will co-operate fully with the federal government in their behalf."

Rivers' Growing Strength Shown In Poll of Editors Over Georgia

Citing editorial approval of his candidacy and calling attention to a poll conducted by weekly newspaper editors showing him as having more than a majority over his two opponents, headquarters for Speaker E. D. Rivers yesterday issued a statement predicting his overwhelming election on September 9.

The statement declared that the withdrawal of Judge W. W. Larsen, of Dublin, from the race materially aided the candidacy of Speaker Rivers.

The Rivers headquarters statement follows: "From every section of Georgia is flowing a constant stream of unmistakable evidence of rapid growth in the Rivers campaign for governor. I believe it only fair that the public know something of the volume of endorsements of Mr. Rivers' campaign."

Therefore, we list the following newspaper support: "In every stratum poll that has been taken over the state, E. D. Rivers, speaker of the house of representatives, is in the lead. His majority in every instance is overwhelming and these ballots convince him that he is opposed to the Talmadge alignment that he is the strongest of the candidates against that faction."—Fitzgerald Herald.

Unity Is Urged. "If you are opposed to the projection of the Talmadge regime into the future, it is time to forget personal preferences, so far as you are concerned, and center on the strongest candidate representing the opposition to Redwine. It has now become evident that his strength is increasing."—Monroe Advertiser.

"It won't be long now and there is no way to stop Rivers. He will be elected on September 9. Believe it or not, there will not be a run-over."—Lanier County News.

"Rivers' campaign conduct has added to our conviction that he is the best candidate for governor of Georgia. It is cheering to us that this is so, because, regardless of what anybody may say, Rivers is going to be the next governor of Georgia. We unhesitatingly predict his election on September 9. We go further and predict that it will not even be close."—Northside Press.

"Now that Larsen has withdrawn and Rivers seems to have developed the greatest popularity, we think it best to center on Rivers as the best candidate to defeat the Talmadge-picked candidate. Mr. Larsen is a fine, upright gentleman, and would make a good governor, but he realizes that at this time he did not have a chance of being elected, and rather than see the anti-Talmadge vote split so that a minority candidate might be elected, he withdrew from the race."

Ask Fortson Withdrawal. "We don't think Fortson will stand a chance either, so if he would come down it would leave a clear-cut fight on the Talmadge and anti-Talmadge forces."—Cochran Journal.

"The Times announced this week its choice of E. D. Rivers for governor. This choice has been made after mature deliberation of the many issues involved."—Lavonia Times.

"We believe that it would be for the best interest of our country and state by assisting in giving E. D. Rivers the county unit vote of Elbert. Believing this, we would be recreant to a sacred duty ourselves and our leaders if we failed to make this effort."—Elberton Star.

News Poll Result. "Many others which we are unable to quote in this statement have just as strongly enlisted in the Rivers fight during this week. The Georgia News Service poll, which is simply the opinion of all the editors of the state, is an unmistakable and very reliable indicator of politics as well as any other subject. Last week while Judge Larsen was a candidate, that poll was as follows: Rivers, 45 per cent; Redwine, 32 per cent; Fortson, 14 per cent. This week after the withdrawal of Judge Larsen this same poll shows the following: Rivers, 56 per cent; Redwine, 31 per cent; Fortson, 13 per cent."

"By a comparison of the above polls it will be found that in this week's poll Judge Fortson and Mr. Redwine lost 1 per cent each. In last week's poll Judge Larsen had 9 per cent, which added to the losses of Redwine and Fortson this week, make 11 per cent to be accounted for. The last week per cent being 45 per cent for Rivers, has increased this week's exactly 11 per cent. In other words, this week's poll points conclusively to the fact that Rivers has received the losses of Redwine and Fortson, as well as the entire Larsen vote."

Rivers Qualified. "This tremendous strength of Mr. Rivers is not an accident, nor a planned trick. It is simply reliable evidence of the fact that Mr. Rivers, on account of his loyalty to his party, his sympathy with the government of the people of the state, and his desire to make the state government an instrument of service for the people of the state, together with the fact that no persons in the state can honestly deny that Mr. Rivers has an understanding of the machinery of this state government unexcelled by any man in the state."

"This understanding is an important requisite for any occupant of the high office of governor, for there he is the captain of the ship of state. The people realize that their voyage is safe only when they choose a captain thoroughly familiar with that ship of state. The people of Georgia know that to make one the best candidate for governor it is necessary that such a one be best qualified to discharge the various duties of that office."

"Not the least important of his duties is the ability to work in harmony with the legislative and judicial branches of the state. Mr. Rivers' unimpeachable possession of this quality. We are sure that the thinking people of Georgia appreciate the high plane upon which Mr. Rivers has conducted his campaign. It is to the people a clear, honest and true explanation of the humane platform upon which his campaign stands."

"The people of Georgia are also proud of Mr. Rivers, because of his peculiar ability he has made the demand of Georgia democracy to fight and defeat the Talmadge alignment in its true name or in disguise."

"The headquarters wish to ask the thousands of people throughout the state who have written, wired us and telephoned us, sending messages of support and assurance of victory, to be patient and pardon us if their communications are not answered promptly, because it is utterly impossible for us to handle this tremendous amount of correspondence promptly."

Attacks of Rivers Flayed by Backers. "The Rivers headquarters statement follows: 'The chips have begun to move. At last the "nigger in the woodpile" has been discovered. The loyal democrats of Georgia now realize what is back of Fortson's and Mr. Redwine's candidacies for governor. The unholy alliance between William Randolph Hearst, anti-Roosevelt and pro-Lansing, anti-Fortson, Mr. Redwine and leading Georgia republicans has come out in the open. Mr. Hearst's paper admits that it sent one of its staff representatives to Washington to dig up the dirt on Fortson and turned them over to Judge Fortson. The paper does not say whether it was in collusion with Mr. Fortson or not, but it does say how much money was paid to secure these affidavits or whether the republicans' affidavits were "contributed" free of charge. It does say that this "Republican scheme will not work. Our only surprise is that a man of the generally accepted intelligence of Judge Fortson should be permitted himself to become a tool in this effort to befoul the nest of his own party. The reaction has been against him and in favor of Mr. Rivers."

"Headquarters are today in receipt of telegrams from all parts of the state commending the statement of Mr. Rivers published yesterday in Georgia papers. He very properly said that the republicans' affidavits were conclusive evidence of the Talmadge-Fortson, Hearst and the republican party."

Hearst Poll. "The Hearst poll that is being conducted by the Atlanta Georgian is some more dirty work of the same kind. Its sole purpose is to promote the cause of Talmadge and Redwine and to do all within its power to cause a split in the ranks of the loyal democrats of Georgia."

"If Judge Fortson wishes to consort with the republican leaders and avow republicanism that is his privilege. As to Mr. Rivers, he will continue to wage his campaign against Talmadgism, Hearstism and republicanism and appear to a Georgia electorate to follow his program of co-operation with President Franklin Roosevelt and the national democratic party."

"As one Georgia democrat expresses himself: 'If I were Judge Fortson, I would hide my face in my hands and have my driver put my car in gear and back back to Athens, go in my back door and stay out of the public eye.'

"Speaker Rivers at the outset of this campaign stated that the issue in the governor's race was between him and the republican party in Georgia. The republicans have now come out in the open and showed their hand and on Monday night at 9:30 over radio station WSB, Mr. Rivers will speak to the people of Georgia of the collusive scheme of the republican party and the Hearst newspaper to elect a governor of Georgia."

Fortson Statement. "The Fortson statement attacking Mr. Mitchell and taking up other phases of the controversy follows: 'Mr. Rivers slips again. So desperate is he, so anxious to "dismiss" the charges against him for offering to sell out to the republicans in 1932 that he picks the worst man to defend him and assail the reputation of the three Waycross citizens whose affidavits have caused Mr. Rivers to make a wild dash for Texas, or somewhere, to get away from it all.'

"In today's Constitution, Mr. J. D. Mitchell, of Ware county, one of the most honest men in Georgia, has come forth in a long statement blaming Hearst, the republicans and everybody but the King of Sheikdom for the election of the Talmadge-Fortson administration. Mr. Mitchell tries to discount the charges because they are made by error statements of republicans. Well, who else could have made them? Mr. Rivers did not hold his historic conference with democrats, nor did he offer to sell out to the democrats. He made his offer to republicans and it was with the republicans that he met and discussed his proposal. But even they would not take him."

"Now who is Mr. Mitchell, who comes to the rescue of Mr. Rivers so gallantly and with so many words. Perhaps it might be better to let Mr. Rivers introduce Mr. Mitchell. And we shall proceed to do so."

"In the Ed Rivers Weekly, published at Homerville, Ga., April 23, 1932, Mr. Rivers himself described Mr. Mitchell, the present Rivers defender, as one of the conspirators in the Ware county election fraud. The latter word is taken from front-page headlines in the Ed Rivers Weekly, to-wit: "Fraud, Money Charges in Ware County Election Fraud." The Ed Rivers Weekly prints a copy of the suit in full. Mr. Rivers thought so much of the charges that he brought forward on it, named Mr. Mitchell as one of the conspirators and acted as attorney for the petitioners.

"What are the charges? We quote from the Ed Rivers Weekly, direct from the petition filed by Ed Rivers, attorney, and in paragraph four of which he charged that Mr. Mitchell, along with other defendants, 'conspired to control the offices of said (Ware) county and have constituted themselves a political machine' whereby those candidates favored by said defendants constituting said 'machine' are given an unconscionable advantage in primaries and elections and their domination and election accomplished by various and sundry frauds, illegalities, and irregularities; after being nominated and elected in this manner, they dictate the bidding of the 'machine' and administer their offices for the furtherance of the personal and political fortunes of said 'machine' and its joint conspirators."

"In paragraph five of Mr. Rivers' petition he charged Mr. Mitchell with the following: 'Not requiring and filing voters' lists as prescribed by law. Not requiring a strict enforcement of the law and the rules of the party governing candidates and primaries so that the rules flagrantly permitted to be violated being: Rules No. 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 2 MINERS RECOVERING FROM 72-HOUR ORDEAL

One Still in Danger; Other Shudders 'I'd Like to Forget It'

MOBERLY, Mo., Aug. 22.—(UP) Two men who survived 72 hours imprisonment in a narrow, gas-polluted chamber 110 feet below ground in a coal mine were recovering tonight and trying to forget the ordeal.

Meanwhile, funeral plans were made for their two companions.

J. W. McCann, 50-year-old miner who said he was "too tough to die," joked about his experience after he was brought from the mine by rescuers late yesterday, but said he wanted to forget his experience.

"I've been around a lot and had experiences in this and other countries which weren't so pleasant," he said. "But this one was the worst. I suppose I can't, but I'd like to forget it."

Demmer Sexton, 37-year-old partner owner of the Eary mine in which he and the other three were trapped Tuesday when a tangle of fire caused timber and debris to block the main shaft, had a harder fight of it than McCann.

Sexton in Danger.

Unconscious when rescued, Sexton was revived with difficulty and, physicians said, is still in danger of pneumonia. Had rescue workers, near exhaustion after days of fighting through poisonous mine gases, fire and debris, reached him 30 minutes later, doctors said, Sexton would have been dead.

When the rescuers made their break through yesterday, Ed Stoner Jr., 26, whose father, with Sexton, owned the mine, and George T. Dameron, 27-year-old negro mule driver, were dead.

"Stoner's heart stopped two hours after the cave-in," McCann reported. "The gas got him. Dameron collapsed and died two hours later."

Still suffering from the shock of the tragedy were Stoner's survivors, his widow and their six-year-old daughter, his parents, six sisters and two brothers.

Bride Mourns.

Dameron was mourned by his bride of a week.

Funeral services for the victims were to be held tomorrow, with a coroner's inquest into their deaths to follow Monday.

Arnold Griffith, state mine inspector who directed the rescue, announced an investigation, conducted by his assistant, Evan Jones, would start immediately.

Officials said that the previous owners of the mine had been ordered to clear the airshaft of gas, debris and water, and install steps in the main shaft as an emergency means of egress.

The mine changed owners, the state was not notified, and the ordered improvements were not carried out.

The success of California's newest industry of canned wine seemed assured when a New Orleans customer placed an order locally for 3,000 cases of canned sweet wine.

Snatched From Fast Approaching Death in Dank, Poison-Filled Mine

Breaking through the underground prison of four miners trapped three days in the fire-wrecked main shaft of the old Eary mine near Moberly, Mo., rescuers Friday brought out two of the men alive. The survivors are J. W. McCann and Demmer Sexton. The other two

SENATORIAL ELECTION BEING OVERSHADOWED

go to Redwine. Therefore, they say that if any harm is done Rivers, which they contend is not the case, Redwine will benefit.

The Rivers people, however, are of the belief that Fortson's charges definitely make Fortson an anti-Rivers instead of an anti-Redwine candidate and refer to Fortson's Athens supporters, who are backing Talmadge in the senate race, as proof of their claim that Fortson is friendlier to the anti-Roosevelt group than he is to the anti-Talmadge group. The Rivers campaign management holds that as a result of his use of affidavits furnished by republicans, the truth of which Rivers absolutely denies, the governor's race has reached a stage where it is Rivers vs. Redwine and Fortson instead of it being Redwine vs. Rivers and Fortson.

Redwine supporters are openly gleeful of the judge's attacks on Rivers, figuring that any scrap between the two candidates who are supposed to be opposed to their candidate is certain to inure to Redwine's benefit.

In the Fortson camp it is hard to say what the reaction is. They are said to feel that they have cut Rivers' lead down some, regardless of whether their action is helpful to their own candidate or to Redwine, Philip Welner and others now contending that the Welner movement, which is sponsoring Fortson, was not designed to hurt any particular group but all political groups. However, it is known that those followers of Fortson, interested in Fortson and none other, feel that the charges against Rivers have turned the light of publicity on the fact that while the Fortson candidacy has been carried on with the belief that it was opposed to Talmadge, sitting in the Fortson inner circle are a group of men who are among Talmadge's strongest supporters against Russell.

Because of the involved nature of the charges, furnished a democrat for use against another democrat, the Rivers' flat denial and statements from democrats in Ware county where the affidavits were produced, it will be several days, maybe a week or more before it can be learned definitely just who has been aided, just who has been hurt and how much.

The publication of the Fortson charges did not hinder the leading followers of Judge W. W. Larsen, who retired early in the week, from announcing their support of Rivers.

Judge W. C. Brinson, of Wrightsville, and Spencer Powell, of Sylva, the Larsen managers, immediately took up the Rivers cause and responded to W. H. Lovett, of Dublin, considered by many as responsible for Larsen's original entry in the governor's race, with a conspicuous member of several Rivers audience audiences during the week and yesterday Colonel A. S. Bradley, of Swainsboro, recognized as the leader of the Larsen forces in the first congressional district, announced his full and complete support of Rivers.

Thus far no Larsen leader has publicly announced his support of either Redwine or Fortson. The Rivers people, thereby, claim that they will get the full force of the Larsen following.

Hearst's Atlanta Georgian, which is openly opposing Roosevelt and supporting Landon, drew that paper into the controversy.

Georgian's Late Assertion.

From Waycross came a statement by Joseph D. Mitchell, a Rivers leader, that the affidavits used by Fortson had been obtained by a Georgian reporter.

The Georgian immediately countered with the assertion that the reporter had been sent to Waycross to get the news. However, the fact that the affidavits were obtained by a prominent figure in the Welner movement, which is sponsoring Fortson, was not designed to hurt any particular group but all political groups. Watched by Nation.

"This senatorial race in Georgia is being watched by the entire nation. Though we know it will turn largely on local issues, the balance of the country will interpret it as an expression of the people of Georgia on national issues. President Roosevelt has shown that he is sincerely trying to do something to aid the average man in this country. When he was inaugurated on March 4, 1933, he stated candidly that he would doubtless make some mistakes. He has made some mistakes. More destructive criticism is always harmful. Constructive criticism is helpful and the President has consistently invited it. His republican critics have made no constructive suggestions. A study of Governor Landon's record will show that he has approved practically everything the Roosevelt administration has done, and his only suggestion is that the republicans ought to have been put on the pay roll and allowed to do it. I do not suppose any of us have agreed with everything done by the present administration. We know, however, that tremendous advances have been made toward the restoration of prosperity. The farmer, the laborer and the businessman have thrown off the attitude of despair, and are now looking toward the future with that same courage which people, so confidently believe that Franklin D. Roosevelt will be in the White House for another four years, and that he will have a democratic senate and house of representatives to support him.

"Senator Russell is leading the fight of the real democrats of Georgia. If you are a democrat—if you want to uphold President Roosevelt, I urge you to support Russell for the senate."

set for the week is scheduled for 10:45 o'clock Friday morning at Colquitt where the voters of six counties will gather to hear him.

Intensive speaking schedules have been announced by the candidates in the governor's race.

Speaker Rivers opens his activities tomorrow morning with an address at Cedarstown. From there he will go to LaFayette for a speech tomorrow afternoon.

Following the LaFayette speech the Lakeland candidate will return to Atlanta for his regular Monday night meeting of his supporters on the roof of the Ansley hotel. The women members of his organization will be in charge of this event. Mrs. Virginia Polhill Price, of Louisville, democratic national committeewoman, will preside and the group participating will include Mrs. John A. Rollins, of Waycross, president of the Georgia Affiliated Women's Democratic Club, and Mrs. Ed. Moffitt, of Rome.

Speaking over the radio and on the same program with Mr. Rivers will be Representative Braswell Deen, of Atlanta, congressman from the eighth district, who ran and was elected with Rivers' support in 1932, the year Fortson claims the speaker attempted to sell out to the republicans.

The radio program will begin at 9:15 o'clock, eastern standard time.

The speaker's Georgia engagements for the balance of the week follow: Tuesday—Columbus, 12 noon; Cleveland, 3 p. m.; Decatur, 8:30 p. m.; Friday—Colquitt, 10 a. m., where he shares the program with Senator Russell; Mableton, 8:30 p. m.; Saturday—Lawrenceville, 3 p. m.; Buford, 5 p. m.; Conyers, 8:30 p. m.; Redwine's schedule follows: Monday, Cedarstown, 10 a. m.; Carrollton, 3 p. m.; Marietta, 8 p. m.; Tuesday, Perry, 10 a. m.; Eastman, 3 p. m.; Brunswick, 8 p. m.; Wednesday, Cochran, 10 a. m.; Griffin, 3 p. m.; Douglasville, 8 p. m.; Thursday, Royston, 11 a. m.; Clarksville, 3 p. m.; Clayton, 8 p. m.; Friday, Hiram, 11 a. m.; Blinnville, 8 p. m.; Blue Ridge, 8 p. m.; Saturday, Gainesville, 11 a. m.; Cumming, 2 p. m.; Lawrenceville, 4 p. m.

Fortson's schedule for the week follows: Monday, Fort Valley (hour to be announced later); Tuesday, Tallahassee, 10:30 a. m.; Wednesday, Griffin, 10:30 a. m.; Thursday, Waynesboro (hour to be announced later); Friday, Augusta, 8:15 p. m.; Saturday, Swainsboro, mid-afternoon.

TRION, Ga., Aug. 22.—Asserting that Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. is leading the fight for the real democrats of Georgia, G. Ed Maddox, of Rome, in state affairs, Governor Talmadge has greatly abused the powers conferred upon the governor by the constitution and laws of this state, and he has added unwarranted personal attacks upon President Roosevelt and refuses to accept the platform adopted by the national democratic convention. As a lifelong democrat, I cannot support him.

To the other candidate, Senator Russell, I am under no personal or political obligation whatever. As a matter of fact, in 1932 I supported his opponent and did everything I possibly could to beat him. His four years of service in the senate have given him valuable experience and command of the issues which place him in a position to be helpful to the people of Georgia. He has supported the administration of President Roosevelt and has pledged himself to do so in the future. I will, therefore, support him to defeat President Roosevelt at any cost, and their main reason for opposing him is that he is a fair share of the benefits of progressive democratic legislation and of a party given to the rest of the country.

Russell said "My opponent has not hesitated to make statements which he knew were false. Among these I might mention the statement that he made that I voted against the soldiers' bonus."

The senator came to this north Georgia cotton textile center from Eatonton, where he addressed a rally of six middle Georgia counties yesterday. Trion is near the Tennessee state line.

Cites Own Record.

He told his audience of his own activities in Washington during the past four years and said his record entitled him to an endorsement term.

"I cannot believe you will give your votes and support to a man whose purpose is to carry out a threat that Roosevelt and communism would be thrown out of the White House after the November election," Russell said.

"I appeal to you to rally the banner of the democratic party and defeat those who are planning the destruction of our party while marching under the democratic flag for the purpose of getting their names on the ticket in a democratic primary."

"They are using every energy to place in office a president of a type bitterly opposed to any laws which look to the betterment of our section of this nation."

INTERNATIONAL DANGER IS GROWING IN SPAIN

MADRID, Aug. 22.—(P)—The Spanish government, through its minister of state, Augusto Barcia, tonight promised speedy, pacific settlement of the "Kamenar incident," stumbling block to Nazi Germany's entrance into a unified European neutrality policy in the Spanish civil war.

The reported search of the German vessel Kamenar by the new Spanish government warship evoked two official protests from the German government and prompted the commander of seven German warships driving toward Spain to radio the Madrid government he would "meet force with force" if there were a repetition of incidents similar to the Kamenar affair.

Apology Is Sought.

"This annoying incident," Barcia said tonight, "would be cleared up quickly (as France and England have asked)."

The Spanish government, Barcia said, was studying the German notes "with all the care required by the importance of their demands."

The government of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler in the notes demanded apologies for the Kamenar incident and reassurances from the Madrid government that no similar affair would be permitted to occur in the future.

Although there was nothing said officially in Madrid concerning the additional demand for the return of a sequestered German airplane, it was learned authoritatively in London that the British government brought strong pressure to bear on Madrid to speed the amicable settlement of this additional Nazi demand.

Italy Already in Fold.

Although the German government has said nothing officially concerning its views on the proposed French neutrality pact, it was indicated that if the Kamenar and airplane "affairs" to the German people were solved with apologies, Germany would be brought into the fold of European neutrality.

French Mussolini of Italy already has accepted the pact—with reservations. He would declare an embargo on arms shipments to Spain he said if the European powers would promise to do likewise.

Great Britain was the first nation to declare an absolute arms embargo.

London Is Satisfied.

The United States today reaffirmed its policy of a "moral" embargo on arms shipments to the Spanish belligerents.

Relations of the Madrid government with other European powers appeared to be considerably more in accord tonight with the assurance of the socialists that British vessels would not be molested on the high seas.

Great Britain sent a sharp note to Madrid Thursday that her war vessels would no longer search for British merchantmen by either of the Spanish belligerents. Today's assurances from the Madrid government that this would not be done were met with considerable satisfaction in London.

BRITISH OFFICIALS SEE RIFT IN CLOUDS

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(P)—British officials breathed more easily tonight with word that the Madrid

Spanish government was speeding settlement of the "Kamenar incident," and that British ships would not be molested on the high seas by Spanish vessels.

The position of the British government on the blockade inside Spanish territorial waters was still under discussion, but satisfaction was expressed over the Madrid government's assurance that it did not propose to exercise its asserted right to search British vessels suspected of carrying arms to the Spanish belligerents.

The British government meanwhile made urgent representations to the governments at Madrid and Berlin to settle the protested "Kamenar" and airplane incidents to pave the way for German alignment with the proposed European neutrality pact in the Spanish civil war.

British official circles, striving to shape a united European neutrality pact, took new hope from Italy's promise to place an embargo on arms shipments to Spain if other European powers would do likewise.

England, it was pointed out, was the first European power to announce an absolute arms embargo.

EDUCATION TO BE USED TO KEEP U. S. FROM WAR

By ROBERT C. MONTE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(UP) The Roosevelt administration has decided, United Press learned tonight, that it will intensify its educational campaign to keep the United States clear of any European war until congress meets to draft new and stronger neutrality legislation.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull believe that the educational campaign, which has been under way intermittently since outbreak of the Italo-Ethiopian war last year, has shown sufficient results that its intensification can now be relied upon to circumvent the major problems which otherwise might drag this country into the threatening conflict.

The functions center to be directed jointly from the White House and the State Department, with President Roosevelt playing the lead and the State Department assisting in with closely co-ordinated assistance.

Instances of this teamwork were shown in two successive presidential press conferences when Mr. Roosevelt dropped hints that pressure brought to bear upon State Department officials to make probable revelations which this government had taken to preserve American neutrality in Spain's civil war.

FIVE SPANISH BISHOPS REVEALED

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 22.—(UP) Vatican officials said tonight that Spanish refugees now harbored at the Spanish College in Rome, informed them that five Spanish bishops had been killed, one of them allegedly burned alive.

The bishops, according to the refugees, were from the cities of Jaen, Lerida, Segovia, Sigüenza and Barbastro.

The bishop of Barbastro, allegedly shot by communists, conveyed his pastoral cross to a woman with instructions to forward it to the pope. The bishop of Sigüenza, according to the refugees, was burned alive.

Bishop Juan Perello, of the province of Tarragona, arrived in Rome tonight. He had fled from France to Spain, wearing civilian clothes.

There was considerable anxiety over the whereabouts of the bishop of Barcelona. It was learned that the bishops of Madrid and Toledo were safe, the former having been on vacation in the north when the revolt broke out and the latter visiting at another bishopric.

SEEK LOYAL CREW FOR MEXICAN SHIP

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Aug. 22.—(UP)—The Spanish steamer Magallanes, loaded with several tons of war material for the leftist government of Spain, today awaited the signing of a 100 per cent loyal crew to begin its homeward journey.

The vessel was expected to take a direct course to Spain and attempt to land its cargo of rifles, ammunition and hand grenades at Barcelona or Valencia. Some observers believed it never would reach its destination but would be captured by rebel warships in Spanish waters or sunk by insurgent airplanes.

It was learned reliably that Don Emilio Zapico, Spanish consular general in Mexico City, who came to Vera Cruz to handle the shipment for his government, was seeking a crew in which he could repose full confidence before permitting the Magallanes to leave this port. Although the regular crew of the vessel was almost entirely loyal, there were some rebel sympathizers aboard. Zapico planned to replace them with loyal sailors.

Zapico's search was started after an alteration aboard in which he was reported to have struck the wireless operator when the latter and other members of the crew refused to recognize the consular general's authority. The radioman reportedly "jumped" the ship. The rest of the crew cheered Zapico and pledged their loyalty to the government.

Two days ago rival factions battled aboard the Magallanes and it was reported some of the sailors were wounded.

REDS CLAIM PROGRESS IN WEDGE MOVEMENT

MADRID, Aug. 22.—(P)—The government declared tonight its troops were making steady progress in a campaign to take the southern city of Cordoba and cut a path through the rebel lines to the Portuguese frontier.

Local planes, the government said, dropped 50 bombs in the heart of Cordoba.

Reports from other sectors, the administration asserted, were "entirely satisfactory," but there was comparatively little action.

REGENT OF HUNGARY VISITS ADOLF HITLER

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—(UP)—Admiral Nicholas de Horthy, Hungary's Iron-blooded regent, paid a "private visit" to Adolf Hitler at the latter's Bavarian retreat, Berchtesgaden, it was announced tonight in an official communique. Significance of the visit was not explained.

2-WEEK ENCAMPMENT ENDED BY GUARDSMEN

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 22.—(P)—The 122nd Infantry, Georgia National Guard, ended a two-week encampment at Camp Foster today and most of the 900 members started home.

Most of the final detachment is scheduled for Monday.

Colonel T. L. Alexander, of Atlanta, commanded the camp.

Valencia. Some observers believed it never would reach its destination but would be captured by rebel warships in Spanish waters or sunk by insurgent airplanes.

TECHWOOD CEREMONY IS ANNOUNCED BY KEY

Mayor Praises Work of Government in Slum Clearance Here.

Declaring that completion of Techwood homes, government-built low-cost housing project, "has eliminated from this city 11 blocks of slum areas whose passing no one regrets," Mayor Key yesterday issued a proclamation designating Tuesday, September 1, as Techwood Day and announced presentation of a special program, at which Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, will act as master of ceremonies.

Built at a cost of $3,105,000, the homes were erected by the PWA housing division with PWA labor and funds. It is the first of such slum-clearance projects to be completed in the United States. Tenants found acceptable by the Techwood homes renting office have been moving in since August 15, though the official opening will not take place until September 1.

Said the mayor in his proclamation: "This project has opened an opportunity for many of our people to lead happier and more useful lives. It is universally accepted that good homes are the backbone of a strong citizenry."

"In the development of this commendable enterprise the city of Atlanta is leading our nation in this new field of social justice for our citizens, and it is fitting and proper that the opening of this great progressive development should be commemorated by our city in a manner suitable to a great occasion."

Government intentions are that the low-cost housing projects meet small income pocket books. Rentals run between $16.40 for three-room apartments to $27.85 for six rooms. Electric lights, cooking power, ice box power, heat and hot water are furnished and each apartment unit has completely equipped laundry facilities in the basement.

Program Speakers.
Speaking on the program especially arranged for the event will be: Mayor Key, Senator Walter F. George, Congressman Robert Ramspeck and Colonel Horatio B. Hackett, assistant PWA administrator. Other distinguished guests expected to appear are: Mrs. George Ripley, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. W. F. Melton, president of the Atlanta Woman's Club; Dick Hudson, president of the Atlanta Building Trades Council; General George Van Horn Moseley, commandant of the fourth corps area; D. A. Calhoun, district manager, and C. F. Palmer, chairman of the Techwood executive committee.

Feature of the program will be the presentation of a rosebush from the Hyde Park (N. Y.) home of President Roosevelt to Atlanta Girl Scouts. The rosebush will be presented as a gift from Mrs. Roosevelt.

KNOCKED OFF CAR. SWITCHMAN HURT

A. A. Barfield Hit by Piece of Concrete, Suffers Fractured Skull.

A. A. Barfield, veteran switchman for the Central of Georgia railroad, suffered a fractured skull early Saturday when he was knocked from the top of a car at Terminal station by a piece of falling concrete.

Physicians at Crawford W. Long hospital, where Mr. Barfield was admitted, said they planned to perform an operation and that a blood transfusion might be necessary.

Mrs. Barfield, switchboard operator at Grady hospital for many years, said her husband was struck by a piece of concrete which had been removed from an overhead structure. He was saved from falling beneath the train by the force of the concrete, which knocked him outside the tracks, investigators said.

Mr. Barfield is 35 years old and lives at 144 Pine street, N. E.

Divine Would Prefer To 'Skip' This One.

"Yes, they tell me it's my birthday, but I don't remember when I was born."

With these characteristically humorous words, Bishop Warren A. Candler last night referred to the anniversary which today marks his birth 79 years ago near Villa Rica.

Asked how he planned to celebrate the day, Bishop Candler said: "I'm just going to go along as usual. I'm just an old country preacher, you know, trying to live as quietly and as best he can."

"I've kind of decided to skip this birthday, for I've found out that every time I have a birthday, I get a year older."

"The birthday, however, will not be 'skipped' by his thousands of friends. Scores of congratulatory messages were received by the bishop yesterday from friends all over the world."

The venerable clergyman, educator and scholar will read the messages today, but otherwise, he said, the day will pass just like any other Sabbath.

This show will be the largest pigeon show ever held, and all entries are to be sent to Henry Franks Jr., 7014 Sherman street, Houston, Texas, Collins announced.

Airman's Flying Skill Averts Possible Tragedy

Skilful flying and cool judgment saved Pat Turner, Atlanta airman, from probable death yesterday morning when the gasoline cleaner on his plane clogged and he was forced to land in a cornfield on Brown Mill road, airport attaches reported.

When engine trouble developed while he was flying over the federal prison, Turner maneuvered his plane toward a cornfield, which formerly was a private airport. Residents of that section, seeing the plane disappear behind a clump of trees, ran to the cornfield fearing the plane had crashed and the pilot was killed.

Although the field was plowed and full of cornstalks, the landing was so neatly executed that neither the flyer nor his plane was injured. After adjustment of the engine, Turner took off once more and returned to the municipal airport.

DEATH OF PLOTTERS DEMANDED BY SOVIETS

Government Asks That Terrorists Face Firing Squad; Await Judges' Verdict.

MOSCOW, Aug. 20.—(AP)—The soviet government demanded firing squads for all the defendants and closed its case tonight against 16 men charged with plotting to overthrow the government and assassinate Dictator Josef Stalin.

Prosecutor Andrey J. Vishinsky delivered a castigation of each prisoner, limited only by his vocabulary, and to escape further tongue-lashing, the defendants unanimously waived the first of two final court appearances still to be granted them under the law.

This procedure automatically robs the state of rebuttal and gives the prisoners the last word in the fantastic case, during which they confessed their plot to substitute a fascist reign of terror for the soviet regime in order to restore to power the exiled Leon Trotsky whom the state charged instigated the plot.

The defendants include Gregory S. Zinovieff and Leo Kamenef, once co-rulers of Russia with Stalin—the men whom they are now charged with plotting to kill.

Prisoners Dishevelled.
Counsel for the prisoners began final arguments just before sundown.

Their former calm destroyed by the prosecutors' casting attack on them, the prisoners appeared a dishevelled lot when they were ushered back into the prisoners' box—each between two bayoneted guards—for the night session.

The case—one of the strangest in all the history of the soviet union—likely will be concluded Sunday with the verdict of the three judges expected to be delivered shortly.

When the actual executions demanded by Vishinsky would take place was problematical inasmuch as some witnesses may be needed for subsequent trials, at least two of which have already been assured.

"Murder was the sole plank in their political platform," Vishinsky declared bitterly in his four-hour argument during which he omitted few epithets in his characterizations of the defendants.

"Mad Dogs—Must Be Shot."
"They planned to walk to power over the corpses of the leaders of this country," he said. "They are mad dogs and must be shot—everyone of them!"

Vishinsky's exhortation, coupled with his demand for firing squads, left little likelihood the accused conspirators would be spared.

If they are shot it will mark a break with the bolshevik past, for never before has the "old guard" of bolshevism been faced with a firing squad.

Many died, but in action or in bed. Hereafter, unmanageable dissidents like Trotsky were banished.

The execution of such men as Zinovieff and Kamenef, charged with being leaders in the alleged conspiracy, would be a having break with precedent for even to the present day the soviet government apparently is solidified by economic and political successes.

Despite all the prosecutor called them—and admitted a limited vocabulary forced him to halt—these old leaders and others among the prisoners still have followers.

One of the defendants, S. Mirachkovsky, collapsed on the witness stand and was removed from the courtroom by guards after he broke down sobbing in a 15-minute recital that apparently moved even the stern-faced judges.

"These men are a whole gang of murderers," Vishinsky summed up, "but they hadn't even the ethics of the ordinary criminal. Their plan, a diabolical plot, included the destruction of all traces of their crime in mass murder of the actual assassins."

FLOODS, LANDSLIDES HALT 500 U.S. TOURISTS

Americans Marooned in Mexico Along International Highway.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 22.—(UP)—Five hundred Americans are marooned at Villa Juarez, Nuevo Leon state, with food supplies becoming scarce, as result of floods and landslides along the Pan-American highway, it was reported today.

An American named Ross telegraphed from the Elmanito hotel in Villa Juarez to report the plight of the tourists. The Federal Department of Communications and the Mexican Automobile Association adopted utmost measures of aid.

Scores of United States and Canadian cars were detained at various parts of the recently inaugurated highway connecting Mexico City with the American border. One bridge was reported washed out and it was expected the waters would not recede for at least two days and that traffic would not be resumed until Tuesday.

Several motorists who planned to return today have decided to remain here for the present. The Department of Communications announced that 48 miles of the road are unfit for travel.

The town of Limon was under water and telegraph and telephone lines were down. Preliminary estimates of casualties said at least two persons were drowned.

New Deal Saved U.S. From Revolt, Merchant Says, Indorsing F. D. R.

75-Year-Old Boston Economist, Edward A. Filene, Urges Re-election of Roosevelt; Even Mistakes Seem Worthwhile, He Says.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—(UP)—In a strongly worded defense of the present administration, Edward A. Filene, 75-year-old internationally known Boston merchant, author, philanthropist and economist, asserted "the New Deal has saved America from revolution" and urged re-election of President Roosevelt.

"Some call the New Deal reckless experimentation," Filene said, "but the most reckless experiment in which America could now engage would be to stop Roosevelt."

Admitting that Mr. Roosevelt "has made mistakes," the gray-haired pioneer in modern and efficient retail distribution said the President "acted when it was necessary to act; and failure to act at such moments is a worse mistake than mistakes made in action."

Mistakes Worth While.
"If he (Roosevelt) hadn't dared to risk making mistakes," Filene continued, "he could not have achieved what he has achieved, in not only bringing about recovery but in protecting America from the chaos which we now behold in Europe, where the leaders have persisted in their old deal thinking. . . . No mistakes and no successes is a bad record. And the successes of this administration are so extraordinary that even its mistakes seem to be worth while."

An ardent defender of New Deal policies, Filene chided businessmen who "are now out to stop Roosevelt at any cost."

"No clear thinking businessman would discharge an executive under whom the business had climbed from failure to success, and hire some unknown who promised to reduce total expenditures without reducing any one expenditure."

Last May Filene resigned from the United States Chamber of Commerce, of which he was one of the organizers at the time he charged the organization was a "poison center of reaction," and had become a tool of "special interests," refusing to work out an intelligent solution to business problems.

served, resulted "because the development of marvelously productive machinery made a New Deal necessary there as here, but the lords of the machine in Europe could not see this necessity, and persisted in viewing their problem from the standpoint of maintaining their traditional privileges."

Mass production machinery placed power in the hands of the masses, Filene asserted, and "it inevitably gave them a growing consciousness of power."

"Instead of co-operating with the masses, however, in achieving a higher standard of living, European capitalists fought their demands and thus not only stirred the masses to revolution but deprived themselves of the greatly increased markets which these new and enormously productive machines had to have, if they were to be operated profitably."

The inevitable result, he added, has been that markets have shrunk, unemployment spread "and now peace-loving nations are being swept into war and liberty-loving people are finding themselves under the iron heel of military dictatorship."

Donoges Motor Company
Tonkawa, Oklahoma

Red Rock, Oklahoma
June 19, 1936

Gentlemen:

I have just returned from a two weeks' trip in which I covered more than 4800 miles and I am so well pleased with the performance and economy of my new Ford V-8 that I want to tell you about it.

Our car, a Fordor Sedan with Trunk, accommodated seven of us on this trip which took us through the mountains of Colorado, Wyoming and into Washington State. On the return trip there were nine of us and we came back through Salt Lake City and Denver.

On this trip we passed over six of the Rocky Mountain Passes and we marveled at the ease at which the car took these steep grades and the rare intervals at which we bought gasoline, for upon our return, by dividing the total miles traveled by the total number of gallons of gasoline bought, we found that we had averaged over 18 miles to the gallon for the entire trip which I think is unusually good considering the load we carried and the roads covered.

The car has given us perfect performance and I am well pleased and proud of my new car.

Yours very truly,

A. R. Stout

DROUTH IS WEAKENED BY FARM BELT RAINS

Widespread Showers Aid
Some Sections, of Little Benefit to Others.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Drenching rain weakened the drouth's grip on much of the farm belt today.

As much as 2 to 3 inches of water refreshed parts of North Dakota and Minnesota—sun blackened spots in the drouth region—and H. K. Wilson, Minnesota agronomist, said the end of the long arid period was apparent.

Wilson said the rain would permit fall plowing which otherwise would have been impossible in the two states, would prepare the earth for sowing of winter grain and bring pastures back to life.

Although agreeing pastures would be improved, A. W. Cook, weather forecaster in Chicago, saw "little benefit" in other respects from the widespread showers.

In North Dakota, grain men predicted fair crops in some parts of the state despite the summer-long parching. Jamestown reported 1.46 inches of water.

General showers in South Dakota brought August moisture there to 1.5 inches compared to 1 of an inch in July. Kansas was cooled by rain which reached 1.1 inches at Smith Center, in the north central part of the state. Nebraska had a maximum of 1.3 inches at Red Cloud and temperatures fell sharply.

Iowa, Oklahoma and Texas shared the benefits of the rainfall. Missouri,

KNOCK-KNOCKS EDITOR IS REPORTED MISSING

But perhaps he would get soft-hearted and give it to the postman, because, Heaven knows, the poor fellow needs it.

Reason for "Unlamented."

His Bacchus bent and his Browers wrinkled. But we were talking about music, so-called, and that leads us to Pauline Coker, of Lindale, Ga., who says:

"Who's there?"

"Lilac."

"Lilac who?"

Pauline says if you don't like that one you can Pauline your neck.

And Still They Come.

As long as we are on the musical theme (and we are), let's see you play these over on your inoleum: Onion nenth the Harlem moon. Wendy moon comes over the mountain.

Irma old cow hand. Phil like a feather in a breeze. Lazy true what they say about Dixie?

Sylvia threads among the gold. Raymond the roof. Liza Muggin.

Turban stripes forever. Sonia shanty in old shanty town. Apathy makes the heart grow fonder.

Isthmus be love. Ronny-roo with a dream. Quich! That was pretty painful, but at least it will stop a lot of knock-knocks from sending those in again.

Rules of Dementia. Let's run over the rules which guide this dementia and then we'll divulge the name of the winner of that other dollar. We just love to be kept guessing, don't you?

Three prizes of $1 each are awarded each day to the three knock-knocks which the judges consider the "tops" for the day. A grand prize of $5 will be awarded for the best knock-knock of the week. The decision of the judges will be final. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in case of ties.

Send in as many knock-knocks each day as you wish. And if you want to make your rapidly expiring knock-knock editor feel good, put them on post cards. Howard you like to open a couple of thousand letters every day?

Now for the winner of that third dollar for the day. Dollar-snatcher No. 3 is someone who evidently forgot to sign his name; the dollar will be mailed to Knock-Knock Winner, 321 North Twelfth street, Griffin, Ga. This is another case of boy meets girl.

"Knock knock."

"Who's there?"

"Marimba."

"Marimba who?"

"Marimba who? I'm the boy you've been waiting for."

Romance? How?

And this leads us right in to our daily little romance. Don't you just love them? Neither do we, but you knock-knockists keep sending in the pieces and we sew them together and what do we get? Something like this:

A boy meets a girl (the old reliable formula) in front of the Henry Grady monument on Marietta street and while they jump about dodging traffic they speak thusly:

Boy: "Hawaii today?"

Girl: "Phil like a feather in a breeze."

Boy: "Havana seen you before someplace?"

Girl: "Geneva can tell."

Boy: "Hortense your nerves are. Sapphire in your eyes?"

Girl: "Isthmus be love."

Boy: "I Cain marry you because I'm not Abel. Annette I can't escape from you."

He Means Melancholy.

Girl: "Watermelon-choly thing we cantaloupe."

Boy: "Lukes like the end of me."

Girl: "Wanted to get married any-how? Week-end live with my folks. They still live with theirs."

Boy: "Water swell idea. Oswell that ends well."

Confidentially, your knock-knock editor was afraid that romance was going on the rocks for a while, like the one yesterday did. It was all because the line "Yukon beat it sofa as I'm concerned" kept popping up. But we avoided using it by sticking it under that 3,782-pound pile of knock-knocks.

Ha! Ha! Haw! Haw!

If you ever come into the knock-knock editor's office to bring your awful effort, in person, please don't do like the big fellow with the New Jersey did yesterday.

He barged into the office and held out a ham-like fist full of knock-knocks. (You'd think he would have something else to do, wouldn't you?)

We looked them over and exclaimed:

"Mercedes are terrible."

"Tennessee you alone a moment?"

His first public office was as county attorney, to which post he was appointed in 1919. In that post he successfully prosecuted Ku Klux Klan leaders on charges of criminal libel against the mayor of Minneapolis and in 1928 instituted a city council graft investigation that resulted in prison terms for several aldermen.

Won by 180,000 Votes. Credited then with "cleaning out the city hall." Liberals raised a cry for him to "clean out the state capitol." He had tried to win the governorship in 1924 but had been overwhelmingly defeated by Theodore Christianson. But in 1930 he was made farmer-labor candidate for governor and won the election by 180,000 votes.

His most turbulent year in office was 1934 when he placed Minneapolis under military control after some 60 persons had been shot in rioting that accompanied a truck drivers' strike. Certain individuals sought a federal injunction restraining the governor from continuing military rule in the city, but Olson went into court personally and beat the suit.

Running for re-election that year, he had to overcome a split in his own party and determined drive by other parties against the farmer-labor platform which called for a sweeping program of public ownership on the ground that "capitalism has failed." His winning margin was 72,000.

The "farm holiday" movement was strong in Minnesota through the depression years and frequently foreclosed sales of farms were stopped by angry agriculturists. Once a group of them appealed to Governor Olson for advice.

"You are asking me, an officer of the law, what to do?" he exclaimed. "I can't tell you, but you fellows have been doing pretty well so far and I think you can take care of any situation that may arise."

There were a number of foreclosure stoppages after that remark became known.

Beat Ouster.

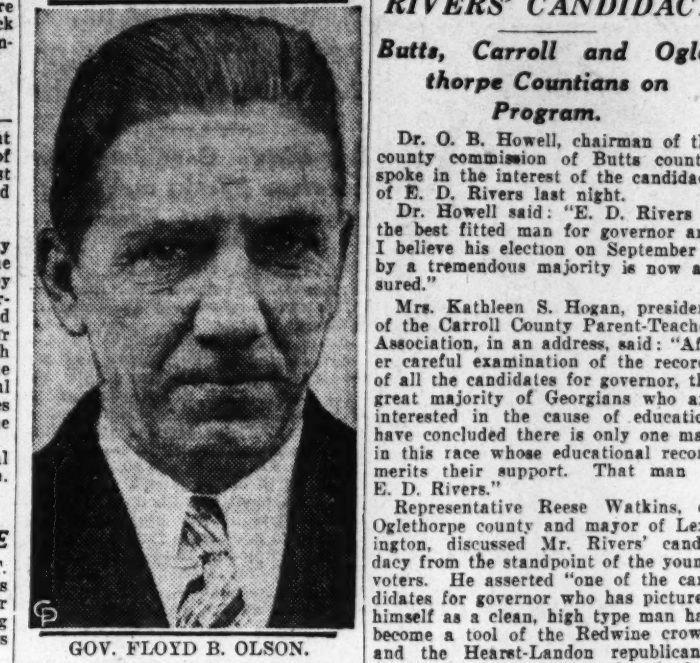

In 1935 Governor Olson was the target of an ouster suit, based on charges that he had violated the state's corrupt practice act. The case was dismissed in district court.

The same year Walter Liggett, publisher of a weekly newspaper in Minneapolis, demanded that Olson be impeached and cited 10 reasons. Liggett also warred unceasingly on the underworld of Minneapolis and in December he was assassinated.

Liggett's widow, testifying at the trial of a suspect, later acquitted, said: "Governor Olson or some of his gang got Walter." Olson had ignored Liggett's attacks upon him and now he attributed the widow's remark to the fact that she was under a great strain.

She is survived by her husband and two sons, Elkin Higgins, of Los Angeles; Harold Higgins, of Chicago; a daughter, Mrs. F. T. Maddox, of Philadelphia; five brothers, W. L. A. H. and C. M. Edwards, of Atlanta; G. T. Edwards, of Macon, and C. D. Edwards, of Jackson; father, T. W.

GOV. FLOYD B. OLSON.

Butts, Carroll and Oglethorpe Countians on Program.

Dr. O. B. Howell, chairman of the county commission of Butts county, spoke in the interest of the candidacy of E. D. Rivers last night.

Dr. Howell said: "E. D. Rivers is the best fitted man for governor and I believe his election on September 9 by a tremendous majority is now assured."

Mrs. Kathleen S. Hogan, president of the Carroll County Parent-Teacher Association, in an address, said: "After careful examination of the records of all the candidates for governor, the great majority of Georgians who are interested in the cause of education have concluded there is only one man in this race whose educational record merits their support. That man is E. D. Rivers."

Representative Reese Watkins, of Oglethorpe county and mayor of Lexington, discussed Mr. Rivers' candidacy from the standpoint of the young voters. He asserted "one of the candidates for governor who has pictured himself as a clean, high type man has become a tool of the Redwine crowd and the Hearst-Landon republicans. So frantic has he become when he has seen that he has no earthly chance to become governor, that he has appealed to the republicans in Georgia to help him and has proudly displayed his republican support to democratic Georgia."

"Instead of turning out to be the high type man he would have the people of Georgia believe him to be, he has shown himself in his true light—just another mud-slinging politician who will stop at nothing to deceive the voters, a man who consorts with Georgia republican leaders, who is so desperate that he will resort to any kind of political trickery or any scheme, no matter how low down or rotten it might be."

J. H. MITCHELL NAMED STATE'S MASTER TUTOR

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 22.—(AP)—The 1936 master teacher of vocational agriculture award was given today to J. H. Mitchell, of Baldwin High school, at the final session of an annual vocational conference at the University of Georgia.

State education department agricultural supervisors and university vocational teacher trainers said Mitchell won because he stands out as a classroom teacher, because of progress made on a live-at-home program through a community canner which he supervises and because of unusual success in Future Farmer of America Association activities.

The award, a $100 check, is offered annually. Mitchell will now compete in a regional contest.

EDUCATORS WILL CONVENE. KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 22.—(AP)—D. S. Burleson, secretary of the East Tennessee Educational Association, said tonight the organization will hold its annual convention here October 29-31. Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, United States minister to Denmark, will be among the principal speakers, he said.

RECOVERY PROGRESS TRACED BY RAMSPECK

Congressman Lauds Federal Leadership for Country's Rise From Depression.

Because the federal government "primed the pump of private business" with emergency expenditures, America is once more on the road to normal prosperity, Congressman Robert Ramspeck declared yesterday in his address at a barbecue in Alpharetta.

Citing the various kinds and types of expenditures made by the present administration since it took office in 1933, when the whole country was demoralized by depression, the congressman pointed out the benefits Fulton and other counties in the fifth congressional district have received through his efforts and co-operation with national officials.

"In connection with the matter of federal aid for roads, I wish to remind my friends in the fifth district that out of more than $200,000,000 expended in Georgia for roads prior to my election to congress, the county in this district had received approximately $88,000 only," Ramspeck asserted.

Fair Division of Funds.

"Since my election to congress, through the bureau of public roads I have been able to insure to the people of the fifth district a fair division of the federal money expended for road purposes in this state," he cited the record that, under the present administration, $584,121 has been expended for roads in Fulton county. Roads to cost $229,082 are now under construction in this county and $53,000 more for roads is under contract. "There remains available and being held for Fulton the sum of $1,360,479 for roads and highways," he declared.

"The Civilian Conservation Corps has expended approximately $475,000 in Fulton county," he said. "I take pardonable pride in the fact that I and the private citizens of Fulton county have been able to handle in the house the legislation which created this splendid agency when it was considered by congress."

Ramspeck, who is opposed for reelection by George West, Atlanta businessman, and W. P. Middlebrooks, lawyer, gave the following records of expenditures in Fulton county by the present administration for the purpose of "priming of private business," which created jobs and employment for the county.

Fulton Expenditures.

Home Owners Loan Corporation, 4,750 loans amounting to $11,958,032; Reconstruction Finance Corporation, $2,342,734; Federal Land Bank, 154 loans totaling $211,699 to farmers; emergency seed and feed loans, $242,734; Federal Housing Administration, 1,174 loans totaling $96,750; Resettlement administration, loans totaling $113,778 to 309 persons; Agricultural Adjustment Administration, $281,007 expended on farm programs in this county; Public Works Administration, housing division, $2,771,902 on the Techwood project; $1,022,100 on the university project (an unexpended balance for both projects of $1,027,892 remains); PWA on non-federal projects, loans and grants amounting to $1,274,038 for the city police station, city auditorium, Fulton tower, sewer and water works system in Atlanta, and water works system of Roswell and Palmerton, and several others; the PWA on federal projects, including the East Point postoffice, $308,644; the Emergency Relief Administration expended $100,000 approximately; the Works Progress Administration, $5,058,171, its program including aid to 1,730 high school students and 1,174 college students, and the CWA and the FERA, which expended $15,070,339 in Fulton county.

The Surplus Commodity Corporation also distributed millions of pounds of beef, milk, potatoes and other food products, and thousands of garments, blankets and other necessities to persons on relief in the county.

"Greatest Benefit."

"While Fulton county and the fifth district have received their share of the material assistance arising from the recovery program of the New Deal," Ramspeck said, "it seems to me that the greatest benefit accruing to us has been the restoration of confidence and the return of our people to equal opportunity."

"In this year of another national election we ought not to forget that when our great democratic president assumed his office in March, 1933, he faced a demoralized country, with all of the banks closed, millions of people out of work and discouraged; a nation where values of all kinds were rapidly declining and where salaries and wages were diminishing each day."

"Now after three years of the wise leadership of this great democratic we find values restored, millions re-employed, salaries and wages rising, and you need only to read the financial pages of your daily newspaper to be convinced of the success of this recovery program and employment. America is once more on the road to normal prosperity."

Talmadge's Candidate for Governor Speaks at Valdosta, Waycross, Nashville.

REPRESENTATIVE E. E. COX.

CONGRESSMAN COX RETURNS FOR DRIVE

Vice Chairman of National Speakers' Bureau Seeks Renomination.

Vice chairman of the democratic national committee's speakers bureau, Judge E. E. Cox, of Camilla, will return to his home district from New York tomorrow to spend the next two weeks in earnest concentration on his campaign for renomination in the September 9 primary.

Judge Cox has served in the house of representatives at Washington from the second Georgia district since 1924, having been five times re-elected. Prior to his entrance into congress, he served four years on the Albany circuit of the Georgia superior courts. A week ago, his appointment as vice chairman of the speakers' bureau of the democratic campaign committee was announced by Chairman James A. Farley.

Following the state primary, Judge Cox will devote the next two months to the national campaign and probably will be called upon to take the stump in several states during the campaign. He is fourth ranking member of the house committee on rules.

Judge Cox is an M. A. University graduate in both literary and law degrees.

ETHERIDGE TARGET OF WATKINS' FIRE

Judgeship Candidate Lauds Great Men of Superior Court Bench.

Another attack on the record of his opponent, Paul S. Etheridge Sr., was laid down yesterday at a political rally in Alpharetta by Edgar Watkins, Jr., who is a candidate to succeed Judge G. H. Howard on the Fulton superior court bench.

Watkins referred to a report by a special committee appointed by a Fulton grand jury in 1933 which investigated the county commission when Etheridge was a member of that body. "While the record of my opponent might not be sufficient to cause his indictment, it is not sufficient to require good citizens to vote against him," he said.

"When we remember the great men who have held that office, such as Judge Henry Lumpkin, Judge Marshall Clarke, Judges John T. Pendleton, W. D. Ellis and George Bell, can we afford to lower the high character and reputation of that office by electing a man for judge who has been investigated and condemned by an official committee representing the grand jury?"

"The record of Mr. Etheridge is available. It is, or should be, of file in the public records. It was printed and can be read by all who wish to know. The daily papers of this county, the Fulton County Record, the Atlanta Journal, the full record of the committee, and I hope you will familiarize yourself with it, if you do not already know it," he asserted.

2 COLONELS RESIGN Governor's Military Staff Is Again Depleted.

Two more members of the military staff of Governor Talmadge yesterday announced their resignations. They are Colonel R. DeWitt King and his son, Colonel Charles H. King.

Colonel DeWitt King announced that the resignations had been sent to Adjutant General Lindley W. Camp.

The elder King served as a member of the military staff of Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. when he was elected to the senate in 1933. The younger King has been serving as a military aide to the Governor.

LINDER ASSISTANT RESIGNS POSITION

Supporter of Roosevelt Says He Would Be Dismissed After Election.

J. H. Vickers Jr., an assistant state chemist, yesterday tendered his resignation to Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder to take effect at once. Vickers said he was leaving the state service because he is a supporter of President Roosevelt and knows that if he does not retire before September primary he would be dismissed after the election because of his support of the President. Linder remains in office until January 1.

The chemist's letter to Linder follows:

"Mr. Tom Linder,
Department of Agriculture,
The Capitol,
Atlanta, Ga.
"Dear Mr. Linder: Please accept my resignation to take effect now. I am for Roosevelt 100 per cent, the same as my family.
"With all the dirty cracks and pictures of the administration that go on around the state capitol knocking me over the head, I know that because I favor Roosevelt I will be let out after September 9, so I will say what I have to say now, not after the election. So that makes me one more for Roosevelt that is leaving the state payroll.
"Yours very truly,
"J. H. VICKERS JR."

Again Seeks School Post FARLEYISM IS HINTED

BY TALMADGE IN BOOS BY REDWINE LEADERS

Reviewing Saturday the course of his campaign and his plans for the coming week, Governor Talmadge said that "the brief disorder" at his Macon meeting Thursday was the result of "organized efforts to break up the program."

"This is a new method of political activity in Georgia," said the Governor. "It is one to which we are not accustomed in our tradition of courteous treatment of men in public appearance, but one which can be handled naturally and without increasing the trouble."

Talmadge is in Macon.

"The episode smacks of the hoodlums which marks campaigning under the Tammany banner and in large eastern centers. Mr. Farley knows all about those tactics, and with his interest in defeating Talmadge, he can give my enemies some good instructions."

RE-ELECTION ASKED BY W. M. RAINEY

DeKalb County School Superintendent Cites Record in Seeking Votes.

W. M. Rainey is again a candidate for re-election as county school superintendent for DeKalb county in the primary election on September 9. Rainey is a graduate of Mercer University, has attended summer terms at the University of Georgia, University of Virginia and Columbia University. He has been principal of the DeKalb county schools, has been a member of the Georgia Education Association, and was head of DeKalb high school a term of years.

During his term of office, the teachers have been paid promptly, and a nine-month school term has been supported. The value of the school buildings has increased during the same time to more than $550,000.

MARKET FOR FARMERS PLEDGED BY ROBERTS

Speculators, Bootleggers and Other Undesirables Will Be Ejected, He Says.

Conditions at the state farmers' market were again exacerbated by C. M. Roberts, candidate for commissioner of agriculture, in a statement given out yesterday at his campaign headquarters here.

"A report is being circulated that when I take office as commissioner of agriculture I am going to close the city of Atlanta to the farmers' market," Mr. Roberts said. "This is a false and untrue statement. I have no intention of closing the market, but I do intend to make some drastic changes in its operation. In the first place, I am going to give it a thorough house-cleaning. Liquor haulers, bootleggers, bus number operators and prostitutes will have to find some other place to transact business. In the second place, I am going to reorganize the market for the benefit of Georgia farmers."

FELTON SAYS POLL SHOWS HIM IN LEAD

Court of Appeals Candidate Predicts Primary Victory.

Julius W. Felton, of Montezuma, candidate for the court of appeals, yesterday issued a statement showing that a poll conducted by editors of weekly papers in the state showed him leading in his race.

In his statement, he said:

"In spite of the fact that each of my opponents will in all probability say the same thing about my race which I am about to say about mine, I do not hesitate to predict my overwhelming victory in the court of appeals on September 9. A consistent lead in the newspaper editors' poll shows I am now and have always been in a leading position since the primary began some weeks ago."

"On account of the fact that I was suspended from the public service commission by the Governor in July, 1933, the office to which the people of Georgia elected me, and I was thereby deprived of $11,100 in salary up to this date, I have not been able to make as extensive campaign as I would have liked to make. However, before the primary, I shall have campaigned in practically every county in the state with the exception of the home counties of my opponents, and I think I have been in enough state campaigns to recognize unmistakably favorable reaction when I see it. I am deeply grateful to the people of Georgia for the friendship they have shown toward me and for the inevitable expression of it on September 9."

RIVERS MOTORCADE FOR WOMEN ONLY

Lanier County Women Plan Special Trip to Rally Here Tomorrow.

Lanier county women voters, friends and neighbors of E. D. Rivers, candidate for governor, have arranged for a motorcade from Lakeland to Atlanta tomorrow night for ladies.

The motorcade will be composed entirely of women and it is estimated that 100 cars from Lanier and adjacent counties will take part in the demonstration.

Mrs. L. L. Patton, of Lakeland, in discussing the purpose of the motorcade, said, "We want the people of Georgia to know that the women of Lanier county are supporting Ed Rivers solidly in his race for governor. We know Mr. Rivers as a leading citizen, a devoted family man, and a co-operative Georgian. We know Ed Rivers for what he is and admire him for what he stands for."

The Rivers rally tomorrow night will assemble women from all over Georgia and has been designated by Speaker Rivers as "ladies' night."

Mrs. A. A. Rollison, president of the Georgia Democratic Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Virginia Polhill, Price, national democratic committee woman for Georgia, will be in charge of the rally.

DE LACEY ALLEN TO AID NATIONAL CAMPAIGN

ALBANY, Ga., Aug. 22.—(AP)—DeLacey Allen, candidate for lieutenant governor who has been invited to be a speaker for the national democratic administration, has accepted the invitation and informed democratic party headquarters he will be ready at any time to serve the speaker's bureau.

Friends of Allen are planning two rallies for him. One will be held Tuesday, August 30, at Macon, at the Danmore hotel. It will begin at 3:30 o'clock. The other, sponsored by north Georgia friends, will be held Monday, August 31, at 8 o'clock in the Henry Grady hotel at Atlanta.

CONFIDENCE IS VOICED Sees Victory in Primary

RAINEY EXPRESSES VOTE CONFIDENCE

Redwine campaign headquarters yesterday issued a statement claiming that the Talmadge-sponsored gubernatorial candidate will carry 142 of Georgia's 159 counties in the primary on September 9.

In the statement it was reiterated that Senator Redwine will carry the policies instituted by Governor Talmadge. In the statement, Senator Redwine's headquarters said in his behalf:

"Mr. Redwine has just finished one of the most intensive weeks of speaking in his campaign for governor. Everywhere he finds the situation is the same—the people are going to vote for Redwine and elect him governor in the primary of September 9."

"In his speeches Mr. Redwine has declared himself an earnest supporter of the economic program now in effect in Georgia, which is saving millions of dollars annually to the people of Georgia by the way of interest against the imposition of any additional taxes on our people."

"Hosts of Judge Larsen's friends have turned to Redwine because they know he is going to be elected. Naturally they want to follow the candidate who offers the most progressive platform, and who will be elected."

"His name is Charles D. Redwine."

"The thousands of letters that have come to headquarters during the past week, and the great numbers of people who have visited headquarters all tell the same story—that the next governor of Georgia will be Charles D. Redwine."

"We confidently predict an overwhelming victory at the polls on September 9. Mr. Redwine will carry a minimum of 142 counties. There are some doubtful counties in the remaining list, but after a careful survey we know that 142 counties will vote to elect Redwine governor."

"It is important for our friends over the state to hold to what we have said, and to have victory in our grasp, and the people of Georgia will rise up on September 9 and will vote to demonstrate that they cannot be bought, bluffed or beaten."

WILSON CAMPAIGNS FOR CUT IN GAS TAX

Candidate for Legislative Seat Outlines Qualifications.

Pledge to fight for reduction of the gasoline tax and for the establishment of a state highway patrol and driver's license law was made yesterday by James C. Wilson, candidate for the legislature to succeed Bond Almond, at a political rally in Alpharetta.

Wilson, who is head of a newspaper syndicate, declared that those who experience well qualifies him for the post of representative from Fulton county.

"My experience in covering the proceedings of numerous state legislatures over the country and of the national congress in Washington has made me thoroughly familiar with legislative and parliamentary procedure," he said. "It is my belief that a newspaperman is especially well qualified to serve the people of Fulton county as a legislative representative."

Wilson, stressing the importance of the office he seeks, pointed out Fulton pays approximately 30 per cent of all the revenue of the state of Georgia.

He declared the gasoline tax is too high and that an enormous amount of this tax is being diverted to other purposes. The highway system is in good condition and there is no longer need for this heavy tax, he asserted.

He declared he would fight to establish a state highway patrol and to pass a driver's license law to lessen highway deaths and accidents in Georgia, and that he favors an old age pension in this state.

STATE CHAIRMAN FLAYED BY PERRY

Hugh Howell Uses Office to Advance Talmadge Candidates, He Says.

The charge that Hugh Howell, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, is using his office to further the interests of Governor Talmadge and his candidates was made yesterday by James A. Perry, candidate for the public service commission.

The basis of Perry's charge is that C. D. Rountree's name has been placed on the official ballot as a candidate for both the long and short terms for the place on the commission held by Julius W. Felton at the time the commission was removed by Governor Talmadge. Perry contends that Rountree qualified for the long term only. Perry said Felton was serving in the position to which the late Calvin W. Parker was elected and to which Felton succeeded. This term will not expire before the 1938 election and, according to Perry, must be filled at the September primary for both the long and short terms of the commission and for the full term. He argued that Rountree qualified for one place and that to put his name on the ballot as a candidate for both is clearly illegal and only done in the interest of the Talmadge-appointed Huit, who is opposed to this state.

WILSON CONFIDENT OF HIS RE-ELECTION

Secretary of State Reports Pledges of Support All Over State.

Secretary of State John B. Wilson, in a statement issued yesterday, predicted he will be re-elected overwhelmingly in the primary of September 9.

Secretary Wilson said he has received pledges of support from leaders and the rank and file of the democratic party in every county in Georgia. His statement follows:

"In my campaign for re-election as secretary of state, I have had pledges of support from every county in Georgia. I wish it were possible for me to get into every county and thank the people in person for their approval of my efforts to render them honest, faithful service."

"I deeply appreciate this commendation. I am grateful for the influence of the active support and thousands of personal friends. With this approval generally and the continuation of the efforts of these friends, I am assured of a great victory September 9."

STRICT ENFORCEMENT PROMISED BY BOYKIN

Rigid Prosecution Has Kept Major Criminals Away From City, He Says.

Stern law enforcement and rigid prosecution of offenders has kept Atlanta from being another home for the underworld of the United States, Solicitor General John A. Boykin said in addresses yesterday and Friday before audiences at political rallies.

Boykin, a candidate for re-election in the September primary, discussed his record of law enforcement and declared he had no apology to make for being called "hard boiled" by some of his critics.

"The principal duty of the government is protection to life and property, and in order to obtain this it is necessary to have prosecutors who are hard boiled and who will prosecute crime to the limit," the solicitor general asserted.

"If there is any weakened prosecution, the word will soon go out to the criminals gathered in other cities that Atlanta is a good place for them to operate. The word will flock here like flies to a pile of manure, and places when the opportunity was given them."

"The solicitor, who was recently honored at a testimonial dinner by more than 300 prominent members of the Atlanta bar, declared he would not refuse to prosecute a misdemeanor case until specifically ordered to do so by a court. He said he would use the investigative powers of the grand jury to uncover the commission of crime regardless of whether the crimes are felonies or misdemeanors."

"There are some misdemeanors that are just as important as felonies," Solicitor Boykin asserted. "Some misdemeanors know at the very vitals of society and can never be uncovered except through the laborious inquisitive power of a grand jury. I believe this great power of the grand jury for the protection of society should not be set aside and nullified by any arbitrary position of a prosecuting officer. Whenever I see any evil that is endangering the safety and welfare of the citizens of Fulton county, I will gladly conduct an investigation with the aid of the grand jury and procure indictments if they are authorized, even though the crimes discovered are only misdemeanors."

Boykin appealed Friday to the members of the American Legion to support his position for law enforcement in Fulton county.

TINY ROSE EXHIBITED

W. E. RENFROE JOINS STERCHI'S

The smallest rose in the world—a tiny that a thimble will fit over its bloom and a coffee pot over the full grown plant—was exhibited for the first time in the southwest at the American Association of Nurserymen's convention at Dallas.

Perry said that his original protest was made to the legislature and that after he learned that Rountree's name was actually on the official ballot, he decided to run for both the long and short terms of the commission and for the full term. He argued that Rountree qualified for one place and that to put his name on the ballot as a candidate for both is clearly illegal and only done in the interest of the Talmadge-appointed Huit, who is opposed to this state.

W. E. RENFROE JOINS STERCHI'S

W. E. Renfro, for many years connected with prominent furniture stores throughout the South, is now in charge of floor arrangements and displays for Sterchi Brothers Stores, Inc., 118 Whitehall street, according to an announcement made by the management of the firm yesterday.

Sterchi's, which is the South's largest exclusive homefurnishings store, carrying the largest and most varied assortment of furniture in the city, merits the admiration of Mr. Renfro, who says that he has never before seen so complete a collection of furniture in the city.

Many unusual room arrangements, decorated under the supervision of Sterchi's staff of interior decorators, and striking floor displays featuring August Sale merchandise will interest visitors to the store.—(adv.)

GROCERY DYNAMITED IN MILK PRICE WAR

Explosives Found in Another Store; Police Told: 'Shoot To Kill' Bombers.

Atlanta's milk-price war flared for the second time within two weeks early yesterday, when a blast of dynamite wrecked a grocery store at 780 Primrose avenue, endangering the lives of five persons.

Three sticks of dynamite found five hours later in a grocery at 474 West Mitchell street, led Chief of Police T. O. Sturdivant to instruct a special squad to "shoot to kill if they catch dynamiters in the act of tossing bombs into establishments."

The explosion in the Williams grocery on Primrose avenue occurred at 1:30 o'clock, shattering showcases, blowing a hole in the floor and shaking merchandise into heaps on the floor and counters. William Lingvur, the owner, his wife and a 3-year-old son, Stanley, and a brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lingvur, were asleep in the residence adjoining the store. None was injured.

Shock Rocks Section.
The bomb was tossed through a front window. The force of the explosion shattered windows in the adjoining house, while the shock was felt several hundred yards away.

The attempted bombing of the Great Savings Store on Mitchell street was discovered at about 7 o'clock, when three sticks of dynamite, which had been tossed through a front window, were found on the floor. Had they exploded, police said, the entire building would have been wrecked.

The explosion and the attempted bombing are a result of the war over milk prices, police said. Two weeks ago a bomb thrown into the quarters of the Georgia Milk Producers' Confederation, at 601 Whitehall street, damaged that building.

Followed Threats.
Although the victims of yesterday's dynamiting ascribed no reason for the explosion, there have been threats that several dealers would be "put out of business" unless they increased their Investigators expressed the opinion that yesterday's bombing was perpetrated by the same gang that bombed the confederation plant.

Declaring that the bombers are "potential murderers," Chief Sturdivant said he was putting on a special detail of four plainclothesmen armed with sawed-off shotguns.

"Bomb-throwers have no regard for human life," said the chief in discussing the shoot-to-kill order, "and I think they should be given no better chance than their possible victims, if the squad catches them in the act."

STRESSES PAROLE

Prison Director Urges Plan for All Released Persons.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Sanford

Bates, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, urged today that all persons released from prison and reformatory be placed on parole.

"Add to the period of punishment this period of protective supervision," he suggested as a protection to the public. He spoke before the final session of the Interstate Commission of Crime, at which approximately 25 states were represented.

John J. Hannan, president of the Wisconsin state board of control and chairman of the Interstate Prison Compact Association, declared that "ever-increasing illness within our prisons" was one of the causes of a growth in the number of "repeaters" among criminals.

"The prison must have productive labor for prisoners if it is to discharge its obligations and duties," he maintained.

INCREASE IS REPORTED IN BITUMINOUS COAL

Greater Activity of Industries Adds to Consumption.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP)—The Bureau of Mines estimated today the 1935 production of bituminous coal in the United States at 369,324,000 tons, a gain of 2.8 per cent over the previous year's total.

"The increased production," the bureau said, "was due primarily to greater activity in the coke, iron and steel industries and to additions in consumers' stocks."

Although 1935 production represented an increase over 1934, and a gain of 19.2 per cent over 1932, when 30,614,000 less tons were produced, last year's output, the bureau noted, was far below that for many years in the preceding 1932.

The bureau's report, contained in the Mineral Yearbook for 1935, showed the following production figures, in tons, for the major coal states:

Production in Georgia.
Kentucky (both eastern and western fields) 40,478,000; Alabama 8,412,000; Arkansas and Oklahoma 2,570,000; Maryland 1,650,000; Tennessee 4,110,000; Georgia and North Carolina 40,000; Virginia 9,015,000.

The bureau's preliminary estimates of the number of men employed by the bituminous coal industry for 1935 was 462,000, a gain of 4,000 over 1934.

A decline of 10.4 per cent in coal exports for 1935 from the preceding year was noted, while imports amounted to 292,000 tons in 1935 as compared with 180,000 tons in 1934. Canada was the chief source of bituminous imports, supplying 170,000 tons of the 1935 total.

Trends in Industry.
Trends in the industry were summarized as follows:

"Wage rates have increased substantially and hours of work have been reduced to seven per day. After pausing for a time the trend toward mechanization is now apparently being resumed."

"Prices have increased—in 1934, by somewhat more than costs; in 1935, apparently, by somewhat less than costs. Income tax returns for 1934 and 1935 have not been published, but other evidence indicates that in 1934 the financial position of the industry improved greatly and the deficit characteristic of preceding years reduced, though probably not wholly overcome."

Attention was called to a gain of 703 commercial mines—those producing over 1,000 tons a year—during 1935.

"The size of the coal industry," the report stated, "is not fully appreciated. In terms of dollars alone the production of coal far outweighs the national output of precious metals."

From the beginning of mining to the end of 1935 the anthracite mines of Pennsylvania have yielded coal valued at $11,630,000,000, and the bituminous mines coal valued at $29,641,000,000.

Gold production in the United States from 1792 to 1934 was valued at $4,839,602,000 and silver production in the same period at $2,549,765,000.

FULTON COUNTY RACES GAIN NEW MOMENTUM

Candidates Struggle To Be Heard Above Din of State, City Races.

Overshadowed by the sound and the fury of the big state races and shaded by the fast-approaching city election on September 2, Fulton county politics last week were having a hard time struggling into the limelight of blessed publicity.

But candidates for the legislature, solicitor general and Fulton superior court, not unduly discouraged by the lack of attention given them, were beginning to put fire and color into their own races yesterday and were planning a renewed onslaught on the imperturbable voter during the days remaining before September 2.

Unexpectedly, the contest between Paul S. Etheridge Sr. and Edgar Watkins Sr., for the position vacated by Judge G. H. Howard on the Fulton superior court bench, has developed sparks, with Watkins asking the people to look up Etheridge's record as a county commissioner before poll day, to see for themselves what he has investigated and criticized by a special grand jury committee in 1933. Etheridge replies that such attacks will get him votes instead of losing them.

Seek Almond Post.
In the legislative races, Luther Still, Helen Douglas, W. R. Bentley, R. B. Foster, James C. Wilson and J. S. Shettlesworth are campaigning for the post of Representative Bond Almond; W. Cicero Kendrick and Mrs. W. C. Kendrick are vying for the place of Representative Ralph Ramsey and William G. Hastings is opposed for the post of William E. Roper. None of the incumbents are offering for re-election to the house.

The legislative candidates are singularly reticent to attack one another, their campaigning being principally reiteration of the platforms on which they stand. Virtually all of them have favored in favor of the highest patrol and drivers' license law, several for reduction of the gasoline tax and other legislation of such general nature.

None has campaigned on the question of prohibition repeal, although predictions in the county are that the legislature will at least vote for local option.

To Seek Dry Law Opinions.
It was understood several organizations interested in the repeal of the prohibition law will send the candidates questionnaires soon.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin, candidate for re-election, in addressing the same state term law enforcement he has given for years, while his opponent, William G. McKee, whom he defeated four years ago, said, "I will stand for change in the procedure of crime prosecution if he is elected."

Boykin announced that the fight is now being fought on the law enforcement or allowing Atlanta to become a hotbed of crime through lack of prosecution of offenders.

Judge Hugh E. D. Thomas, candidate for re-election to the superior court bench, and his opponent, John H. Hudson, former assistant solicitor general, have appeared at a number of political rallies.

Thomas Unopposed.
Judge E. D. Thomas, the only other superior court judge up for election, is unopposed.

Arrangements for holding the September 9 state primary in Fulton county are almost complete, Hewitt W. Chambers, secretary of the county democratic executive committee, said yesterday.

The committee has already employed 375 managers and clerks to work at the polls and has arranged to place 71 ballot boxes to care for the expected record-breaking vote. Nearly 45,000 are registered to cast ballots this election and political observers predict that at least 20,000 will vote.

Mail Ballots Ready.
Ballots are ready for mailing to absentee voters, Chambers said. Several hundred Fulton residents will vote by mail this year as is usual.

The executive committee has headquarters at 608 Peters building and a telephone has been installed. The number is WA 9-925.

In addition to the names of state and county candidates, more than 100 aspirants to the Fulton executive committee will be listed on the ballot this year. Two officials of the committee, George L. Bell Jr., chairman, and Chambers, secretary, are not running for re-election.

1 KILLED, 2 RESCUED IN AIRPLANE WRECK
LAKEWOOD, N. J., Aug. 2.—(AP)—One man was killed and two others critically injured today as their seaplane went into a spin when they apparently attempted to land on Metedeosk river, near Laurelton.

Hubert Wyr, 23, of Ridgefield Park, the owner of the plane, was trapped under water as the plane buried its nose in the mud beneath the broad but shallow stream. Physicians said he probably died instantly from a broken neck.

Raymond L. Robilio, 29, Paterson, the pilot, and Charles S. Strubbe, 17, Ridgefield Park, who were along for the ride, were also trapped under water, but a nearby boatman dove under the wreckage, cut them loose from their safety belts and carried them to the surface.

DECATUR YOUTH HURT AS AUTO OVERTURNS
James Storey, 17, of R. F. D. No. 1, Decatur, suffered several fractured ribs when the car in which he was a passenger, driven by Henry Cook, of a Glenwood avenue address, overturned on Glenwood avenue, near Columbia drive, DeKalb county, at about 12:30 o'clock this morning.

He was admitted to Grady hospital. Cook, another passenger in the car, Joe Jones, of Alston drive, was unhurt. The accident occurred when Cook lost control of the machine.

Atlantan Is Injured In Rescue of Daughter
BRUNSWICK, Ga., Aug. 22.—(AP)—C. E. Gregory, Atlanta Journal editorial writer, yesterday afternoon suffered painful lacerations about the face and body during the rescue of his daughter, Adelaide, 15, in the surf at St. Simons Island.

Gregory, according to reports reaching here, went to the assistance of his daughter, who became entangled in the chains extending in the surf in extremely rough water during the squall which struck here late yesterday afternoon.

Gregory left Brunswick this morning for Waycross, heavily bandaged and bearing marks of his struggle with the heavy surf during the rescue.

G. W. Bosman, Apostle of Sunshine, Is Honored at Close of Bank Career

Veteran Employee Is Presented With Watch at Dinner.

George W. Bosman, Atlanta's "Apostle of Sunshine," who is retiring from active business life, was honored Saturday night by his associates in the First National Bank of Atlanta at a dinner at the Capital City Club at which he was presented with a watch as a mark of the affection in which he is held by officers and employees of the bank.

The dinner was given by the new business department of the bank which Mr. Bosman has been connected with for 10 years, and was attended by W. C. Adamson, J. Arch Avey Jr., Frank M. Berry, C. S. Conklin, E. B. Elliott, John L. Hendon, B. E. Holloway Jr., Herman Jones Jr., J. S. Kennedy, J. H. Lester, W. G. Murrah, James D. Robinson, Hubert Roper, Freeman Strickland, H. G. Walker, Rufus Walker and R. Clyde Williams.

Mr. Bosman is a native of Virginia, and for many years before coming to Atlanta was a resident of Augusta, where he was prominently identified with the cotton trade. The course of his duties took him to Europe yearly where he formed friendships with many world figures, including Sir Thomas Lipton.

In 1922 Mr. Bosman came to Atlanta. For many years he was in the insurance business and in 1926 became connected with the Atlanta and Lowry National Bank, continuing with the First National following the merger of the Atlanta Lowry and Fourth National in 1929.

Mr. Bosman's retirement comes at the age of 71. He stated he has no immediate plans for the future other than to enjoy well-earned rest after an unusually active life.

The title, "Atlanta's Apostle of Sunshine," has been conferred upon Mr. Bosman as the result of his cheerful and optimistic disposition. Poems of like nature which have come from his pen have been quoted widely in the Hotel Greeter and the house organ of the bank.

BLANTON DEFEATED BY TEXAS JURIST

'Watchdog of Treasury' Concedes Victory to Opponent.

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Representative Thomas L. Blanton's 20 years in congress were ended tonight when he conceded defeat in his bid for renomination in a runoff democratic primary highlighted by a telegram purportedly pledging support of James A. Farley—but denied by the party's national chairman.

As the fiery Blanton announced "I take my defeat on the chin—I am disappointed but neither disgruntled nor dismayed" returns to the Texas election bureau gave County Judge Clyde L. Garrett, of Eckland, 17,996 votes to 11,002 for Blanton.

The vote included incomplete tabulations from 10 of the 12 counties in the seventeenth district. Blanton was trailing in his home county, Taylor, 3,958 to 4,401, and was leading in only two.

Blanton, often called the "watchdog of the treasury," lost a seat which he had held for 20 years with one short interruption. He was defeated by a rural county judge who was a newcomer to district politics before he entered the first primary in July and sprang a startling upset by leading the veteran incumbent by 4,400 votes, lacking only 2,700 of a clear majority over two opponents.

The United States Department of Agriculture estimated recently the 1936 crop in Georgia would exceed 75,000,000 pounds. Unofficial reports yesterday lent encouragement to growers that this total would be reached.

nois, remained the same in New York, but lost in Ohio and Michigan. A discussion of campaign strategy in these states appears in columns seven and eight.

Fifth—As the President prepares to confer with governors of the drought states, democratic gains continue in the dry area, although the increases are smaller than those noted two weeks ago.

CROSS-SECTION POLLED.

A total of 166,004 ballots was distributed by mail and by personal interviewers to a scientifically selected cross-section of voters in the poll reported today. (See bottom of columns 7 and 8 for a discussion of polling methods.) Every state is represented in proportion to its total voting population. Roosevelt's lead of 52.5% is in terms of the major party vote taken as 100%. With all parties included, the vote is as follows:

	Roosevelt	Landon	Thomas	Lemke	All Others
TODAY	49.2%	44.5%	1.3%	4.6%	.4%
AUG. 9 POLL	49.3%	44.8%	1.5%	3.4%	1.0%

LEMKE'S SUPPORT NOT CONFINED TO POOR.

Heretofore many persons have supposed that William Lemke's following is chiefly among the poorer classes—malcontents living in the mud-flats outside big cities, and rural backwoodsmen who used to follow Huey Long.

The poll shows, however, that the union party draws as much of its strength from the upper two-thirds of the voting population as from the poorer one-third. In fact, Roosevelt is stronger with the poor man than Lemke. Of the 2,000,000 Lemke voters about 64% are in the upper two-thirds.

Lemke's total vote is still a long way from the 9,000,000 which Father Coughlin has claimed he will receive next November. But the union party now polls double the number of votes that all third parties polled two months ago.

Although Lemke's main support comes from voters who were for Roosevelt in 1932, he has recently been drawing more heavily from Landon than from Roosevelt in a number of important states.

Since the Institute's July poll Lemke has gained at the expense of Landon in North Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota, Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Maine, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Ohio and South Dakota. The trend is particularly noticeable in North Dakota, where, since July, the Roosevelt percentage has remained the same, while Landon dropped eight points, mostly to Lemke. Similarly, in Minnesota, Landon has lost nearly five points, and most of it went to the union party.

Many observers have pointed out that a vote for Landon next November will, in many instances, be simply a "protest" vote against Roosevelt. From the above analysis it appears that Lemke will split this protest vote with Landon in many states, thus helping Roosevelt. This will not be the case in all states, however. Today's poll shows that Lemke continues to draw more heavily from Roosevelt than from Landon in such states as Wisconsin, Oregon, Michigan and Massachusetts.

UPPER INCOME CLASSES FAVOR LONDON.

If only the upper one-third of the voting population went to the polls next November, Governor Landon would be the next president. If, on the other hand, only the lower one-third voted, there would be a landslide for Roosevelt.

The dramatic cleavage between these two extremes of voters is shown by the following special tabulation of ballots in today's poll:

	For Landon	For Roosevelt
Upper One-third	59%	41%
Lower One-third	30%	70%

But when the entire voting population—rich men, poor men, and persons of moderate means—is considered as a whole, Roosevelt and Landon are actually about 2,000,000 votes apart.

The upper one-third corresponds roughly to the 12,000,000 owners of residence telephones. The lower one-third is made up in part of persons on relief, or at the relief level, and others. In referring to the "lower one-third" the Institute does not mean the lower one-third of the population, but the lower one-third of the VOTING population.

Most ardent pro-Roosevelt voters among the poor are, of course, the reliefers.

VOTERS OF PERSONS ON RELIEF	82%	18%

For the first time in history, the popular majority of the President of the United States has been recorded from month to month. The above chart shows Roosevelt's popularity in 32 Institute polls, beginning February, 1934. Note that in June, 1936, following the nomination of Governor Landon, the line dropped from 55.8% to 51.8%, and that today it is back to 52.5%.

Next Week--

"Why will you vote for Roosevelt?"

"Why will you vote for Landon?"

The Institute of Public Opinion has put questions like those to more than 100,000 voters all over the United States. The answers provide the first clear picture ever presented of the way campaign issues are taking rank in the minds of American voters.

In an exclusive poll reported next Sunday in The Constitution the Institute will show exactly what the strength and weakness of each candidate is—from the standpoint of the voting man and woman.

Roosevelt-Landon Vote Today in Five Principal Borderline States

With a total of 157 electoral votes, or nearly one-third of the total of 531, the five states shown above will probably be the deciding factors next November. They are "borderline" states because neither Roosevelt nor Landon has a heavy lead today. The figures given in the illustration were calculated by applying the poll percentages to the total estimated vote in each state.

Parties Will Probably Concentrate Campaign In Five Close States

By Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Both major parties are likely to concentrate their heaviest fire in the present campaign in five states—New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio.

Today's poll shows all five in the "borderline" class at the moment, which means that neither candidate has a sizable lead. Landon is ahead by a small margin in four, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio, while Roosevelt leads in Michigan. The five states are important because they command 157 electoral votes, or nearly one-third of the total of 531.

If Landon carries all five while holding his lead elsewhere, he will be the next President. But if Roosevelt carries just one of them he will win, provided of course he holds other states where he leads today.

Landon began his invasion of the principal borderline states yesterday when he made his second important campaign speech in Pennsylvania. He plans to speak at Buffalo, N. Y., next Wednesday and will wind up his campaign with an address in New York city's Madison Square Garden the week before election. Roosevelt recently toured Pennsylvania and New York to inspect flood damage and PWA projects, though he denied that his trip had anything to do with politics.

CITY vs. COUNTRY. In each of the five principal borderline states Roosevelt is strong in the big cities, while Landon leads elsewhere. The only exception is Chicago where Landon is ahead today. Applying the poll percentages to the total estimated vote in the five states, the figures are as follows:

	Landon	Roosevelt
All New York State	2,460,000	2,341,000
New York City	733,000	1,518,000
All Pennsylvania	1,541,000	1,412,000
Philadelphia	321,000	340,000
Pittsburgh (Allegheny Co.)	149,000	248,000
All Illinois	1,833,000	1,691,000
Chicago (Cook Co.)	863,000	852,000
All Ohio	1,332,000	1,312,000
Cleveland	86,000	158,000
All Michigan	831,000	857,000
Detroit	210,000	254,000

The campaign strategy of the democrats will probably be to concentrate in the big cities because each increase there will help overcome Landon's lead in the rest of the state. Furthermore they will find it easier to concentrate effort on one big city than to diffuse it over a wide area.

The republicans are also likely to concentrate their activities in the big cities because if they can reduce Roosevelt's lead there, Landon's margin of safety in the state will be that much greater.

Poll Methods Used Daily By Industry and Science

By Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—A Washington correspondent of the London "Economist," commenting on polls of the Institute of Public Opinion, recently declared it absurd to think that the opinion of a nation of 120,000,000 people could be ascertained by polling only 200,000.

Years ago the critics of Louis Pasteur said it was absurd to think that disease could be caused by little bugs.

If the whole cannot be judged by a sample, then the government would have to stop estimating the nation's crops, doctors would have to stop analyzing human blood from a single drop, and most research in the fields of education and business would come to a halt.

But none of these things is likely to happen, because the "sampling" method, tried and tested in science and industry for many years, can be and is accurate. Applying it to public opinion was simply the next logical step—a step called for years ago by Lord Bryce, who wrote in the "American Commonwealth" that "a final stage in the evolution of government by opinion would be reached if the will of the majority of citizens were to become ascertainable at all times."

Following is a brief explanation of the manner in which the Institute conducts its polls.

POLL IS CONTINUOUS.

The poll reported today is based on a total send out of 166,004 ballots. The Institute differs from other polling organizations in that it conducts a continuous poll, the first ever attempted. Ballots are sent out nearly every day, and returns are received daily, in a steady stream the year 'round. The operation resembles a conveyor belt which moves goods in a factory. As the answered ballots accumulate, the Institute takes them off the "line," tabulates them, and reports the results in the 15 newspapers subscribing to its service. Meanwhile more ballots have been sent out, and more returns are accumulating, ready for the next report. New questions are substituted for those that have been reported on. The question concerning presidential candidates, however, is carried on all ballots. Hence the steady stream of returns is a sensitive barometer of week-by-week changes in political sentiment.

THE DANGER IN MAIL POLLS.

The ballots are distributed by mail and by a staff of more than 280 personal interviewers. The interviewers are used to reach the lower one-third of the voters, whose names do not appear on ordinary commercial lists and who do not answer mail ballots in sufficiently large numbers.

Mail ballots reach the upper levels through the use of names of residence telephone owners and owners of automobiles.

But the vote of these persons is not typical for the whole country, because, as Institute polls have shown, there is a wide cleavage of opinion between classes.

The vote of the Institute's own cross-section of telephone and automobile owners shows Landon far in the lead.

RESULT—59% Landon, 41% Roosevelt

When the vote of poor people, reached through personal interviewers, is added to the total returns, the result is 52.5% for Roosevelt and 47.5% for Landon, as reported elsewhere on this page.

It is possible, of course, to conduct a poll using only personal interviewers. The danger in this method is just the opposite from the danger in mail polls, that is, it is difficult to reach the upper classes. Furthermore, personal canvassers cannot cover as wide a territory as can be reached by mail ballots.

Hence the Institute believes that the most satisfactory method is a combination of the two; mail ballots to reach the upper levels, and personal interviewers to reach the lower levels.

Poll Not Prediction

The Institute of Public Opinion makes no predictions. The poll reported on this page describes the party standings only AS OF TODAY. Two weeks hence another poll will show how the candidates stand AS OF THAT DATE. Every fortnight thereafter until November, changes in voting sentiment will be recorded as they occur. The last presidential poll will be reported Sunday, November 1, two days before election.

SUTTON'S PROPOSAL FOR BONDS ATTACKED

President of School Patrons Asks Elimination of Politics, Nepotism.

J. R. Smith, president of the Patrons of Atlanta Public Schools, yesterday called on Atlantans to elect a board of education to separate academic and business departments of the school system, to create an advisory board of school principals to determine curricula and to eliminate politics and nepotism.

In a prepared statement, the president of the patrons asked Willis A. Sutton, school superintendent, for projecting a $6,480,000 bond issue, asserted the people will not vote it and characterized the move as a "political blind."

Text of his statement follows: "The recent recommendation of the superintendent of our city schools that bonds be issued to the extent of $6,480,000 is but a political move to blind the people of Atlanta to the lack of any planned program to better the housing or financial condition existing in our public school system."

"The school administration knows that Atlanta will not and can not vote such bonds, else it is but an example of the impractical and extravagant ideas of that group."

"That the school administration is not failing to meet its current contractual obligations by more than $800,000 a year is an established fact. No 'Practical Economy.'"

"The school administration knows that there is no immediate prospect of an increase in school revenues to meet this failure. Yet in a report of nearly 300 pages there is not a single recommendation of any practical economy."

"The sudden and acute willingness of the administration to recognize the deplorable housing conditions existing in our school system, and the impossible and impractical remedy suggested is intended only to pacify the people until after the city election September 2."

"The people of Atlanta realize that the only possible remedy is to confine our educational progress to one of sound and practical propositions—one that we can afford. We must omit our experimental program and permit some richer city be the proving grounds for radical educational theories."

"Teachers Pay Deficit." "Teachers and other employees of the school system are now paying the current deficit of more than $800,000 a year from their salaries. This cannot continue without seriously affecting the standards of instruction in our system."

"The solution lies with the people, and may be realized in the coming city election by electing a board of education pledged."

"1. To separate the academic and business departments of our school system."

"2. Create an advisory board of school principals to study and determine the academic program of our school system with the view of providing a definite plan of education less experimental and less expensive—one that will provide practical and

U. S. SEEKS PREVENTION OF LIQUOR SMUGGLING
Holland Joins in Cooperative
Pact With Five Other Foreign Nations.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(UP)—The treasury's fight on the foreign illicit liquor traffic was intensified tonight as government officials received assurances that Holland would join five other nations in preventing alcohol smuggling into the United States.

Treasury officials, in a formal statement, expressed pleasure at co-operation obtained from the other five nations, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Mexico and Cuba. Belgium joined the list August 1.

Treasury and state departments have been assured that Holland will take similar steps beginning in September. It will adopt the "landing certificate" plan, similar to that of some of the other agreements, which requires posting a bond on alcohol exported.

The bond would be forfeited unless the exporter produces authenticated customs documents showing that the alcohol was lawfully entered in a foreign port.

Treasury statistics showed only one suspected alcohol carrier has been reported off the Atlantic seaboard in the past six weeks. Formerly, dozens hovered off the north Atlantic coast.

The treasury released figures for July indicating success of its drive against the illicit liquor traffic. At the end of July, there were 325,900-193 gallons of spirits, an all-time peak, in bonded warehouses, 315,935-506 gallons. During the month, whisky production was 19,994,247 gallons. Total spirits production for the month, including whisky, rum, gin and brandy, was 21,719,915 gallons.

During the month, 5,822,618 gallons of spirits were withdrawn and 149,528 were removed for denaturation.

The treasury, in another report, said that 690 breweries produced 6,790,584 gallons of beer in July and that 8,525,003 gallons were on hand July 31.

The figures followed total collections of $80,018,409 in beer and liquor taxes during July, $12,700,000 more than in July 1935, and a new all-time peak.

Treasury officials said this indicated efficient enforcement of the liquor laws.

It was followed by a reception which brought to a close several days of entertaining including a party given for the bride couple by the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, in their private railway car.

Young Mr. and Mrs. Firestone will sail Wednesday on the Queen Mary for a three-month honeymoon in Europe.

SCHOOL REGISTRATION TO OPEN SEPTEMBER 4

Class Work, However, Will Not Begin Until 10 Days Later.

Atlanta elementary pupils and junior and senior high school students will begin the 1936-37 educational trek when they report for registration and payment of fees at their respective schools at 8:30 o'clock Friday morning, September 4. Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, announced yesterday.

Principals, supervisors, directors, librarians and clerks will report at city hall a week and a half before the registration date, at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. They will be on duty for the rest of the week to issue transcripts of records to students transferring to other schools and to students desiring to get copies of college entrance credits.

Regular school work for the day schools will begin September 8. Night schools will start work September 14. Registration will be about 61,000 on the opening day, equaling last year's opening day total, M. E. Coleman, director of census and attendance in the schools, estimated yesterday.

Total registration for last year was 68,293, he said, though the average daily attendance was 58,000 for the year.

Students desiring to obtain NYA scholarships should apply to principals of the junior and senior high schools, H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of high schools, said yesterday. The scholarships, which are granted to students in return for useful work in the library or laboratory, amount to $6 a month. Though applicants do not need to be on relief rolls, Hunter said, they must show that they need the money.

College students interested in the scholarships may apply through college registrars, he said.

WHITE SLAVERY WAR INTENSIFIED BY U. S.

Large Ring of Men and Women Arrested in Connecticut "Roundup."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Justice Department officials said today the arrest of a large ring of men and women in Connecticut this week on white slavery charges was only the first of a series of "clean-ups."

"The Department of Justice is intensifying its activities against white slave rings everywhere in the country," asserted J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. "The Connecticut ring was by no means an isolated case."

The arrests in Connecticut, which Hoover said rounded up "one of the most important white slavery groups," were made late yesterday after the chief of the G-men had spent three days in that area personally guiding preparations.

Thirteen men and women, plus three men arrested in New York, were taken into custody on white slavery charges and 13 others held as material witnesses.

Hoover said the ring operated in New York, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania, very much as other rings are suspected of operating elsewhere in the country. Investigators believe girls were taken to an apartment in New Haven, from which within 24 hours they were "booked" to disorderly houses in other states.

Most of their earnings, which Hoover estimated ran as high as $400 a week per girl, were alleged to have been turned over to others in exchange for "an occasional drinking party and wearing apparel of an inferior quality."

Special plantation melodies will be sung by a chorus of 50 voices and Annie Belle Hunnicutt, "singing cook," will render request numbers.

Among the ministers who will participate in the preaching are the Revs. C. H. S. Hunter, A. Powell, J. T. Wilkinson, A. L. Brewster, H. C. Carswell, E. H. Warley, G. A. Roberts and Drs. D. R. Fobbs, of Turner Theological Seminary; D. H. Stanton, American Bible Society, and J. F. Moses, presiding elder, South Atlanta district.

The meeting will continue through this week.

ARREST OF 'TERRORIST' DEMANDED BY DETROIT

Detention Asked Pending Hearing on Warrants for Effinger's Extradition.

DETROIT, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Michigan authorities demanded tonight that Lima, Ohio, police detain Virgil F. (Bert) Effinger, indicted with 21 others on criminal syndicalism charges in an alleged Black Legion plot to seize the federal government, pending a hearing on two warrants for his extradition.

Guy M. Jensen, assistant state's attorney general, said he would go through Lima Sunday en route to Columbus, and urge police there to lock Effinger up until Governor Martin L. Davey acts on the Michigan requisitions for him. Jensen said he expected to see Governor Davey Monday morning.

Effinger, an electrical contractor who was once an unsuccessful candidate for sheriff in Lima, was described in the affidavit on which the syndicalism charge was based as the "national commander" of the terrorist band of night riders, and as the leader in a proposed armed uprising to seize arsenals and federal buildings.

Declined to Hold Suspect.
"Chief of Police Ward Taylor, of Lima, called us this morning and said he was declining to hold Effinger until we filed certain affidavits with him," Chester P. O'Hara, an assistant attorney general, said today.

"He now has two sets of extradition papers, with affidavits attached, charging Effinger with criminal syndicalism and also with possessing six hand grenades during a Black Legion meeting here in 1935. I don't know what more he could want, and I regard his handling of the case as very unusual. Jensen may be able to get the matter straightened out Sunday, however."

Taylor said in Lima that his refusal to arrest Effinger was in accordance with advice given him by City Solicitor Charles W. Long, who said the warrant was not valid.

"We will arrest him when we get a proper warrant," Taylor said.

Effinger, reiterating his intention to fight extradition, was held probably by the Michigan authorities after his arrest. The contractor, who parried a direct question several weeks ago as to whether he was a Black Legion commander by asking "What if I am?" has called the charges against him "nonsense."

"I never heard of this fellow Dean (Dayton Dean, Black Legion 'executioner,' upon whose affidavits the charges against Effinger are partially based), until all this stuff came out in the papers," Effinger said. He has retained as his attorney, Clarence Miller, who defended members of the Dillinger gang at Lima.

State and city policemen and sheriff's deputies continued today to bring in some of those named in the syndicalism indictment, which was returned Friday by the state grand jury investigating the Black Legion. Nine of the 22 defendants, including Effinger, still are at large. The others were arrested at Lima, Ohio, and are being held in the county jail here.

Several of those indicted already were held for trial in other crimes attributed to the Black Legion, and most of the others had been questioned during the investigations which were set in motion by the terrorists' "execution" of Charles A. Poole, last May 12.

Alabama Expert Will Join Kreml For Traffic Safety Lecture Here

Evanston Authority To Outline His Control Measures at Chamber of Commerce Luncheon; 700 Invitations Issued and Public Urged To Attend.

Another traffic safety expert, Lawrence B. Tipton, Alabama state director of public safety, has been scheduled for a safety talk at the traffic safety luncheon to be sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce at the Atlanta Athletic Club at 12:30 o'clock Friday.

The principal address will be made by Lieutenant Frank M. Kreml, outstanding authority on traffic safety. He is co-organizer and director of the Traffic Safety Institute at Northwestern University and achieved fame as the organizer and director of the Bureau of Accident Prevention of the Evanston (Ill.) police department.

More than 700 invitations to attend the luncheon and lecture have been mailed Atlantaans. The Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday.

The public has been invited and reservations can be made by calling the Chamber of Commerce office.

Will Discuss Adaptation.
Lieutenant Kreml will give a comprehensive outline of his system and how it could be applied here. He is to discuss the causes of automobile accidents and point out how these causes may be eliminated.

An invitation will be extended Lieutenant Kreml by Mayor Key to come to Atlanta and install his "Evanston System." He is, at present, installing his plan in Miami. It is understood that Lieutenant Kreml and his assistants will come here in December and will conduct a six weeks' school for Atlanta policemen.

Recently he conducted a traffic school at the University of Alabama which was attended by members of the Atlanta police force.

All citizens who are interested in fighting the increasing number of auto accidents in our city will want to attend this luncheon and hear Lieutenant Kreml and Captain Tipton," said Walter C. Hendrix, chairman of the

Twelve Charged With SHIP RIOTING

Group Chained Selves to Nazi Ship, Delayed Departure.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Four men and eight women charged with delaying the liner's departure by nine minutes were arraigned in police court today on charges of disorderly conduct.

Allan Taub, counsel for the women prisoners, said they told him a ninth girl was "detained on the vessel."

Police, however, had no such report and Captain William Drechsel, rioting aboard the S. S. Bremen and marine superintendent of the North German Lloyd line, said he knew nothing about it.

Magistrate Henry H. Curran paroled the 12 prisoners on the condition that they return to the ship late last night, five minutes before scheduled sailing time.

Observers said a dozen young women wearing white sweatshirts were hoisted in scotch ladders and hoisted the small Japanese garrison and razed more than two-thirds of the buildings.

The bandits carried off hostages when several Japanese army bombing planes from Singing forced them to retreat.

The bandits apparently singled out Japanese or Koreans for their victims. Of those killed three were soldiers, two policemen and 27 civilian residents.

OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL TO BEGIN REGISTRATION

Success of 1935-36 Term Will Draw Heavy Enrollment, Is Belief.

Registration of students at the Atlanta Opportunity School will begin August 23 and will continue through September 3. The record made by the institution during the 1935-36 term, when a total of 3,000 students were enrolled and more than 700 withdrew after obtaining jobs, is expected to attract hundreds of applicants.

A unit of the Atlanta public school system, the opportunity school is located at Spring and Baker streets, in the downtown business section. The training offered by the school is designed to meet the needs of adults who are employed or are temporarily unemployed, or of young persons who have been compelled to quit school in order to earn a living.

The registration office will be open from 9 until 3 o'clock daily except on Saturday and Monday. Since many inquiries have been received, Charles H. Kinkaid, principal, urges applicants to register at an early date.

A registration fee of $1 is required with a $1 deposit for the use of free text books. Persons living outside the city limits, including minors whose parents or guardians live outside the city, are required by a rule of the board of education to pay in advance a nonresident fee of $10 a semester. A small fee is charged for material used in courses on beauty culture and on the use of office appliances and machines.

The school offers courses in more than 20 subjects, including trade millinery, trade sewing, beauty parlor, construction drawing, applied electricity, radio, sheet metal layout, blue print reading, general continuation subjects, commercial subjects, business English, spelling, commercial arithmetic, filing, office practice, dictation, commercial law, salesmanship, comptometer, calculator, bookkeeping, machine, home crafts and waitress training.

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS

Free school books furnished by the state department of education will save Fulton parents approximately $4,500 this year. Jere A. Wells, superintendent of the county schools, announced yesterday.

This savings will be effective only in the first six grades, as the state will supply only four basic books for each of these grades.

Superintendent Wells, in urging parents to report to their respective schools during the week of August 31, pointed out that the state will, less the cost of rental now charged by the county for furnishing all school materials to pupils.

The free textbooks will be reading, writing, arithmetic and spelling, causing a reduction of approximately 10 per cent in the cost of books to the county. However, the rental cost will not be reduced that much because under the rental plan the county also supplies several more expensive books, paper, pencils and all materials needed by the child in school.

The reduction in cost this year will be 25 cents in the first grade, 30 cents in the second, 35 cents in the third and fourth grades, and 40 cents in the fifth and sixth grades. The new schedule of rental charges will be: First grade, $2.25; second, $2.70; third, $3.15; fourth, $3.15; fifth, $3.60; and sixth, $4.10. Pupils in these grades also receive books on English, geography, health, history and civics.

School will begin in the county September 8, but parents must not forget to appear for report during the week of August 31, between 8:30 and 2:30 o'clock, Wells said.

6 STATE PROJECTS APPROVED BY PWA

$67,500 Grant Is Made to Richmond County for Jail.

The Regional Public Works Administration headquarters here announced yesterday it had received the government's offer of formal contracts for six Georgia construction contracts.

B. M. Hall, PWA district engineer, said they were to be dispatched immediately to the applicants for loans or grants for signature preliminary to issuance of the grants.

The offers, constituting 45 per cent of the estimated cost of the projects, embraced the following:

Augusta—Richmond county jail, $67,500 grant; city hall repairs, $11,985 grant; medical school classroom building, $33,750 grant.

Parker school district, Toombs county—$2,500 grant and $3,000 loan; Rockmart, Ga.—$15,120 grant.

Macon—Lanier high school gymnasium addition, $19,080 grant. Other projects included Macon, Savannah, Columbus, Rome, Griffin and St. Simons Island, Hall said, were "still pending."

RETAIL SALES GAIN Trade for Week Exceeds Expectations.

Retail and department store trade exceeded expectations last week with a strong demand for house furnishings and winter clothing, merchants of the sixth federal reserve district said.

Bank clearings gained a bit, while more than $13,000,000 in tobacco sales were reported last week, Georgia's department store business for the first two weeks in August was described by one executive as "unusually good."

There are higher sales checks and increased transactions," he said.

The Federal Reserve Bank reported clearings of $55,100,000 for the week compared with $50,000,000 for the past week.

Production of steel in the Birmingham area continued at 63 1-2 per cent of capacity.

Man's Luck Piles Up, But All of It's Bad

Trouble piled high on a 23-year-old white man giving the name of James R. Singer, of an Anniston avenue address, here.

Here's his history for the past week. County police Tuesday raided a place frequented through Georgia near the federal penitentiary, and confiscated 60 cases of whisky. Friday night they raided 68 Edgewood avenue and got 15 cases of liquor and Singer.

He was placed in Fulton tower and charged with ownership of the 69 and the 15 cases. His bond was set at $1,500.

Yesterday afternoon the officers confiscated 40 cases more at a house at 968 Linum street. This also was charged to Singer and his bond was increased to $2,000. He had not made the bail yesterday afternoon.

Thomas, Leonard Face Smokies in Twin Bill Here Today

Comes a letter from Jumping Joey Gould, manager of World's Champion Jimmy Braddock.

Mr. Gould is pained. Deeply.

There were insinuations there was something funny about the hurt finger which Jimmy Braddock had and which caused the offing of the Schmeling-Braddock fight.

Now that Max Schmeling has sailed back to the Fatherland, Joey Gould hopes the insinuations he and his man were part of a manipulation to spring another Louis-Schmeling fight on the public, will cease. And that those who suspected it will ache in their consciences, if any. Which he seems to doubt.

"I have been about crazy," he writes. "Jim's arms and elbows were sore. He couldn't land a punch without suffering. So, I wasn't going to let him go in there against Schmeling in that condition."

"He will be ready to begin training in three or four months and will be ready for the Dutchman in May or June. I hope you can come up to our training camp and be with us. With best regards to all my Atlanta friends from the champion and myself."

Which is that. There was so much suspicion in the air when the Braddock-Schmeling fight was called off immediately after the Louis victory over Sharkey, the air resembled that of a room at a political smoker.

But it must be admitted this was dissipated when Schmeling refused to fight Louis again—asking what he had to gain except money—and sailed for home. He added that he didn't need any more money. The prize ring has been very good to Maxie Schmeling.

If Jimmy Braddock has arthritis, as the doctors say, he can receive a lot of first-rate sympathy from those who have had, or have, the same trouble. It is said to be comparable, in pain, with waiting in the papa's room at your favorite maternity hospital.

OUR BRAVE LADS.

Our Brave Lads, the Crackers, come home today for the last home-stay of the season with 12 games to be played. They are back again for one day in September but this hardly can be termed a "stay."

The peanut appears to be in the bag. The boys hardly can drop that. They are leading by a wide margin and can play .500 baseball and still beat out a determined threat.

Most interesting is the drive which Larry Gilbert's Pelicans are making. They have waited later than usual but never does a Gilbert club fail to finish in style.

The collapse of the Vols, who used to try to frighten rivals by slipping into town and saying "Boo" in a very loud voice, also is interesting. The Vols folded up before the Pelicans. And it would not be surprising if the Vols finished in the second division. Their second-place lead is fairly formidable but they are slipping very fast.

The Lookouts are floundering under Joe Bonowitz. They have ceased to be a first-division threat and will be in for another revamping during the winter.

The season-long pennant races are the only real tests. Only the clubs that actually have it can survive a full season's schedule.

The play-off for the Shaughnessy season may find the Crackers in a hot spot. In fact, it undoubtedly will find them so situated.

New Orleans has Ralph Winegarner, a pitcher who can twist our nine into knots, and Bill Perrin is no easy man to beat. The short series, three games out of five, is an inadequate test for a champion just as an 18-hole golf match is no fair test for a golf champion. But that's how they are to be played.

The Crackers will have to bear down all the way to finish out front in those games and move on to Texas for the Dixie Series.

HARRY KELLEY'S LUCK.

Harry Kelley's luck ran out yesterday. He never had a great deal of it. But what there was of it ran out yesterday as the big fellow went under the surgeon's knife to have his appendix removed.

He had won 15 ball games for the Philadelphia Athletics and was something of a sensation in baseball circles. A rookie at the age of 30 he had beaten all the good clubs and would have, had not his vermiform appendix got him into trouble, won near 20 games this season.

The operation was successful. And he will be back next spring. He has one of those rubber arms and should be good for another year or so as a pitcher for Connie Mack. One can't help but wonder what he might have done had he got his chance four or five years ago. He had control then. And control is his chief asset.

His heart was in the major league play. He had lost it for play in the Southern.

And he'll be back with all the more ambition when 1937's season comes up.

OLE DIZ'S THEORY.

Diz Dean, the finest pitcher in baseball and one of the best the game has ever had, comes up with an interesting theory.

He believes he can save his arm and give himself added years in baseball by taking no warm-ups before games. He plans to get on the mound, throw four or five to loosen up, and then start pitching.

He points out a pitcher pitches the extent of several innings on the warm-up rubber before each game. When all he wants is for his arm to be loose.

Red Torkelson, who used to be something of a clown in the Southern league, always used to light a match to warm up his arm.

"Go out there and warm up," Kid Elberfeld would say.

And Red would take a match, light it and hold it under his arm and then go out and pitch. He was a pretty fair chunker, too.

There might be something in Diz Dean's theory. But at

Appendicitis Operation Removes Harry Kelley From Athletic Lineup

Harry Kelley, for the past two seasons an Atlanta pitcher and this year the rookie sensation of the American league despite his 30 years of age, yesterday was operated on for appendicitis.

The emergency operation was performed only a few hours before Kelley was to have appeared on the mound seeking his 16th victory for the Athletics. He had won 15 games and a place on the all-star rookie team for the year. He was a leading pitcher in the Southern league for almost a decade. The picture above was one of the first made of him in his new A's uniform.

Kelley Is Resting Well; Seems Lost for Season

Former Cracker Was In Midst of Brilliant Season With Lowly Athletics.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Harry Kelley, 30-year-old pitcher who won 15 games for the tail-end Athletics this season, lost his appendix today and with it his chances for extending his string of victories to the even 20 at which he was aiming.

Kelley, who joined the Philadelphia club at the beginning of this season after ten years in the Southern association, will be out for the rest of the year, Dr. Frank Baird, club physician, said.

The hurler was resting comfortably after Dr. Frederick A. Bothe performed the operation at noon. He was stricken early this morning.

Connie Mack drafted Kelley from Atlanta and this year was the veteran pitcher's first appearance in the big leagues.

After he recovers, Kelley plans to return to his home at Vandalia, Ark.

Kelley joins the Crackers during the 1936 season, coming to Atlanta from Memphis. His work played an important part in the Crackers' winning their first flag in 10 years last season. He also won a Dixie Series game.

The right-handed star, who was well on his way to the 20-victory mark for the last-place Athletics, a feat that certainly would have ranked him among the greatest rookies ever to crash the big show, was a 20-game winner for five seasons in the Southern.

He apparently was just hitting his stride when taken ill, having been most effective in beating the Yankees once and Red Sox twice in his last three starts.

Jack Mooney Plays In Nashville Tourney

NASHVILLE, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Eight high-ranking netmen head a brilliant field entered in the annual city tennis tournament that starts Monday at Belle Meade Club.

Kimberly Peterson, five times city singles champion, tops the eight, which includes: Jack Mooney, formerly a ranking player in the south; Merriam Cunningham, Rhodes scholar who attained the No. 1 notch at Oxford this spring; Kendall Cram, a high-ranking collegian; and Hugh Shelton.

Julius Hughes Wins Radium Tourney

By Roy White.

ALBANY, Ga., Aug. 22.—Dr. Julius Hughes, Atlanta's open champion, added another championship, the tenth annual Radium Springs invitation, to his long list of golf achievements here this afternoon. Hughes defeated Richard Tift, Radium Springs ace, 3-2, in the 36-hole finals.

Hughes' victory today was the fourth straight for Atlanta players. Joe Horacek won last year, Stanley Holditch triumphed in 1934, and Tommy Barnes won in 1935. Lee Fowler and Lyman Hunter are other former winners from Atlanta.

Hughes and Tift fought their way to the finals through the strongest field of stars ever entered here. And in their path to the finals, some of the state's outstanding stars were left by the wayside.

It was the first time that either player had advanced to the finals, although Tift has played in the championship flight many times before. Hughes played in the tourney three years ago, but today was his first triumph, and the tenth straight year in which no player has won the title.

Connie Mack Eyes Bud Thomas Deal

Connie Mack has invited Earl Mann, president of the Crackers, to Philadelphia for a conference relative to securing the services of Luther (Bud) Thomas, ace pitcher of the Crackers.

Mann said he might accept.

The Cracker president repeatedly has said Mr. Mack would be given first choice of Cracker players because of past favors rendered the Atlanta club.

Several big league clubs are interested in buying Thomas, but Mann intends to give Connie Mack first choice.

Mack helped the Crackers last year, sending Alex Hooks here when Harry Taylor was injured. This year he responded with Emil Malibo when Peck Hamel was stricken with appendicitis.

Eighteen Golfers Seek Four Places in Amateur

Charlie Yates Heads Qualifiers for National at East Lake; Tom Wright Entered.

By Ralph McGill.

George Sargent reports the No. 2 East Lake course in magnificent shape for the 18 entries who Tuesday will compete here for four places in the National Amateur golf championship to be played at Garden City, L. I., on September 14-19.

The East Lake professional believes the youngest entry in the list, Dan Yates, brother of Charlie Yates, has an excellent chance to place.

"I suppose Charlie is the outstanding entry from this district," said the East Lake professional. "I think his kid brother has a chance. There are a number of fine golfers coming from out of Atlanta."

They will find the No. 2 course in great shape. The greens are just right. The fairways are too. And the rough is really tough. It will cause a lot of trouble to the players who stay out of the fairways.

The Tennessee district was abolished by the U. S. G. A. and this year Tennessee seeks its entries to Atlanta for qualifying.

Coming from Knoxville is Tennessee's chief threat, Tommy Wright, of the Cherokee Club. He recently won the state title.

Dan Sage Jr. comes back to Atlanta golf, being one of those entered. Dr. Julius Hughes, who qualified for the amateur last year, is not entered. Crawford Rainwater and Charles Daniels, who qualified last year, again are seeking places, as is Charlie Yates.

Kid Brown, Georgia state champion, is entered from the Athens club. Athens also sends Rosser Little and Jim Dudley.

Alvin Everett, Rome's sensational sophomore golfer, is entered from the Druid Hills Club, where he holds an Atlanta membership.

Thirty-six holes of medal play will determine four places and three alternates for the amateur competition. Play begins in the morning of Tuesday at 9 o'clock and in the afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

With Lawson Little in professional golf, the amateur field is regarded as being wide open. Walter Emery, of Oklahoma, who went to the finals with Little at Cleveland last September, will be one of the favorites, as will Atlanta's Charlie Yates.

The pairings and starting times for the championships will be announced Tuesday.

CHAMPIONS OPEN LAST HOME STAY WITH LONG LEAD

President Mann Announces 'Men's Night' for Monday, Aug. 31.

By Jack Troy.

The champion Crackers, winning five out of the eight games on the latest road trip, are back for the last home stand of the season.

Series of four games are scheduled with Knoxville, Memphis and Little Rock. The Crackers will be at home through September 3.

A lead of nine games is held by the Crackers, who own the 12-game home stand in a double-header with the Knoxville Smokies this afternoon at Ponce de Leon park. The opening game is scheduled at 2 o'clock.

The Monday game will be played as part of today's double-header and the teams will rest Monday. The third game will be played Tuesday night and the series will end Wednesday night.

Memphis and Little Rock will follow.

President Earl Mann returned in advance of the team with the great announcement for the faithful men fans of Atlanta. Next Monday night, August 31, will be "stag night." The men will be admitted free, with the ladies paying.

Little Rock will play next Monday night, instead of in the afternoon as originally scheduled. Tuesday night will be the regular ladies' night, when the men go back on the cash and carry basis.

FIRST FOR MEN.

It is the first time the men fans have been recognized. They simply will pay the dime tax and see a ball game free. The ladies have had their nights all season and so surely they won't mind paying the price of admission on this occasion. All the Little Rock games will be played at night. The Thursday game will be ladies' night.

Anyway, the Crackers are back and all set to clinch their bid for the second straight Southern league pennant. Luther (Bud) Thomas will pitch the first game this afternoon and Emil Leonard will work in the nightcap.

Our Crackers have not been smelling their second straight pennant, but one must admit the perfume is growing stronger.

They have only 25 more games to play, with almost half of them at home. They are playing well over .500 ball, having lost all traces of the recent slump.

Granting that they are playing good and consistent baseball, let's suppose they suddenly went into a nose dive and lost 15 of the next 25 games. Then all Nashville, the second-place team that got out of Sulphur Dell recently and thought the change of air was the reason for a pennant waiting before their nostrils—then, all Nashville would have to do would be to win 20 of their remaining 27 games to get a

The standings would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Atlanta	92	62	.597
Nashville	92	62	.597

But what if the Crackers didn't slump quite as bad as all that and won 12 while losing 13 of the last 25 games?

JUST A BREEZE.

Nashville then could go right ahead and win the pennant by taking 23 of their remaining 27 games. They would lose only four games, mind you.

In this event the standings would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Atlanta	94	60	.610
Nashville	95	59	.614

The Vols haven't been playing any such ball and are not likely to do so. By winning 22 of the remaining 27 games if the Crackers lost 13 of their next 25 games, however, And the Vols aren't likely to get so much as an even break in their remaining games, judging by their present pace.

So, to all intents and purposes, the pennant is in the bag. The Vols have a mathematical chance. But it's too slim to consider.

Only two other teams have won two pennants in a row in the Southern league. The Pelicans, under Larry Gilbert, have done it twice in modern years. And the Barons have done it once.

And the Crackers, seemingly, are just before joining the parade. It would be the first time since 1885 1886 that a Cracker team had won the flag two straight years.

The way the race is going now, Nashville will have to rally to hold second place. The Pelicans and the Barons and the Travelers are closing in fast.

Bill Reese Halted In Doubles Match

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines, Iowa, defending champion in the Riviera tennis tournament, won his way into the finals late today by defeating Frank Stewart, Los Angeles, 7-5, 6-4, 6-1.

Darkness fell before other matches in the men's doubles and the women's singles had been completed.

In the men's doubles, Coggeshall and William Reese, Atlanta, Ga., started their semi-final match, with Sutter and Ramsey, Peoria, Memphis, Tenn. Each had won one set, 7-5 when play was called.

Meagher Admits Auburn Good; Tide Lightest, Greenest in Years

VET PLAINSMEN NOT GIVEN EDGE OVER 1935 CLUB

Difficult Schedule Indicates Victory Outlook; Two Holes Gaping.

AUBURN, Ala., Aug. 22.—Predicting another good team for Alabama Polytechnic Institute this year, Coach Jack Meagher will mobilize his Tiger football troops on Drake field Tuesday, September 1, for their first practice of the season. A squad of close to 50 will report on September 1 for Auburn's opening drill.

Another prediction from Coach Meagher is that his team will give a good account of itself in every game; but he will not forecast the number of games the Plainsmen will win or lose. A cross-country schedule of ten games has been arranged for the Tigers and it is very doubtful if any club in the country will be called upon to play as difficult a schedule as the one facing the Plainsmen. The hard card makes it unlikely Alabama Poly will finish the 1936 campaign with a clean slate.

14 SENIORS

On the squad of 46 Coach Meagher is counting on being Auburn's grid dependables this coming autumn are 14 seniors, 12 juniors and 20 sophomores including 19 lettermen. The monogram group gives Auburn strong fortification at center, guards, ends, quarterback and right halfback. A shortage of experienced candidates for tackle, left halfback and fullback places these three important positions in the uncertain class. How well the non-tried performers at these posts come through will come pretty close to determining Alabama Poly's fate on the gridiron during the 1936 season.

America's No. 1 center, Captain

Walter Gilbert, returns to take care of the pivot duties and he is ably understood by Lester Antley, Milton Bagby and Sophomore Malverna Morgan. Starting guard duties will be assigned Altona Moore, Captain Frank Gantt and Big Chief McCroskey, with Letterman Wesley Loflin, Fred Gilliam and Ralph Sivell and Sophomores Everett Smith and Malcolm Crowder competing for the reserve spots.

Pateron's loss leaves a trio of "A" wearers, Herbert Roton, Hugh Rodgers and Fred Holman, and Sophomores Bo Russell, George Wolff, and Thorpe and Bill Nichols as the leading aspirants for the tackle positions. Manning the flanks will be either Joel Evans, Harry Williams and Rex McKissick, three letter winners; Frank Hamm, junior carryover, and Sophomores Oscar Burford or Milton Howell.

BEST LOOKING BACKFIELD

Best looking backfield sets at Auburn this year are Quarterbacks Sidney Scarborough and Joe Stewart, a pair of heady veterans, and John Davis, reserve in 1935, and Morris Cook, Marion Walker, who also might be used at halfback, and Osmo Smith, three sophomores. Halfbacks Bill Hitchcock, Jimmie Fenton and John Paul Tipper, three letter winners, and Blake, senior holdover, and Sophomores Speck Kelly, who now looks like the logical one to step into Mitchell's shoes. Tommie Edwards, Ralph O'Gwynne, Francis Riddle, Bill Mims and Bill Ellis, and Fullbacks Wilton Kilgore, Southeastern conference quarter-mile champion, who has performed meritoriously for the last two seasons; Dutch Heath and Floyd McElroy, a pair of juniors, and three 1935 freshmen graduates, Telham Stitz, Kermit Weaver and George Gerakitis.

FORTY PLAYERS TO GREET CODY

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Josh Cody, the University of Florida's new football coach and athletic director, today greeted 40 players he had been invited to turn out for the first practice of the season scheduled for Tuesday, September 1.

The new coach, while cutting down on the number of players he had called back what it considers the cream of the 1935 varsity and freshman squads, Cody stated, Other players will report for practice when school opens September 15.

With a 10-game schedule as its assignment, and a new system of play installed last February, Cody stated, he would concentrate on the 40 men invited back in hopes of developing a winning machine before the season opens October 3 here with Citadel of Charleston, S. C.

Cody is changing the Notre Dame system used by Charlie Blanton and Dennis K. (Dutch) Stanley, former Gator mentors, to a double wing-back formation.

FIRST BUYER

AUBURN, Ala., Aug. 22.—Zac P. Smith Jr. is the first Auburn alumnus in Birmingham to order tickets for the Tigers' football games this fall. Mr. Smith purchased tickets for Auburn's encounters with Birmingham-Southern and Louisiana State.

OPENING TILT

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Aug. 22.—Alabama will open its grid schedule September 26 against Howard College in Deany stadium. The Tide men and Bulldogs played a 7-0 tie last year in the opener.

Football Ticket Sales Indicate Banner Season in Georgia

Georgia Tech athletic officials yesterday said sales of football season tickets for the 1936 campaign were up about 40 per cent over those of last year. Indications are it will be Tech's best season in attendance since 1928. Reports from Georgia also indicate an up on the sales at Athens. The scene above is from the Duke-Tech game of last season and the ticket is one to the first "big" game at the Flats—Kentucky and Tech.

Prep Practice Jackets and Bulldogs Now Going To Draw Big Crowds Strong

Tech Reports 40 Per Cent Increase in Sales; Both Elevens Worried Over Early Tests.

By Ralph McGill.

With the opening of the season less than three weeks away, all of Atlanta's prep elevens get down to some real work this week.

More than 50 players are working out on the shores of Lake Rabun under the guidance of Coach Shorty Boyd, Boys' High coach. The Purple tried the training camp idea last season and then went ahead and captured the southern grid championship. So they're again training in the mountains of north Georgia.

After an extended training period the squad will return to Atlanta to begin some 40-odd other candidates in working out at Piedmont park. With the backfield in very good shape, Coach Boyd's biggest worry will come in trying to find the type of ends to replace Gene Ransom and George Roberts.

The Tech High Smithies, the Purple's ancient rivals, didn't let Boys' High put anything over on them in the way of starting practice early. They've been practicing around under the brooding sun at Grant field for the past week. Coach Tolbert will issue uniforms tomorrow and plans a light scrimmage later in the week. The Smithies will send four of their lightest teams in years and one lacking in experience. But they have an abundance of good material and should do quite a strong eleven.

Gabe Tolbert, Smithie coach, is being aided by Sid Scarborough, former Tech High star and now a quarterback for Auburn. Tolbert is working on the line, which will average only 165 pounds, while Scarborough gives him time to tutoring the backs.

G. M. A. elevators will start their drills Wednesday afternoon. Like Boys' High, they are to train on mountain air. After a session at their camp in north Georgia, they will return to the College Park gridiron for more extensive workouts.

Friday morning Coaches Rufus Goodwin and Cliff McCaughey issued uniformed 30-odd candidates for the Commercial Red Raiders. About 15 more players are expected to report to the mentors at Grant field. The plan of Claude Sellers and Fred Lloyd in the backfield and George Jones, Pug Reynolds and Ed Davis, in the line, will be missed, however, from last year. Marist begins practice tomorrow afternoon on their Ivy street gridiron. The outlook isn't very bright for the Cats, who will have extreme difficulty in replacing stars of last year. Weight and experience will be lacking. Despite his lack of material, Coach Louis Van Houten is sure to put out his usual scrapping eleven.

NEGRO TENNIS FINALS

ZENIA, Ohio, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Lloyd Scott, 19-year-old Prairie View, Texas, negro, stroked his way to victory over Harmon Fitch, of Winston-Salem, N. C., late today to capture the national negro men's tennis singles title, 6-4, 2-6, 1-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Bulldogs To Wear Whipcord Breeches

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 22.—Whipcord breeches will replace the knitted type as the mode for the Georgia Bulldog grid players this fall, Coach Harry Mehre said today.

When the Athens eleven sallies forth to battle they will be attired in an ensemble of alumni-choreographed panache with red jersey letter in white. Headgear will be coal black.

"We expect the new outfits to wear longer and possibly be bit cooler," the Bulldog mentor stated.

Bigger letters fore and aft will be used.

MOCCASINS LOOK TO GOOD ELEVEN

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Despite gloomy statements from Coach "Scraps" Moore, the University of Chattanooga Moccasins are highly regarded by their followers and over the Dixie conference as contenders for the gridiron crown won by Howard in 1935.

The Moccasin eleven finished second last year, an upset loss to Mississippi college spoiling a perfect record within conference ranks.

This year they face a tough conference schedule minus the services of five regulars and several capable substitutes, but the returning veterans include "King Kong" Klein, one of the conference's most capable players in 1934 and 1935, the giant Martell at center, and the 240-pound Coyle Ricketts at a tackle post.

Eleven letter men will face stiff competition from a capable grid sophomores. If there is any shortage of material, it seems to be in the backfield, where "Hoppy" Elmore will be the only returning regular.

"We will not be as good as last year," Moore says, but none of his opponents are looking to the Chattanooga game with any degree of confidence.

Howard, hard hit by graduation but still blessed with better than average material, played the Moccasins at Chattanooga Thanksgiving. Football fans already are discussing the possibility of this contest deciding the title.

THE SCHEDULE FOLLOWS:
September 26—Tennessee at Knoxville.

'Sportscast' Goes On Air at Athens

"Sportscast," an up-to-the-minute program on sports, will be inaugurated over the air via station WFTL at Athens beginning September 1, Felton Gordon, a senior at the University of Georgia, a sports correspondent for The Atlanta Constitution, and former sports editor of the Athens Banner, will be the program's host.

"Sportscast" is a live wire and is considered an authority on college sports. He plans to bring fans a daily coverage of Bulldog practices, and expects to interview over the air the many celebrities who attend the football games in Athens this fall.

ALABAMA LOOKS TO YOUNGSTERS TO PLUG HOLES

Training Opens Sept. 1; Riley Smith, Whitley, Francis Missing.

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Aug. 22.—The youngest, greenest and lightest squad in many years will report to Coach Frank Thomas and assistants September 1. Fifty-six athletes are expected to report for duty for the initial practice session.

Gone will be such luminaries from the 1935 team as Paul Bryant, Jimmy Walker and Hillman Walker, ends; Kay Francis, center; Jim Whitley, tackle; Riley Smith, Temple Williamson, Roy Goldberg, quarterbacks; Charlie Stapp and Jimmy Angelich, halfbacks, and Rudy Rhoads, fullback.

Among the seasoned players returning will be Bill Peters, Monk Minsky and Tarzan White, guards; Bill Young, Jim Ryba, Jim Radford and Hamp Lyon, tackles; Lamar Moore, center; Ben McLeod, and Joe Riley, Joe Kilgore, Johnny Roberts and Young Booser, halfbacks, and Captain Bubber Nisbet, fullback.

Much of the Tide strength will be up to the newcomers on the squad. There are sure to be many new faces on the Tide team this season. The sophomores and reserves will have to plug up the holes left by the graduates of the 1935 eleven.

Kay Francis will be missed at the center post, where he was a tower of strength both on the defense and the offense. Lamar Moore is the only sophomore coming back. The newcomers will consist of Jack Macchittoff, George Cox and Eddie Maguire. Macchittoff was a redshirt last fall, while the other two were frosh.

The biggest loss in the backfield is Riley Smith, All-American quarterback last season. To make matters worse, his two understudies, Temple Williamson and Le Roy Goldberg, have quit school. This means that Coach Thomas will have to start from scratch. The four aspirants for the signal calling job, all green and inexperienced, will be Henry Cochran, Elbert Hughes, Bernard Alex and Art Granger.

Joe Riley and Joe Kilgore are back at left half, but Jimmy Angelich will be missed on the other side. Young Booser will be most experienced of the right halfbacks. Johnny Roberts played some little last year, while Elbert Hughes, Buddy Beard and Vic Bradford are sophomores. George Zivich, Hubert Clements and Sam Gunter will form the supporting cast for the two ends at left halfback.

Captain Bubber Nisbet will be ready to handle the fullbacking chores. He will be assisted by four sophomores and one reserve. The sophomores will be Herman Wickie, Charlie Holm, John Hoben and Henry Giardi. John Bludworth was a reserve last fall.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Millard (Dixie) Howell, Alabama Rose Bowl star of 1935, will become backfield coach for Loyola University (New Orleans).

Announcement of the appointment was made today by "Moon" Ducote, athletic director of Loyola. Ducote said Howell would report by September 1 as assistant to Head Coach Eddie Reel and that this addition would greatly strengthen the coaching staff of Loyola.

Ducote said Howell also would have charge of varsity punters and passers, departments in which as a player he excelled. He ended a 30-40 yard drive in the season of 1934 while a member of the famous Alabama team—Rose Bowl champions.

Bobbitt, Scoring Amazing Upset, Meets Guernsey for State Title

RUSSELL WINNER AFTER DROPPING FIRST TWO SETS

Young Star Rallies After Rain; Vallebuona Wins Ladies' Title.

By Jack Troy.

Sandy-haired Russell Bobbitt, seeded No. 5, was a beaten player in the semi-finals of men's singles before it rained yesterday. He was down two sets and was behind two-love in games in the Georgia state tournament at Georgia Tech.

After the rain, Bobbitt came back on a wet court, caught up the deficit and went on to win the match from Malon Courts in five sets, 3-6, 1-6, 10-8, 6-2, 6-4.

This match is offered as the greatest upset in modern tennis history here.

Courts, seeded No. 3, simply was invincible before the rain. He never hit his shots better. Bobbitt was futile. He was not on his game and made numerous errors.

COURTS BRILLIANT.

He was forced into many errors by Courts, who seldom missed anything he tried—lob, volley, single drop shots, placements or a hard shot. Courts was poised for the kill, as it were, when a sudden downpour brought a cessation of activity.

And the score, as mentioned, was all in Courts' favor. He led, 6-3, 6-1, 2-0.

Bobbitt, complaining of a minor stomach ailment, went home and rested. He came back on the wet court and the fans have never seen such a comeback as Bobbitt staged.

Bobbitt, under-cutting his shots, had the ball hugging the clay turf. Malon's timing went bad. Bobbitt started rushing the net. He was having a great time on the wet clay. Courts began to tire and Bobbitt, sensing the possibilities, tore into him.

GAINS CONFIDENCE.

Bobbitt gained the confidence he needed by taking the third set, 10-8. He went on from there to win the last two sets, 6-2, 6-4.

And so the amazing victory for Russell Bobbitt will go down as the greatest comeback staged here in modern tennis history.

Before it rained, Bobbitt had no more chance than a powder puff in a whirlwind. He was beaten, licked, vanquished, demoralized, routed and disgusted. Courts might have gone on to win the third and deciding set without the loss of a game, the way things were going.

Sometimes it's the little things that make the big difference. Although many will tell you that rain of yesterday was no little thing.

Which it wasn't. It cost Malon Courts a final berth in the Georgia state singles. And that is not supposition.

PLAY FOR TITLE.

Bobbitt and Frank Guernsey meet for the state title at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Guernsey entered the finals by defeating Dr. Kells Boland in straight sets.

After he plays Guernsey in the men's singles, Bobbitt will take on Don Buffington in the junior finals. He's going to have a very busy afternoon.

Courts and Jimmy Halvestad defaulted in the men's doubles, being unable to play Monday. And so the title went to Guernsey and Vernon Marcum, the second-seeded tandem. Courts and Halvestad, the defending champions, defaulted here, too.

A promising final match is scheduled in the finals of the Georgia state singles. Bobbitt won a set from Guernsey in the recent Alabama state tournament. He'll make a battle of it.

VALLEBUONA WINNER.

Gladys Vallebuona, attractive, flashing-eyed brunette who hits a tennis ball like a masculine player, is the new women's tennis champion of Georgia.

Miss Vallebuona added the state title to the city championship which she won recently. And so a new star is risen today in Georgia tennis ranks.

Carrying the support of a large gallery, Miss Vallebuona yesterday defeated Miss Dorothy Roberts, also of Atlanta, 6-3, 6-4, in the finals of the Georgia Tech courts.

A brisk wind upset the timing of the shots a bit, but the match was most interesting. Miss Vallebuona insisted that she played altogether poorly, but the consensus of opinion was otherwise.

UPSET MRS. COYNE.

All through the tournament, including her upset of Mrs. E. Taylor Coyne, defending champion, Miss Vallebuona has played remarkably well.

Spectators have been impressed by the force of her shots off the forehand and backhand and the control she has over placements.

Miss Vallebuona is comparatively new in state competition. Less than three years she has come from nowhere, really, to win both the city and state titles in one year. She has a bright future.

Miss Roberts made a grand showing in the tournament. Unheralded, she survived the eliminations and defeat of favored Mrs. Gladys Vallebuona of Talladega, Ala., in the semi-finals.

Then, too, the experience of Miss Vallebuona who has had considerably more tournament play, hurt Mrs. Roberts' chances. She made a fine match of it, all things considered.

Here are the Finalists--and the Women's Champion--in Georgia State Tennis Tournament at Tech

Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., seeded No. 1, and outstanding favorite to win the Georgia state tennis title, is shown hitting a backhand shot at top left. Guernsey defeated Dr. Kells Boland, of Atlanta, in straight sets to enter the finals. And he will play Russell Bobbitt, right, in the finals this afternoon.

Bobbitt made the most amazing comeback in Atlanta tennis history to defeat Malon Courts in five sets and gain the final round. Bobbitt is in the finals of both juniors' and men's singles and both matches are scheduled today. Miss Gladys Vallebuona, center, won the women's title yesterday, defeating Miss Dorothy Roberts, of Atlanta, in straight sets. The tournament, which ends this afternoon, drew one of the finest fields in history. It has been conducted brilliantly by Bill Lufner for the Atlanta Lawn Tennis Association. Knoxville Bombards Chicks for 11-7 Win

Webb, Blair and Tyler Lead 16-Hit Assault; Lookouts Beat Barons, 7 to 4.

By the Associated Press.

Earl Webb, Rabbits Blair and John Tyler took charge of a ball game for Knoxville yesterday and overwhelmed the Chicks, 11 to 7.

Webb homered for the sixteenth time this season and singled three times to drive in four runs. It was his fourth home run in three days. Blair tripled and doubled to drive in five runs, while Tyler got five hits in as many at bats, scoring each time he got on base.

Duke, Memphis outfielder, hit his fourteenth homer of the season. Paul Paynick, right-hand hurler, formerly with the El Dorado, Ark., team, hurled the last four innings for the Chicks, allowing seven hits and three runs. He was signed shortly before the game.

Chattanooga's Lookouts battled Charley George out of the box in the third inning last night to salvage the final contest of a four-game series with the Barons. The score was 7 to 4.

The Nashville-New Orleans game was rained out. Atlanta and Little Rock were not scheduled.

SMOKIES 11; CHICKS 7.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 22.—(AP) Reba Morton, dainty Knoxville mermaid, shattered two records and Ish Williams, of Lindale, Ga., broke another today as the Union's annual swimming meet closed.

Miss Morton covered the 100-yard free-style route for senior women in 1:05.8 to blot out the mark of 1:06.2 set by Virginia Ashe Hill, of Atlanta, in 1925. In the 220-yard free style, senior women, the Knoxville miss was timed in 2:55.2 to better another record owned by Mrs. Hill, who had covered the distance in 2:58 in 1927.

Williams, who held the 100-yard senior men's backstroke mark until yesterday and still holds the 50 and 100-yard free-style titles for seniors, set a new record in the 220-yard free-style men's competition by getting the distance in 2:32.2. The old mark, 2:35.8, was made in 1932 by J. T. Holloman, of Atlanta.

Four records fell yesterday, making a total of seven that toppled during the meet.

The Clearpool squad of Memphis retained its team championship, piling up 53 points, while Warner Park, of Chattanooga, which placed second, won 45 points.

30 Cascade Pines, of Nashville, placed third with 26, and Knoxville, with a lone entrant, was next with 20.

Other teams scored as follows: Venable Country Club, of Atlanta, 19; Memphis, unattached, 18; Lindale, Ga., and Jacksonville, 13 each; Birmingham Athletic Club, 9, and Pensacola, 8.

Leonard Mayo Hurls No-Hit, No-Run Tilt

Dixie Steel Wins, 1 to 0, and Ties Gulf for Commercial League Lead.

Leonard Mayo, former Atlanta Cracker pitcher, pitched perfect baseball in the Atlanta Commercial league yesterday, and won, 1-0, allowing no hits and no walks, yet was robbed of a perfect game as his teammates allowed two men to get on base, one on an error and other on a fielder's choice.

Mayo had no easy task as his Dixie Steel teammates could get only five hits and one run off the very effective delivery of Lefty Everett, Gulf Relining star.

It was the second defeat for Gulf this year and placed the team in a tie for the last half flag.

Mayo pitched for the Crackers for two months in 1932 and who was with the team in 1933, famed six and allowed no one to reach base after the first inning.

In the first frame Smitty Smithwick, Gulf, reached first on an error. Advancing to second, he was thrown out as he attempted to take third as George Huff was reaching first on a fielder's choice.

Huff then stole second and went to third on another passed ball. A. T. Hornsby, Dixie Steel, pitched for the Crackers for two months in 1932 and who was with the team in 1933, famed six and allowed no one to reach base after the first inning.

The White Provision-Standard Oil game was postponed. A rained-out game between Gulf and Dixie Steel, which will complete their schedule for the year will be played at Gulf Refining next Saturday to decide the last half winner.

Atlanta, Dwyer Ties for Southern Leadership With .388

LEONARD TAKES FIRST AMONG LEADERS

Marshall Mauldin Only Four Points Behind Leading Hitters.

Joe Dwyer, Nashville outfielder, dropped 7 points while Fred Sington, Chattanooga outfielder, was playing on and they are now deadlocked for the Southern league batting lead with marks of .388.

Four points back in a threatening position is Marshall Mauldin, Knoxville outfielder, whose .384 is 22 points better than the next nearest rival, Coaker Triplett, of Nashville, who has .362, closely followed by the veteran Jackson Riggs, Stephenson, Birmingham manager, who remained at .356.

Next in line is the slugging Earl Webb, of the Knoxville Smokies, with .344. "Oll" went into a tie for the lead in homers with Paul Richards, of the champion Atlanta Crackers. Both have 14.

Poco Taitt, of Nashville, still holds the lead in runs batted in with 106 but is being pressed by Sington and Wright, of the Lookouts.

Figures show the Birmingham Barons to be most adept in making double killings, they having 126, with the Crackers six behind. The Nashville Vols have committed nearly two errors per game which makes them last in team fielding and nullifies their leadership in team batting which they hold at .314. Knoxville catchers have allowed only seven passed balls which is best in that department.

Emil Leonard, of the Knoxville ball star, leads the pitchers with 11 won and two lost. Gunning for his twentieth victory, Lord Byron Speer, of Nashville, will lead the league with 14 by the Crackers through the pitched three-hit ball and lost, 2 to 1, through Vol errors. No. 20 finally came to the front, at least at the expense of the Barons. He has only lost six. Al Williams, of Atlanta, is next with 14 and 5 followed by his teammate, Bud Thomas, with 16 and 6, (including afternoon) of Thursday, August 20.

PROUD ASSUMES GA-FLA. BATTING SALLY BALL LEAD STILL A TOSSE-UP

Tutaj Drops to Second Hofferth Leads; Five Place; Retains Run-Batter-In Lead.

By retaining his mark of last week, 341, Bill Prout, Macon first baseman, went into the Sally league batting leadership this week as Stanley Potts, of the Georgia Crackers, who dropped 6 points and into second place with 339.

Tutaj, however, retained his lead in runs batted in with 105, as did Grady in runs scored, 125. Grady, who bears the front handle of Jimmy, plays second base for the St. Louis Cardinals chain game, namely Columbus, in third position among the league's leading hitters with 338. De Moore, king of all positions and master of quite a few, is next with 333 followed by Big Nick Eiten, of Savannah, with 329.

Moore has stolen 37 bases for Macon, and Joe Orango, of Columbus, is still the leader in homers with 15. Henry Baxton, of Jacksonville, remains the leading pitcher, having topped 19 victories as against six reverses. A teammate, Coak Walker, is next with 18 won and 7 lost.

Other pitchers who have won 15 or more games are Lefty Judd, of Columbus, 16 and 7; T. Krist, of Columbus, 17 and 8; Art Evans, Macon south-paw, 17 and 11; and Jake Levy, of Savannah, 15 and 13.

Yanks Beat Red Sox in 13th; Cards Win, Gain on Idle Giants

JOHNNY BROACA OUTLASTS GROVE IN HURLING DUEL

Indians Shut Out Browns Behind Allen's Three-Hit Hurling.

By The United Press.

With a 3-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox, while the Cleveland Indians defeated the St. Louis Browns, the New York Yankees yesterday remained firmly entrenched in the American league leadership with a lead of 12 1/2 games.

Johnny Broaca and Lefty Grove engaged in a bitter pitching duel with the Yankees coming out on top when they put together two hits and a walk to score one run in the 13th inning and register their 11th straight win over the Red Sox.

Johnny Allen held the Browns to three hits as the runner-up Indians scored a 6-0 victory. Earl Averill with three hits in four trips, including a homer in the 11th, straightened out the Indians' pitching.

The Chicago White Sox hammered away at the offerings of the trio of hurlers to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 9-3, and even the series at one game apiece. Gerald Walker accounted for all the Tigers' runs when he hit two homers, his first coming in the third and his second in the seventh with a mate aboard.

The Washington Senators split a double-header with the Philadelphia Athletics, winning the opener, 12-8, and losing the nightcap, 7-6. Seven pitchers saw duty in the opener while Herman Fink outpitched Earl Whitehill to take the nightcap.

Youthful Italian Shows Earmarks Of Great Boxer

By Jack Cuddy.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(UP)—Along 49th street the punch-promoters are saying that young Harry Balsamo (Slambango) is a sure bet to become world middleweight champion.

I do not know if the cauliflower connoisseurs are correct in their blue printing for Slambango, but it is a rare and pleasant experience during the current famine in top-flight boxing talent to find a young scrapper who has all the earmarks of a potentially great fighter.

And 22-year-old Balsamo certainly has these earmarks. The tough, brown-haired, brawny fellow from Harlem's Italian East Side seems to be marching straight toward the 160-pound throne now occupied by Freddie Steele, of Seattle. Already he has had offers to meet Steele in an over-the-weight match. But Slambango's shrewd handlers laughed down these offers, believing that in a few more months he will be ready to fight for the title.

Slambango is a genuine killer in the ring—a tawny tiger of a man who comes tearing out of his corner at the first gong, bent on destruction. He throws punches from bell to bell, and he throws them straight and hard with either hand. He has had 17 professional fights and he has won 17 professional victories, 13 by the knockout route.

His sensational rise, which promises to approach that of Joe Louis in the heavy ranks, was climaxed two weeks ago by a one-round knockout triumph over Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland. And if you know your middleweights, you must know that the hard-hitting Mr. Pirrone is one of the big three in the 160-pound class, since Steele disposed of Babe Rickard, of Michigan, in the final round of the fight. A lot of people may dispute my big three ranking, but that's the way I figure the middleweights today; there are so few good ones.

ITALIAN.
Harry Balsamo was born in Salerno, Italy, but his parents brought him to New York when he was only one year old. He has five brothers and four sisters. He is the only fighter in the family. When he was a kid in grammar school he came home with so many bloody noses and black eyes that his father bought him a pair of boxing gloves and told him to learn how to defend himself. Harry did that little thing.

Harry is managed by two wealthy men, Sam Lehis, a hotel owner, and Victor Salitzky, a real estate operator. He is a bridgeplayer and he says, "I win that title."

Ump Millazzo Quits Ga.-Fla. for Sally

AMERICA, Ga., Aug. 22.—(AP)—President Hollis Fort, of the Georgia-Florida baseball league, announced today that Umpire Billy Millazzo had resigned to join the umpiring staff of the South Atlantic league.

Millazzo will report to the Sally at Augusta Sunday.

Fort says James K. Gaylor, of Greensboro, Ind., formerly of the Nebraska State Western association, Southeastern and Arkansas State and Central leagues would succeed Millazzo.

Senators Swat 3 Homers in Inning

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Washington tied the American league record for home runs by one club in a single inning when three batsmen hit for the circuit in the fourth inning of the first game with the Athletics today.

Rhodes was on the mound for the A's when Kress, Kuhl and Reynolds hit the homers. The Senators got two other hits that inning and a total of five runs.

The three-homer mark was achieved 20 times in the American league prior to the 1936 season. The major league record for home runs by one club in an inning is held by the National league. Pittsburgh established it with four in 1894 and Chicago equaled it in 1930.

Johnny Hill Improves in His Batting

Johnny Hill, of Douglasville, has climbed steadily out of a batting slump and now has his sights trained on that .300 batting average. Hill hit well on the latest road trip and all indications are that he will hit around the .300 mark before the season ends. Staff photo by George Cornett.

Douglasville Will Fete Crackers

By Jack Troy.

The Crackers are going up into Douglas county Monday afternoon to be guests at another of those famous barbecues given by the baseball fans of Douglasville.

Last year's barbecue on the occasion of Johnny Hill homecoming was the last one made by the Douglasville fans.

"Take three out of four games with Nashville," said the Douglasville fans before the last season. "We will give you another barbecue."

Well, the Crackers took three out of the four games, and so they got a barbecue. The Douglasville fans accepted the invitation for the club by wire from Little Rock.

As last year, the "cue" will be held at Roy Entek's spring grove at Douglasville.

The committee in charge of arrangements includes George V. Smith, father-in-law of Johnny Hill; W. J. Dozier, editor of the Douglas County Sentinel; and Roy Entek, manager of the Douglasville baseball team for the past three years.

FANS SELECT GUESTS.
Each fan has selected a player, sports writer or photographer—oh, yes, the Douglasville people feed the scribbles, too—as a guest on the occasion.

The Crackers played an extra incentive to beat those Vols three out of four in the last series. A barbecue at Douglasville lingers in the memory.

They were thinking of the last one, no doubt, when they stepped out and stopped those Vols again.

One of the leading Douglasville fans who will be on hand to welcome the players will be Aunt Minnie McGuffin, who seldom misses a Cracker night game.

"LOVE THY NEIGHBOR."
Aunt Minnie is the neighbor of Johnny Hill and one of the most loyal supporters of a Cracker team ever had.

I personally would like to be the guest of Aunt Minnie at the Douglasville barbecue. On the last occasion as a guest of Aunt Minnie at Douglasville it was with some difficulty that this writer got up from the table and made his way to the swing on the front porch.

It is to be a fine outing for the Crackers, who already know of the hospitality of Douglasville people.

BOB RIGGS BEATS PARKER IN FINAL

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22.—(AP) Bobby Riggs, of Los Angeles, squared his tennis racket with Frankie Parker today when he defeated the experienced Springfield, N. J., youngster, 6-6, 4-10, 3-6, 6-1, in the final match of the twentieth Newport Casino tennis tournament.

The five-set match was surprising in its close, despite the victor's decisive play in the final set, when he gained an overwhelming lead by sweeping the first four games. During the 38-year career of the tennis player, Riggs has won 117 titles in the seventh game of the fourth round, however, was outdistanced by the national title, held his own record down to 123 against 138 for Parker.

Parker, who won here last year teamed with Frank Shields, who quit major tennis for a film career, will pair with Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., against the United States Davis cup team, Donald Budge and Gene Mako, this afternoon in the Casino doubles final.

Budge lost to Casino singles winner, did not compete in that branch of this year's tournament.

Don Budge and Gene Mako, the United States Davis cup doubles team, today gained the Newport Casino team final from Frank Parker, of Springfield, N. J., and Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J., 6-1, 6-3, 6-4.

Miami Biltmore Open Set for December 4

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Aug. 22.—(AP)—The seventh annual $10,000 Miami Biltmore open golf tournament will be played at December 4-8, it was announced today. Previous winners of the tournament include Walter Hagen, Henry Cull, Gene Sarazen, Denny Shute, Willie MacFarlane, Olin Dutra and Horton Smith, who took first prize money last year.

The Doherty cup again will go to the low-scoring amateur in the tournament.

FANS STARTING TO LAUD GEHRIG AFTER 11 YEARS

Big Yankee Slugger Finally Appreciated in His Own Light.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(UP)—

The nation's baseball fans seem to have a better appreciation this season than ever before for Lou Gehrig's remarkable contributions to the game.

Although this is Larruping Lou's 12th season in the major leagues, it is the first time that he has commanded the full glare of the spotlight—without any modifying influences to dim its beams. That is probably why you hear so much talk about Gehrig this season among fans, and baseball players, too, for that matter—and why you see so many stories written about him, and why you see his likeness and his testimonials in so many advertisements.

Yes, sir, it seems that after more than a decade of brilliant play, the baseball world has suddenly realized with a bang that the iron horse first baseman of the Yankees is an ace performer—one who is making a splendid record for consecutive games played up to its present 1,768 games.

And now and then he received a burst of praise for heroics with the bat. But from 1925 until the 1934 season with the Yankees, the ultra-modest Gehrig fellow played along in the shadow of the immortal Babe Ruth. Lou liked the barrel-bodied, spindly-legged Banno and respected him and wouldn't—for any money—have tried to steal any of the Babe's glory. That was the trouble with Gehrig in those days. He was modest to the point of being colorless.

There was that season of 1927, for example. Remember what happened in 1927? That was the year Ruth dominated out that all-time record of 60 homers in one season. The fact that Gehrig was named the most valuable player in the American league for 1927 passed almost unnoticed. Even when Ruth was to be inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1935, Gehrig had difficulty in approaching the spotlight. True, he won the American league batting championship that season with an average of .363, but everybody was marveling at the feats of Dizzy Dean and at the march of the Detroit Tigers.

And when the fading Bambino left the Yankees before the 1935 season, Gehrig could last with the Yankees after losing a fiery ultimatum to Owner Jacob Ruppert and Manager Joe McCarthy.

CHICAGO LOSES TO CINCINNATI; BROOKLYN COPS

New York Giants and Boston Bees Are Washed Out.

By The United Press.

The St. Louis Cardinals increased their lead to one full game over the idle New York Giants in the National league pennant race yesterday, when they defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-3.

Jim Winfield went the route for the Cards and allowed six scattered hits. He had a narrow escape in the eighth when the Pirates rallied and scored three runs. But he managed to hold the Pirates scoreless in the ninth, to give the Cards their second straight win over the Pirates.

The Cincinnati Reds came from behind to pound out a 4-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs to even the current series at one game apiece and drop the Cubs three and one-half games behind the Giants. The Reds hit safely in every inning but two for a total of 12 safeties off three Chicago hurlers.

The Brooklyn Dodgers swamped the Philadelphia Phillies, 12-3, in the opener of a three-game series. Ed Brandt went the distance for the Dodgers and was touched for 10 scattered hits while registering his seventh win of the season. Cooney, Wilson and Phelps, with three hits apiece, led the Dodgers' 17-hit attack which included a home run by George Watkins.

New York at Boston was rained out.

Levin Expected To Be Favorite With Mat World

By The Associated Press.

Dave Levin's feat of going into Los Angeles—Vince Lopez's own hail-mex, and defeating the title-claiming Mexican in two straight falls, after dropping the first one, is proving himself every inch the world's champion he promised he'd be when he conquered Ali Babu.

Levin's defeat of Lopez, so far as California goes, was almost a foregone conclusion. Since over a year ago when he won the California tournament, promoted by Lou Davis, in which stars from all over the world participated, Vince had not only been the greatest of all drawing cards on the coast, but he had defeated most of the big stars of the land in decisive fashion.

THEY DUCKED.
Danno O'Mahoney, when world's champion, would have nothing to do with Lopez, to the point where he said, "I'm not going to fight him."

Lopez had been a big favorite over Levin, but not as big as he was before the Jewish Butcher Boy disposed of the Little Wolf, Gus Sonnenberg, jumping Joe Savoldi and other top-notchers.

Most of the credit for the development of Levin goes to Joe "Toots" Mondt, his manager, who saw his possibilities and had him tied up even before he electrified the wrestling world by copying the undisputed title that Ali Babu had taken from Dick Shikat, who had grabbed it from O'Mahoney.

GUIDED SHIKAT.
Although Mondt is the first real undisputed world's champion who Mondt has managed, he guided Dick Shikat to a title claim when Pennsylvania crowned him in 1929 and the late Jim Brown, who had taken the honor conferred on him in New York in 1933.

Most of all, Mondt thinks that Levin, judging by a 35-0 record that turned out to see him conquer Lopez, previously regarded title holder in California and several other states, had taken the honor conferred on him in New York in 1933.

Since Dave won the championship he has received letters from all over the world from people asking if they were related to him. He was related to two letters from Palestine making this inquiry.

WEST END GUN CLUB today is offering Atlanta skeet shooters engraved bronze medals to the winners of Division 1 and 2. As a special inducement to new shooters, the club has awarded an engraved medal to the beginner making the highest 25-club Davis score of the day, according to Clint Davis, secretary of the club.

Both fields will be operated all day and coaches will be on hand to assist any sportsman who wishes to practice for the approaching hunting season.

Old-timers will be interested in the special announcement that for every perfect score made the shooter will be credited with a free round.

Team races have been planned as a feature of the afternoon program.

Baseball's BIG SIX

By The Associated Press.

Earl Averill of the Indians and Lou Gehrig of the Yankees shot back into the one-two spots in baseball's batting "big six" yesterday as Roy Weatherly, Averill's rookie teammate, slid from the leadership to third place in the American league. Averill got three hits in four times up to boost his mark to .350, while Weatherly collected three safeties in six chances, climbing to .353, while Weatherly dropped six percentage points by going hitless on four trips to the plate. In the National league, each of the three leaders lost a little ground, but retained their positions unchanged.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(P)—The bond market today was higher in today's brief session following Friday's general decline.

Gains of small fractions to more than a point were well distributed among all corporate groups, with some of the convertibles that lost heavily in the preceding session regaining about half.

United States governments were quiet but likewise on the advancing side. Treasury 2-7 1/2 of 1935 closed 5-32 of a point higher and gains of 1-32 to 3-32 were in the majority elsewhere. Foreign bonds showed about stationary.

The abrupt turnabout in sentiment followed overnight publication of the views of Thomas Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Company, on the European situation, which revealed his conclusion that there would be no war. Also of help was a sizeable number of open buying orders that had been placed under the market in anticipation of a setback.

Allie Chalmers, who had dropped 7 points in the sell-off Friday, gained 4 to close at 152. Studebaker, which had lost 1-1/2, advanced 1/2 to 101 1/2, and rises of fractions to a point or more were registered by Baltimore & Ohio, convertible 4-1 1/2, Illinois Central 4-3 1/2, International Telephone 4-1 1/2, Lehigh Valley 4-3 1/2 and Southern Pacific 4-1 1/2.

Chesapeake Corporation, which had advanced 1/2, lost 3/4 to 100 1/4. Others on the outside were Pan-American Petroleum 6 1/2, Richmond Oil 6 1/2 and American Petroleum 6 1/2.

Foreign bonds were quiet and showed little change. Denmark 4-1 1/2 lost a fraction and Italian 7 1/2 and Light 6 1/2 closed at 100 1/2.

Fracture of all bonds totaled $3,292,000, par value, compared with $3,616,000, par value, last Saturday.

The Associated Press averages ranged from an advance of 2 of a point in the low-yield group to a decline of 1 of a point in the rails.

ADVANCEMENTS KEEP MANUFACTURERS BUSY

Engineering Staffs Are Kept Busy Developing New Gadgets All the Time.

"The gay nineties, 1892, to be exact, saw the birth of the auto industry," according to J. E. Yarbrough, Studebaker dealer, whose showrooms are located at West Peachtree and Linden streets, N. W.

Since that time, he states that more than 800 American makes of automobiles have been put on the market. Today there are only 13 manufacturers in the field, building 26 makes of cars.

"In each case, the stumbling block seems to have been lack of engineering advancement," said Mr. Yarbrough. "Those companies that failed did so because they could not keep pace with the American demand for speed, safety and comfort in motor car construction."

Present day manufacturers owe their success to constant vigilance in regard to details of construction.

No other automobile can point to a record that will compare with that of Studebaker; 84 years in the vehicle business, 24 years building automobiles. From the birth of the industry, Studebaker has pioneered important motor car refinements. A few of the most outstanding among these are: Free-wheeling, safety glass all around, steel-reinforced-steel bodies, fuel pumps, automatic spark control, and three-passenger front seats. There are many others of varying degrees of importance in the auto industry. On such achievements as these lies Studebaker's fine reputation built.

In 1926, Studebaker astonished the motor car industry with 97 distinct improvements in the admittedly fine 1925 model. One of the most outstanding of these 97 new features on the 1926 Studebaker, and certainly one that is typical of the strides made by Studebaker engineers, is the Automatic Hill Holder.

This device, found on no other motor car, is simple to operate. When the car stops facing up an incline, the driver applies pressure to the brake pedal in the usual manner, pressing down the clutch at the same time, a normal stop. When the car has been brought to a dead stop, the driver releases the brake pedal, while the pressure of his left foot alone on the clutch pedal automatically keeps the wheels locked. Thus the driver's right foot is left entirely free for operation of the accelerator pedal. To continue up the hill it is merely necessary to depress the accelerator and release the clutch. The latter action releases the brakes. The device is gaining a reputation among motorists everywhere as a preserver of patience, as well as safety.

YOUTHS TO ENTER MODEL AIR EVENT

Albon Cowles and James Lovett To Participate in Legion Contest.

Two Atlanta model airplane champions will leave Thursday for Cincinnati where they will enter the fourth annual national model airplane contest sponsored by the American Legion Saturday and Sunday.

Atlanta's representatives are Albon Cowles, 17, of 81 South Prado, who has been building model planes for eight years, and James Lovett, 19, who has been constructing them for six years. Both boys will be entering their first national competition, though they have won many local prizes.

Both boys are to enter three-ounce planes in the outdoor cabin ship contest and in the experimental events. James will enter an 18-ounce gas model, which is powered by a .35 horsepower motor, in the motor-powered contests. The boys have constructed their own planes. All contests will be judged by the length of time the planes remain aloft and in sight.

James won the Atlanta Model Airplane Club's silver trophy in 1934 and Albon holds the club's hydroplane record with a flight of eight minutes.

CHASE DISASTROUS

Lottery Suspect Is Charged With Speeding.

A 15-mile chase which ended in a wreck landed Bright Gilstrap, 21, in Fulton lower yesterday, county police reported.

Officers Burton Carroll and E. W. Wilson said they saw Gilstrap on Marietta street near Inman yards and suspected him of lottery offenses. As they approached, Gilstrap and a companion fled in a high-powered car, the police in pursuit.

At breakneck speed, the chase led out Chattahoochee avenue to Crooked road and thence to Crooked road, where Gilstrap's car, traveling at high speed, bounced on a railroad track and hit a post, being almost completely wrecked. Gilstrap, uninjured, was captured. His companion had jumped from the car previously and escaped. Carroll said Gilstrap drove at times more than 80 miles an hour. He was charged with speeding and his bond was set at $500, which was made promptly. No lottery paraphernalia was found in the car. The police said they arrested Gilstrap a week ago for violation of the lottery law.

CITY FIRE DEPARTMENT PER CAPITA COST LOW

Atlanta's fire department cost an average of $673.240 for the years 1926-33-34, according to statistics of fire department operations of various cities of the country compiled by the bureau of the census, Department of Commerce, Washington.

Cost to Atlantans during that period was $2.40 per capita a year, which was 9.1 per cent of the cost of operation of all other city departments.

Fire departments of the 94 cities included in the report cost $107,273,250, which was a per capita cost of $2.85 and represented 8.1 per cent of the cost of operation of other city departments of the communities included in the survey.

Donnelly and Mrs. Catherine Eastwood, both of Philadelphia; three brothers, Michael O'Neill of Collinsville, N. J.; Joseph J. O'Neill of Phoenixville, Pa.; and Arthur J. O'Neill of Atlantic City, N. Film Star Selects Studebaker Coupe

In an old Spanish garden we find Norma Shearer, glamorous M-G-M star, examining her new Studebaker coupe. Miss Shearer has the car brought right on to the set so she can climb in and whirl away home when the day's work is done. Miss Shearer—Mrs. Irving Thalberg to her close friends—chose the car herself after spending several hours wandering about Hollywood automobile showrooms.

FORD JULY SALES BREAK ALL RECORDS

Every Previous July Sales Figure Topped During Past Month.

July sales of Ford V-8 new passenger cars, commercial cars and trucks, broke all records for the past six years for the same month in the Atlanta branch territory of the Ford Motor Company, according to E. D. Bottom, manager.

Partis sales for July were the largest of any month since October, 1929. July accessory sales exceeded any previous month this year.

The popularity of the Ford radio unit is evidenced by the fact that July was the biggest month for the Atlanta branch since Ford were introduced by the Ford Motor Company.

"While undoubtedly the bonus has had some effect on our recent sales," said Mr. Bottom, "we believe that general improvement in business conditions, the increasing prosperity of the farmer and the fact that the public is coming to realize that the 1936 Ford V-8 is the biggest dollar value ever offered by the Ford Motor Company, are the real reasons for our record-breaking Ford V-8 sales, both in June and July of this year. Our dealers report no let up in the demand for new Ford V-8s in the Atlanta branch territory, which extends over portions of Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and North Carolina."

Parley SCHEDULED ON COUNTY INQUIRY Commissioners and Grand Jury Will Confer on Auto Probe.

Fulton county commissioners and the members of the Fulton grand jury are scheduled to hold a conference tomorrow on the report of the grand jury concerning the alleged misuse of county owned cars by county employees. Foreman C. B. Brewer and Jesse S. Jenkins, chairman of a special committee which investigated the charges that employees used county cars for their own private benefit, said recommendations will be made to the county commissioners for certain reforms.

They did not announce whether special presentations are to be returned this week, the decision of the grand jury depending on the conference with the commissioners, it was said.

UNUSUAL DEMAND EXPECTED BY BUICK

Management Predicts Unusual Expansion for Medium-Priced Car.

FLINT, Mich., Aug. 22.—Unusual expansion in the market for medium and upper medium-priced automobiles was cited today by W. F. Hustader, general sales manager of the Buick Motor Company, as confirmation of the upward trend in buying habits and an indication of the return of purchasing power to the nation.

At the same time, the executive commented on the large share of that increase obtained by the Buick Motor Company, the sales of Buick automobiles having accounted for more than one-fourth of the entire gain in registrations of all new cars priced above $700.

"According to latest available registration statistics, covering the first six months of the year, there has been a gain in 1936 over 1935 of 45.1 per cent in the sales of cars in the price groups referred to," Mr. Hustader said. "As against this price class increase, Buick sales have shown a gain of approximately 140 per cent. Of a net gain of 181,200 units reported for the price groups as a whole, which include 10 makes of automobiles, Buick accounted for 47,000, or 26.1 per cent."

Sales of Buick cars are running in unusually heavy volume during the summer months, Mr. Hustader said, deliveries during July having been the largest experienced by the company during the month in seven years. During the month a total of 14,724 new cars were delivered at retail to customers in the United States as compared with 16,354 in June and 6,002 in July a year ago. This was a decline of approximately 10 per cent from June, less than the average drop for this season, and a gain of 145 per cent over July, 1935.

NEGRO AGAIN TRIES TO FLEE CITY JAIL

Prisoner, Thwarted, Bound Over to Grand Jury Under Heavy Bond.

Clifford Mitchell, 24-year-old negro, who yesterday made a second attempt to escape from his cell in the city jail, was tried yesterday afternoon before Judge John L. Cone in recorder's court and ordered held for the grand jury under $10,000 bond on charges of assault with intent to murder and robbery.

The negro ran amuck at police station early yesterday morning in his second attempted jail break, injuring Roy Wall, turnkey, and putting a telephone out of commission before being subdued and placed in solitary confinement.

He made his first attempt about a week ago, shortly after being arrested on a charge of suspicion of robbery. Mitchell allegedly broke into the home of Mrs. Nannie Edwards, of 404 Loomis avenue, robbed her and struck her over the head with a bottle.

In his second attempted break, the negro dashed past Wall when the latter opened the cell door, seized a telephone on Wall's desk and tried to strike him with it, according to police. The turnkey suffered bruises and a strained back. Mitchell was placed under an additional charge of assault and battery and bound over under $300 bond.

English Motorists Compare Foreign and American Cars

Eighty members of the Junior Car Club of Great Britain brought their own English-made automobiles aboard the superliner Queen Mary, for the first of three motorcade tours this summer in the United States and Canada.

Thirty-four cars of 22 different makes were shipped, including two miniature Rileys and two Rolls-Royces. As the cars were swung off the ship, the Englishmen and their wives took American driving tests and secured New York state license plates for touring in this country.

The complete trip covers 2,000 miles on this continent, from New York to Montreal, by way of Washington, D. C., Uniontown, Pa., Detroit and Niagara Falls. At Washington the club was scheduled to visit the White House and greet President Roosevelt.

Many of the party expressed amazement at the price of the American-made automobiles they saw on the pier. And gasoline! They said petrol in London, now, costs about 40 cents a gallon; in France it's even a little higher.

They admitted that a car comparable to the Plymouth sedan, for example, would cost $300 pounds or more—about $1,800. It's size and beauty obviously impressed the Englishmen, and some of them personally inspected the powerful Plymouth engine and the floating power engine mountings which prevent vibration from reaching the passengers.

A "fair weather" insurance policy covers the party while it is en route, offering each Junior Car Club member $15 a day whenever weather conditions make driving difficult. Under the terms of the contract, a rainy morning is worth about $7.50.

Although more than 7,000 cars are exported from America to Great Britain each year, this is the first time an organized body of British motorists with British cars has ever come to the United States.

To make sure the visitors are not baffled by the American style of driving, police escorts guide them into and away from all principal cities. Two other groups of English motorists will make similar tours here during August and September.

CAREFUL MOTORISTS ENJOY VACATIONS

Safety of Tires Big Factor in Insuring Enjoyable Time.

One of the best ways to assure yourself of an enjoyable holiday trip is to see to it that the tires on your car are in good condition. If there is one tire on your car of which you are not quite sure, a tire that is thin and smooth, then you cannot drive with peace of mind. With luck, the tire may take you there and bring you back without trouble, but all during the trip a certain amount of worry will lie with you.

By having your tires thoroughly inspected before you start on your trip and by putting dependable rubber on each wheel, you will provide carefree motoring for yourself and companions, and at the same time you will contribute importantly to the nation's effort to reduce highway accidents.

The greatest number of accidents, according to United States Tire authorities, occurs on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. This, of course, is due to the fact that more cars are on the road during these days. Faced with these heavy traffic conditions, the wise motorist will insist on plenty of antiskid tread on his tires to give him control of his car under all conditions.

NAVY DOCTORS' TESTS TO BE HELD IN MACON

Minimum pay for unmarried officers without dependents is $2,699 per year and minimum pay for officers with dependents is $3,158 per year, he announced.

THREE ATLANTA BOYS ENTER CRAFTS GUILD

Boys To Compete in Coach Building for Master Awards.

Three youths from Atlanta are among the Georgia entrants in the 1936 Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild model coach-building competition, for which awards valued at $50,000 have been posted, it was learned today.

Stanley Kesler Jr., 164 Washington street, is enrolled in the master class. He is building a miniature Napoleon coach, as a sample of his handiwork and will submit it for scrutiny by the international board of judges, which includes in its membership the deans or presidents of 14 leading technical schools and universities. It is this body that will determine the winners of the four $5,000 university scholarships offered as national awards.

The other local residents, Howard Cornett, 1117 Delaware avenue, and George Yates, 133 Flora avenue, are entered in the apprentice division. Participants in this class are required to construct simpler traveling coaches of the same period, and compete for state and regional honors. Sixteen cash awards totaling $400 will be distributed to the victors in each state and the District of Columbia, who will vie with one another for trips to the sixth guild convention forming the 18 regional awards.

Both competitions are open to boys of from 12 to 19, inclusive. Two age classifications, a junior and a senior, have been established within these limits to achieve equality for all contestants, and there are duplicate awards for each group. The closing date is August 1, and judging of the model coaches will be commenced immediately thereafter.

Names of the local entrants were made public by William S. McClean, secretary of the General Motors-sponsored educational foundation, at its Detroit headquarters.

1ST LUNCHEON SET FOR REALTY BOARD

Real Estaters Will Open Fall Activities on September 2.

The Atlanta Real Estate Board is to resume its usual activities within the next few weeks, according to an announcement sent to its members by Mrs. J. W. Peacock, executive secretary. These activities will include luncheons, lectures, courses, stated committee meetings, and the like. The first luncheon meeting of the fall season will occur Wednesday, September 2, at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Draper-Owens, realtors, will have charge of the luncheon program.

It also was announced by the secretary that the firm of J. R. Nutting & Company has become a member of the board, and that J. F. Nutting, of that firm, has joined as an active member.

The luncheons in the past, held twice a month—every first and third Wednesday—have been well attended, from 35 to 50 being present, and now that they have started up again, President Paul Maddox urges all members to co-operate and attend the meetings.

In her bulletin the secretary also said:

"The New Orleans meeting, the National Association of Real Estate Boards' only convention for 1936, is expected to be the largest national convention in the annals of the association, and plans are already under way to make it a celebration of real estate progress of the decade. The date of the meeting is November 16-21.

"Celebrating the coming of age of the real estate profession, the convention will feature a number of old-time features in recognition of the fact that the term 'realtor,' designating members of our association, was given to us 21 years ago by 'Father' Chadbourn, of Minneapolis."

VALUABLE AID GIVEN TO HOME BUILDERS

Useful Volume Describes All Kinds of Materials in Use.

Hundreds of building materials, items of equipment and furnishings used in the construction and decorating of a home are described in the current edition of Home Owners' Catalogs being distributed free to persons planning to build or modernize a home for their own occupancy costing $4,000 or more.

Approximately 20,000 copies have been distributed without cost to prospective home builders in the last six months.

Applications for complimentary copies are being accepted from those now planning to build homes within a year in any of the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains at the Atlanta office of the publisher, F. W. Dodge Corporation, 313 Red Rock building.

With the inauguration of Home Owners' Catalogs, home owners can have their own building show and housing exhibit right in their own living room and at their leisure, pick up the products best suited for the home being planned, and learn how to go about getting them through local dealers and distributors.

The Home Owners' Catalogs is endorsed by the country's leading architects and building contractors. The architectural profession has confidence in the reliability of Home Owners' Catalogs, the latest achievement of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, which has been serving the building industry since 1892.

Most of the products described in this volume are made by the leading manufacturers of building products. It describes everything from bath tubs to boilers. It is written in terms easy for the layman to understand. A large percentage of the illustrations are in full color and the index enables the reader to quickly find the products he is seeking. The nature of the information included and the character of the manufacturers whose products are described will enable many new home builders to provide for a better home, better equipped.

Home Owners' Catalogs emphasize the advantages and real economies to be obtained by the use of competent architectural services in conjunction with the work of competent builders. It encourages the selection of reliable materials and installations.

ATLANTA MERCHANTS "BELIEVE IN SIGNS"

There can be no doubt that the merchants and other businessmen of Atlanta "believe in signs."

The building permits for the week issued at the city hall show an unusual number of permits for electric signs.

Permits issued from Monday up to Friday afternoon totaled 93. Of these, one was for the building of an addition to boiler for Swift & Co., for $7,500; another was for $10,500 to build a one-story brick and steel building at 156-162 Parker street, N. W., for Vasser Woolley. Only seven were for residences costing from $1,500 to $5,500, while 59 were for electric signs, the permits running in amounts from about $75 to $150, with one for the amount of $800 for a Peachtree shoe concern. The permits were issued to four concerns, each having about the same number of permits. They were Neon Service Co., Claude Neon Southern Corporation, George Sign Service Co., and Flexilume Sou., Inc.

SHARP-BOYLSTON CO. SELLS 9 HOME LOTS

Indicative of the interest in real estate and building activity in every section of the city, nine lots were sold last week to go up on the property, all built by home owners.

That, newly modern, Triborough bridge, recently opened to traffic and linking the Bronx, Manhattan and Queensboroughs, must be "some bridge." It can take care of 57,000 vehicles every 12 hours, while the roadway of the bridge accommodates eight lines of traffic. It is stated some 50,000 vehicles and 200,000 pedestrians crossed over the mammoth steel and concrete structure during the first 24 hours of its operation.

Nearly Million Is Spent in Year For Homes in 2 Northside Sections

Nearly $1,000,000—or to be more accurate, $920,000—is revealed in a careful checkup as a conservative estimate of the amount invested within the past 12 months in new and beautiful homes in the south side of Peachtree Heights Park and in Haynes Manor, two adjoining residential sections west of Peachtree road and beginning just north of Peachtree creek.

Seventy-five new residences, many of them palatial, have become the homes of leading Atlanta citizens—or will within the next 60 days, for about 30 of the 75 are still under construction. Hardly a home built in the two sections in the past year, or now being built, cost the owner less than $10,000 to $12,000 for building and lot, with many of them running between $15,000 and $20,000, and a few even more than the last amount.

This is one of the fastest-developing, home-building sections in the Greater Atlanta section. Haynes Manor was opened a few years ago, and is now a little less than 50 per cent developed, beginning the hill in general business, beginning three or four years ago, there was some cessation in building. However, during the last 12 months, unusual activity has marked the growth of the pretty section, with one handsome home after another being completed, and in practically every instance the residence was especially designed and erected to suit the ideal home needs of the owner. At this time there is much activity in the many remaining vacant lots in this section.

Peachtree Heights Park covers much more territory, running north almost to Pace's Ferry road. However, much of the northern end of this attractive residential tract has been developed before the real activity in the southern section began to show itself within the past 12 months. The part that has shown greatest home-building activity is within three to four blocks of Peachtree road, at the main southern entrance at Peachtree Battle avenue. The entire district covered by Peachtree Heights Park and Haynes Manor, while outside the city limits, enjoys water and sewerage privileges and all other city conveniences.

Just at this southern entrance is located the E. Rivers school, one of the finest schools in the county system. Nearly 900 pupils are enrolled in this school. And speaking of schools, the North Fulton high school is at the further north end, and across Peachtree from these residential sections. These schools have been among the attractive and desirable features in the new seeking homes in this suburban section.

Here are some of the main thoroughfares all well-paved, in the two sections, and the number of new residences either completed or in course of construction just now:

In Peachtree Heights Park: Thirteen new homes on Peachtree Battle avenue; eight on Nacoochee drive; 10 on Woodward way, south, and seven on Woodward way, north.

In Haynes Manor: One on the south end of Delwood drive, one year ago there were only four homes; today 19 new homes are there. On the north end of Delwood drive eight new houses have been erected; on Manor Ridge, six new houses, and on Peachtree Battle avenue, three new homes.

Talking About Real Estate

—Lemme Tell You Sumpin'
By PRESS HUDDLESTON

"Fully 300 people have asked me what we are going to do—where we are going—if we are going to stay here, and many such questions, after reading the story in 'The Constitution' about the sale of the 'Tom Pitts corner,' said Marvin Gentry, in charge of the cigar counter at the well-known place. 'It just shows how the people are interested in real estate and how interested people are in real estate.'"

Here is an interesting little incident in connection with the coming of Montgomery Ward to Atlanta. This company, with an eye on Atlanta 10 years ago, had a survey of market and conditions made here by an expert, who compiled complete data. It also considered several sites and tried to decide on a location for its plant at that time. It was just at the time when Sears-Roebuck was coming into the city. Finally Montgomery Ward officials agreed upon a site on Peachtree street in front of the Brookwood station, along the Southern railway. They rejected every other site and declared this was the only site they wanted. However, for some reason, their coming was abandoned at that time. But now they come back 10 years later and select the very same spot, and during the past week the first money on options held was passed over to property owners. Within a few months all the property will pass into the hands of the big mail order concern, and work will begin on the erection of the $3,000,000 plant.

As another evidence of how well The Constitution is read by the state is only necessary to mention that almost the next day following the announcement of plans for establishment of a big winery, three or four families living some 50 miles from Atlanta drove in and visited the new plant on Murphy avenue to offer berries and grapes for wine making.

A real estate salesman should be able to develop to the full his powers of observation, interpretation and decision. The extent to which he is capable of using these three qualities will largely determine his success.

Here's something about bath tubs—and about bathing in one of these things—but you didn't know: Herb Nelson, secretary of the National Real Estate Board, of Chicago, has been touring through the old country and writing back some interesting stuff, particularly to real estate men. Recently he visited Munich, and while there visited the "Museum of Real Estate Development, Building and Housing." It can take care of 57,000 vehicles every 12 hours, while the roadway of the bridge accommodates eight lines of traffic. It is stated some 50,000 vehicles and 200,000 pedestrians crossed over the mammoth steel and concrete structure during the first 24 hours of its operation.

and handed the realtor a typewritten memorandum and said:

"Here is a property you should own. The price is attractive, the building shows a good return and there are possibilities of a quick turnover."

The realtor almost swallowed his cigar in surprise when he glanced at the sheet of paper and noticed the property was one which he himself had owned several years. He decided to have some fun with the salesman and asked him how well he knew the corner.

"We are like that," said the super-salesman, holding up two fingers tightly together to indicate a close bond of friendship.

"In that case," replied the realtor, "you may work out the deal for me. Get the best terms you can and return with the contract."

The salesman left, promising to return the next day with the contract. He has not been seen since.—Philadelphia Real Estate Magazine.

The Hurt building has started the operation of cleaning the building, using a vapor sprayer, after which the entire building will be painted up, caulked and all outside wood and metal trim painted. The building's own forces and equipment are being used for this cleaning operation, which will be completed in approximately 60 days.

TOM PITTS CORNER DEAL NOW CLOSED

Five Points Property Transferred to Olympia Investment Saturday.

The final details of the trade for the Collier property at Five Points, better known as the "Tom Pitts corner," was consummated Saturday, and the property turned over to the new owners, the Olympia Investment Corporation, of which Frank Hawkins is president.

The property was bought from Mrs. Elizabeth Dodd Thomas and Mrs. Mary Dodd Worley, granddaughters of the late G. W. Collier, the property having been in the Collier family for more than 90 years. The price paid was $185,000, all cash except a mortgage of $47,000. Plans have been drawn for a handsome two-story building, following the same architectural design as the two buildings just east of the corner, formerly the Silvey and the Gould buildings, owned now by the Olympia Investment Corporation. Work is expected to begin on the new structure at an early date.

The sale of this property was announced about two weeks ago, the final closing transaction taking place yesterday. The Burdett Realty Company and the Adair Realty and Loan Company handled the deal.

Vacation Friends.

THE EXILE: Portrait of an American Exile, by Pearl Buck. Reynal & Hitchcock, New York. 315 pp. $2.50.

MARRIAGE BY CONQUEST, by Warwick Deeping. Robert M. McBride & Co., New York. $2.00.

RAINBOW AT NIGHT, by Mary Graham Bonner. Lee Fuman, Inc., New York. 319 pp. $2.50.

THE CASE OF THE MISSING DIARY, by A. Fielding, H. C. Kinsey & Company, New York. 232 pp. $2.00.

CAMEO CLASSICS, Grosset & Dunlap, New York. Ten volumes. De luxe bindings. 50c each.

Good books are friends. And for vacation trips, whether they be to the seashore, the mountains, an ocean cruise or home to see the folks, the traveler this summer has a wide choice for his or her selection. Take them with you and at your finger tips you will always have a friend with whom you can find a restful spot to get away from everyone and commune in peace and solitude.

The vacation friends need not be heavy, they need not be frivolous. In between the extremes are hundreds of new books and thousands of old favorites. Take Pearl Buck's "The Exile," "Her Portrait of Her Mother," which is a richly human document. Here we have an American mother who lived more than two-thirds of her life in China, and perhaps was the most characteristic American in that day. She was not born to generations of native ancestors, but of immediate Pilgrim stock. Mrs. Buck has cast this narrative almost as if it were a novel, changing the names of her characters, otherwise giving a true account of facts taken from diaries, conversations and her own memories.

Do not think any one of us would have called her a saintly woman, her daughter says. "She was the most human person we have ever known, but no life of any saint could hold more of that strength and exuberance which she carried with her in her life."

This book is not a simple one and it brings us vital and complex problems. It is being spoken of as one of the noblest epics of our day, written in a style of beauty and unerring rightness. You should enjoy "The Exile."

Two very different summer friends are Warwick Deeping's "Marriage by Conquest," and Mary Graham Bonner's "Rainbow at Night." Deeping takes us back to Sussex, England, in the days when women were wench and sometimes jades. In "The Rainbow at Night," a remote cove on the coast of Nova Scotia has been chosen for the setting, so bleak and inhospitable a spot and rock strewn that it appears at first sight incapable of supporting life. The author knows the coast well and she has chosen for her characters hearty fisher folk whose love of life is intense, and whose talk of bodily needs is franker because of the sea and its threats over head over them. You may be shocked at times by passages and expressions; certainly you will be startled, but where life is raw and rugged, and you need not be too shocked. "Rainbow at Night" will give you fine description and picturesque characters, and is a beautiful love story which will hold your interest until its 319 pages seem too short.

In "Marriage by Conquest" we have a lovely woman forced to make a choice between seizure and conquest by gentleness. Deeping Warwick Deeping answers the question for her keeps the reader alert by the swift action.

Gone With the Wind

A whole summer's reading in one novel. "I take this book with me wherever I go. I have read it twice and am now starting on Page One again." Not a dull page in all its 1,000 pages.

"It's the sort of thing one simply can't stop reading." . . . "When we finished it, we sighed for more." . . . "Anyone in search of a summer's reading could do no better than invest in GONE WITH THE WIND." . . . "It has no rival as the Book of the Year." . . . "A book to own and re-read and remember forever." . . . "The year's triumphant volume—There is nothing quite in its order in our day." . . . "As exciting and glamorous as anything we have ever read!" . . .

Important social interest is attached to the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brumby of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Rudicil Brumby, to Jefferson Daniel Hanks, of Rome, Ga.

The bride-elect's forebears have taken a prominent part in the south's business and professional affairs. Among her southern relatives are members of the Clanton, Hayward, Henry, Knox, Rudicil and Cleghorn families.

The late Governor James Clanton, of Alabama, and the late Lieutenant Thomas M. Brumby, U. S. N., of Spanish War fame, were both paternal great-grandfathers of the bride-to-be. Her mother is the former Miss Clara Knox Henry, of Rome, daughter of Judge W. M. Henry and the late Mrs. Medora Rudicil Henry. Miss Brumby's paternal grandparents were the late Charles Rush Brumby, of Marietta, and Cedarhurst, and Mrs. Sally Clanton Brumby, of Montgomery.

Mr. Hanks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Davis Hanks, of Rome, and his sister is Mrs. S. R. DeFries, of Reidsville, N. C. The groom-elect is prominently connected, being a member of the Daniel, Snyder, Glover and Hanks families of Georgia and Alabama. His mother is the former Miss Viola Daniel, and his father, who is now retired from active business, is numbered among Rome's civic leaders, having served as mayor of that well-known Georgia city.

The groom-to-be graduated from Darlington school and received his degree at Emory University with the 1932 class where he was a member of the Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic fraternity, and the Chi Phi social fraternity. He is a member of the Nine O'clock Cotillion Club and the Coosa Country Club in Rome. After their marriage Mr. Hanks and his bride will reside in Rome, where the former is treasurer of the Hanks-Saunders Supply Company and where they will be prominent additions to the young married contingent of that city.

volume has appeared in any anthology. One should not be surprised that America has so many women poets, especially since the United States is primarily a singing nation. Tooni Gordi explains in his foreword that this collection is not only an answer but a challenge to Max Eastman, renowned critic, who, in answering Edith Sitwell's statement that "women poets are faced with even more difficulties than are men poets, since technique is very largely a matter of physique," commented that "women are not in any fundamental sense lacking in physique. What they lack is tenacity of ambition. They do not care enough about being poets."

Over one thousand, nine hundred and thirty-six years ago, and that was long before there was a Barrett or a Dickinson, a woman opened her mouth and read a poem, and it was not to be considered a "triviality" either for it surpassed any that fickle man could write. That woman's name was Mary, and the title of her poem was "Magnificat." This might be a challenge to men who say that women have no business writing poetry. Let them soak this in and forever believe in the peace.

The compelling and editing of "Contemporary American Women Poets" was a laudable undertaking; interesting and extremely difficult considering the fact that the editor had to read over 30,000 poems. Imagine that! But his compensation of inner satisfaction must be great, because the book, attractively bound and presented, is an achievement.

The Real Broadway.
IN THE MONEY, by Arthur Somers Roche. Dodd, Meade & Co., New York. $2.

Action, the Roche kind of action, in a swift-moving and dramatic tale which takes you from the lights of Broadway, the real Broadway, to Palm Beach—which Mr. Roche also knows well—and back again, is this newest novel from this widely read author.

Bill Grannard was a newspaper man, not because he needed the money, but because he loved the excitement of the city room, because he felt at home in the tension of copy desks, telegraph editors and reporters, because he wanted to be in the know on all the big news of the day.

When it is rumored that "something big" is about to break among Broadway circles, Bill goes to Palm Beach following a faint clue which may help him to clear up the mystery. How he exposes a huge blackmailing scheme, saves a girl from death, and sends a man to his deserved doom, make a lively, ever-enthralling tale.

The gaily, lights and outward glamour of Broadway are never far from the mind of this author, who understands and knows the human suffering and heartbreak which go on behind the glittering facade. In this novel, showgirls, shyster lawyers, debutantes and gunmen are caught in a tragedy which takes place in a setting of music, laughter and carefree pleasure seeking. Not only is this a story of Broadway and its inhabitants—it is Broadway.

Military Terms.
MODERN MILITARY DICTIONARY, by Col. Max B. Garber. Published by Max B. Garber, Washington, D. C. 332 pp. $2.50.

This book fills a long felt need, as it is the only strictly military dictionary published in English. The work is the result of over fourteen years' research by the author, who is a colonel in the United States army.

Over ten thousand terms and their definitions are listed, many of them originating in the days of the cross-bow and knighthood, when actual warfare was considered more or less a personal issue. With the discovery of gunpowder and the gradual replacement of swords and bows with the first crude muzzle-loaders and cannon of the period, many new words of a military meaning were introduced. The World War also added thousands of new terms, which in turn led to others, such as blimp, observation, balloon, over the top, zero hour and others were injected into the language, until today a great part of our speech depends on words of military origin to imply certain thoughts clearly.

Up to the time of the publication of this book there were many words wrongly used by professional writers, lecturers and others, not so much through ignorance, but rather due to the fact that there was not always a means of checking such definitions conveniently.

"Modern Military Dictionary" will prove a welcome addition to any library, as it is by far the most comprehensive work of its kind ever to be published, exceeding the fondest hopes of the most optimistic in its scope, thoroughness and minute detail.

D. A. R. Trophies and Awards Announced Today for 1936-37

By MRS. J. L. MIMS, of Hawkinsville, State D. A. R. Editor.

The National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, is a dynamic organization, solidified by highly patriotic motives and having for its objective, the protection of home, the defense of country and the enlightenment of its people. Since its organization, the D. A. R. has consistently and effectively labored to advance the patriotic purposes for which it was formed. As the organization has grown in numbers and influence, it has become an increasingly powerful force for the perpetuation of the memory of the great leaders and the great events of our national history—for the promotion of good citizenship, and for the fostering and encouragement of high ideals and sound views on national policies. The organization, in upholding and furthering these tried and proven ideals and policies cherished by our forefathers, is performing a public service of great value and far-reaching influence for good.

To stimulate interest among the chapters in special lines of activity, and to show appreciation for outstanding achievements, the following trophies and awards have been offered by the various state officers and chairmen for the years 1936-1937. Mrs. Adams, our capable and efficient state regent, in accord with the sentiments of our president general, has chosen as the theme and keynote of her administration, "The Youth of Our Land." You will notice that many of these awards are offered for outstanding work dealing with our boys and girls. A chapter regent, with her executive board, might well spend the time in making a careful survey and analysis of this list of awards, and determining the ones her chapter might win and by pushing forward with necessary local plans, set her goal in that direction. If, at the end of the D. A. R. year, when reports are carefully weighed, her chapter is not a winner, she and her chapter members will have attained a clearer and broader view of D. A. R. ideals and the planned work and will make full reports at the next state conference.

Trophies and awards are as follows: Helen Rogers Franklin Trophy—For general excellence, including honor roll requirements, compilation of patriotic days, percentage of members attending meetings and special work accomplished. Blanche McFarland Gaffney Trophy: To chapter acquiring the greatest number of new members in the junior ages, per capita, by the next state conference. Mrs. John A. Perdue Loving Cup: To chapter securing greatest number of new subscriptions to D. A. R. magazine. Helen McCall Bashinski Trophy: To chapter sending greatest number of certified Bible records. Katharine Stanley Daniel Trophy: To chapter sending to the state D. A. R. filing and lending bureau the greatest number of historical papers. Jean LaFarge Pelton Trophy: To chapter making most outstanding record pertaining to girl home-makers. May Phillips Mims Trophy: To chapter sending in best material for D. A. R. column in Atlanta Constitution.

Mrs. Moreland Speer Award: $5 to pupil in domestic science department of high school submitting the best essay in home-making. Mrs. George U. Beach Award: $10 to chapter marking the greatest number of Revolutionary soldiers' graves. State Regent's Award: $10 to chapter doing best work in establishing a real foundation for national defense by stressing good citizenship training for pupils of junior high school ages. Before the altar were three baskets filled with white gladioli and at either end were placed seven-branched cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers. Her maternal parents were William Middleton Dunn, who settled in the famous Dogwood valley, near Chattanooga, Tenn., and Victoria Vivian Gilliland, of Graysville, Ga.

Legion Auxiliary Launches Statuette Drive to Honor Miss Moina Michael

By MRS. C. M. McCULLAR, Of Milledgeville, State Editor.
"A Poppy Lady in Every Home Keeping the Faith," is the slogan with which the statuette drive was launched last Monday in Atlanta at the executive board meeting, for the purpose of raising funds to erect a statue of Georgia marble to be unveiled at the state capital on Armistice Day in honor of Miss Moina Michael, of Athens, Georgia's famous "Poppy Lady."

Captain Al Henson spoke to executive board members and outlined the plans for the statue, which is being executed by Steffens Thomas, of Atlanta. Captain Henson was presented by Mrs. J. W. Oglesby Jr., of Quitman, department president. The sculptor, who did the bust of Miss Martha Berry, explained the design of his statue and the statuettes which will be sold to finance the project.

Mrs. Oglesby named Mrs. J. B. Joel, of Athens, to be chairman of the statuette drive, and on the committee are Mesdames Al Henson, H. E. Sanford Jr., of Atlanta; A. C. Mitchell, of Savannah; and Miss Helen Estes, of Gainesville. Mrs. Oglesby by heard reports from members of her official family at the first called meeting of the executive board, and enthusiastic plans for the year's work were made. Luncheon guests of board members were Miss Moina Michael and Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens.

A distinguished record of service is that of Mrs. Wilmet Wimbler, of Bainbridge, who has recently accepted the post of legislative chairman in the department for the next year. She is serving her 10th year as president of her unit, a record probably unequalled in the state.

Final membership total, given by Miss Helen Estes, immediate past president of the department, is 3,007 members for the past year. This exceeds by 100, the national department's quota for the state.

Mrs. J. W. Oglesby Jr., of Quitman, department president, announced this week her second annual awarding of her personal prize of $25 for the unit getting the greatest percentage increase in membership for this year. This prize, awarded last year for the first time, went to Augusta.

Mrs. A. C. Mitchell, of Savannah, vice president of first district is the first district leader to call a district meeting. She tentatively has set November 15 at Darien, to which meeting she and the Darien unit invite state department officials.

Mrs. Edgar Pullen, of Cordele, department first vice president, and Mrs. W. S. Davidson, of Baldwin, second vice president, made enthusiastic speeches at the board meeting about their yearly plans. Mrs. Pullen received condolences of auxiliary members because of the recent loss by fire of auxiliary and Legion clubhouse at Cordele.

Mrs. Myrtle A. Young, of Eatonton, department historian, departed last Monday by plane for New York to spend two weeks. She requests this department to say that her absence explains the delay in answering letters from unit historians who write during her absence, and that these communications will be answered on her return. Mrs. Young's unit, of which she has completed a five-year presidency, celebrated the completion of the new clubhouse on Friday with a dance in Eatonton, attended by district Legionnaires and Auxiliary members.

Mrs. H. W. Rhodes, of Clarksville, national bulletin chairman, announces that the reduced rates on that publication will extend through August. Those interested in the national publication should get in touch with Mrs. Rhodes at once.

Mrs. J. R. McMichael, of Quitman, state secretary, states that unit presidents must send in their names to her at once if they expect to get bulletins. She is eager to complete her mailing list and it is imperative that this be done promptly.

By Sally Forth.

IT IS not often that a boy tops this column, but Walter Wellborn Jr., or "Pete," as he is better known to his friends, achieves that distinction today. The 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wellborn is quite a taxidermist, and he and Lea Richmond are proud directors of an interesting museum which is indicative of persistent and diligent work. "Pete" returned yesterday from a two-month visit in the British Isles, accompanied by his grandmother, Mrs. Eugene Black Sr., his mother and his sister, Julia Wellborn. During the trip he collected an extraordinary assortment of additions for the museum at his Palisades road home in Brookwood Hills. Imbued with the desire to meet some museum officials in London, "Pete" visited the British Museum of Natural History. He talked to the secretary of this famous museum and the young lady was so charmed with the boy's enthusiasm that she sent him to see several officials. He met the man in charge of reptiles, mammals and birds, and was introduced to the "president of the whole museum," who offered to get the Atlantan a hunter's license.

While touring Devonshire he enlarged his valuable collection with the head and teeth of a Royal Bengal tiger, the skull and horns of a ram, a deer's head and antlers, humming birds and small mammals. It was Pete's intention to request the United States cus-

Miss Johnson Will Wed Dr. Ross At Glenn Memorial Church Rites

Of interest is the announcement of the complete wedding plans of Miss Rachel Johnson, of Emory University, and Dr. Thomas L. Ross, of Macon, whose wedding will take place on August 29, at 5:30 o'clock at Glenn Memorial church. The ceremony will be performed by Dr. Franklin N. Parker, dean of the Candler School of Theology with Dr. Nat. G. Long, pastor of the church, assisting. Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, head of fine arts department of Emory University, will have charge of the music, assisted by Lucian Thomson, as harpist.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father, Dr. Edgar H. Johnson, and the best man will be John Seale, of Montgomery, Ala., formerly of Atlanta. Miss Helen Ross, of Macon, sister of the groom, will be maid of honor, and bridesmaids will be Misses Frances Parks, of Newnan and Gladys McMichael, of Buena Vista, cousins of the bride; Leila Stipe, and Mrs. Charles D. Hurt. Groomsmen will be Edgar H. Johnson Jr., brother of the bride; Dr. William P. Harbin, of Rome; Dr. Louis Owens, of Cincinnati; Dr. Calvin Elton Richards, of Gallipolis, Ohio; Ward Dennis, of Macon; Dr. William Cook, of Columbus; Dr. Hunt Cleveland, of Annapolis, Md.; and Dr. Torrence R. Staton, of Atlanta.

Many delightful parties have been planned for Miss Johnson and Dr. Ross. On August 18, Miss Leila Stipe entertained at a seated tea at her home on North Candler street, having among the guests about 12 close friends of the bride. Miss Ruth Mann gave an informal supper for Miss Johnson on August 20 at her home on Springdale road. On August 22, Mr. and Mrs. Alton tom officials to allow his collection to pass untaxed in view of its educational value. Pete has been interested in taxidermy since childhood, and he and Lea spent three years catching and stuffing snakes, birds and other specimens. This interest attracted their parents, for they never expected museum work of their son. The museum began when Pete, Lea and Grady Black III persuaded Mr. Wellborn to let them use his garage, and it has steadily prospered. The two rooms are crowded and Mr. Wellborn has promised another building. Pete wanted it built in his absence, but Mr. Wellborn intends to let him supervise the construction.

Pete and Lea plan a first anniversary celebration on August 29, which they hope to be more successful than the grand opening last year. Most of the animals then on display were caught and stuffed by the owners, who received great approbation. It is generally conceded that no one in the family looks more like the illustrious Henry Grady than does his great-grandson, Pete Wellborn. He not only resembles the beloved Henry Grady, but acts and talks like his famed ancestor.

The marriage next month of pretty Dorothy Brumby and Dan Hanks, of Rome, will be the culmination of another of those romances which had its inception on a college campus. Dorothy first met Dan at a Christmas party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright four years ago, but it wasn't until "Little Commencement" at Emory University the following spring that they had their first date.

Since that time Dan has been the devoted swain of the charming young belle, and today Sally joins with the countless friends of the couple in extending felicitations to them upon the occasion of their engagement announcement. Although no date has been set for their marriage, it will take place some time next month, for both the young people have birthdays under the sign of the Virgo-Libra cusp.

The many friends of Dorothy will find it difficult to surrender Dorothy to Rome for residence, but the proximity of the Georgia city will afford her many visits back home, which will, in a way, compensate for her residence there. In addition to joining the ranks of the younger married set in Rome, Dorothy and Dan anticipate many happy days in congenial gatherings with the recently wedded Mr. and Mrs. John Maddox. The latter, you will recall, is the former Leone Brooks, and both she and her husband and Dorothy and Dan are a foursome of lifelong friends.

PRETTY Mary Large, daughter of former Postmaster E. K. Large and Mrs. Large, returned yesterday covered with laurels of her recent success as a leading character in a play presented at the Fifty-seventh street playhouse in New York. The play marked the close of the summer session of the Feagin School of Dramatic Art, where Mary has been a student for the summer months. Her histrionic ability is well known to Atlantans, for those of us here have read with pleasure of her activities in various dramatic affairs during her college days at Vassar, from where she was graduated last June.

WHEN Helen Clark becomes Mrs. Paul Seydel, she will be able to entertain at many luncheon and dinner parties with a "round the world" motif. First, because she will have personal knowledge of foreign countries because during her life as an army daughter she has lived in many far-off lands, and second because of many gifts which are being showered upon her, which will further carry out the foreign touch.

On Friday afternoon when Mrs. A. N. Tasker entertained at a linen shower for Helen at her home at Fort McPherson, all the gifts were brought in and presented the bride in a large Japanese umbrella. Listed among the many gifts Helen received was a luncheon and dinner set from Czechoslovakia, a large collection of Spanish linens and an exquisite Italian cutwork dinner set. By a fortunate coincidence all the guests who choose to give the lovely young bride-elect towels of finger-tip, bath, and face style, choose ones with a yellow color scheme.

Wood-Moore Rites Announced. QUITMAN, Ga., Aug. 22.—Miss Lucille Wood, daughter of Mrs. J. F. Wood, of Valdosta, became the bride of George Brantley Moore, of Quitman, on August 11, at a morning ceremony at the summer home of the bride's mother in Young Harris Rev. A. B. Green officiating. Mrs. A. B. Green and Miss Frances Green rendered a musical program.

The bride was lovely in a fall model of triple sheer crepe in navy. It was made with fitted fingertip coat and with this she wore a fitted navy tulle hat. Her flowers were sweetheart roses and tuberose. Mr. and Mrs. Moore spent their honeymoon in South Carolina, and they are residing in Quitman.

Mrs. Moore is the only daughter of Mrs. J. F. Wood and the late Mr. Wood, of Valdosta, and Mrs. Moore received her education at South Georgia State Woman's College. Previous to teaching in Quitman she was a member of the faculty at Barney Lake Wales and Ocala, Fla.

Mr. Moore is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bolling Moore, of Milledgeville, and he received his education in the Milledgeville schools, later attending G. M. C. His father is editor of the Milledgeville Union Recorder and his brother is Jere Moore, vice president of the Georgia Press Association. For several years Mr. Moore has been a member of the clerical staff of the South Georgia Grocery Company.

Hays-Coffey Rites Solemnized at Home

Marked by beauty was the wedding of Miss Vera Hays to William Henry Coffey which was solemnized in the presence of the two families and close friends on August 16, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence C. Hays, in West End Park. Palms and tall floor baskets filled with white gladioli and white asters, with tall candelabra of burning tapers in the background, transformed the living room into a beautifully appropriate setting for the ring ceremony, which Rev. Harold Shields performed in a most impressive manner. Before the ceremony, Mrs. H. W. White rendered the nuptial music of "At Dawning," "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "Traumerei," playing during the ceremony "I Love You Truly." Entering with the bridegroom, the bride wore a French-modeled ensemble of dark blue chiffon, fashioned with an attractive simple collar and soft three-quarter length sleeves. From the neckline the dress fell in pleats to the hem. The only contrasting trimming was of white kid of which a bow was formed at the collar and at the front of the kid belt. Her hat was a becoming off-the-face style of blue tulle, matched by her shoes and bag of blue with which she carried white kid gloves. Her corsage was of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Hays, the bride's mother, was gowned in plum-colored printed chiffon, with white accessories, while Mrs. Coffey, the mother of the bridegroom, wore a model of dark blue sheer. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Coffey left for a wedding trip to Daytona Beach, Fla., after which they will reside with the bride's parents temporarily.

Teasley-Argo.

Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Teasley announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Josephine Brown Teasley, to Talmadge Argo, the ceremony having been performed by Rev. Clyde Lee, of Lexington, on August 15.

Fleming-Swift Rites Announced.

Of cordial interest to friends is the marriage of Miss Elise Fleming to Roy Talmadge Swift, of Newark, N. J., and Atlanta, which was solemnized on August 15, at the Methodist Episcopal church, of East Orange, N. J. The rites were read by Rev. J. Earl Starkey. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Banks Fleming and the late Thomas Banks Fleming. Mr. Swift is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Swift, of Cumberland Furnace, Tenn. After a wedding trip to New York, Mr. and Mrs. Swift will reside in East Orange, N. J.

Crawford Clubwomen Vote on Projects

Crawford clubwomen held the August meeting with the president, Mrs. G. A. Howard Jr., in the chair. Members voted to assist in establishing grade mothers throughout the grades of Crawford High school and to lend them any aid necessary to meet the needs of their respective rooms. A shower is planned to replenish their china and glassware.

One of the outstanding features of last quarter's work was the shower given the inmates of the County Jailers' Home. Bountiful bags of fruits, cakes and candies—all of which were contributed by the members—were given. Plans are being made to transport and assist in the entertainment of the older people of our town at Lake Cathlamet in September, this movement being fostered by the county federation, of which this club is a member.

The club initiated the course in English from the Better Speech Institute at its last meeting. This course comes in 15 brochures, each of which constitutes a lesson. The first lesson was taught by Mrs. Walter Armstrong. A fine arts program was presented with Mrs. Gray Roland acting as chairman. Mrs. George Rice Jr. rendered a beautiful piano selection. Miss Sara Faust gave an Uncle Remus story. Mrs. Jake England gave a discussion of the famous picture, "The Blue Boy." Mrs. Frazer Wise gave a current event. Mrs. M. Blanchard gave a report on club institute. A social period was enjoyed and refreshments were served by Mesdames E. H. Furman and J. M. Landrum. New members were welcomed and former members were reinstated.

DOG STORY SAVES THE DAY.

State Clubwomen Continue Line Of Endeavor for Federation

Along with the interesting additions to the executive board of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs some members are continuing their line of endeavor started in the last administration. Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, still holds the strategic position of chairman of American citizenship and will direct and enlarge the wise program already adopted. Mrs. Bailey's high character and achievements have frequently been extolled, and her keen desire to learn and to impart knowledge leads her to take advantage of every opportunity for self-improvement. She has recently attended the conference of the United Adult Movement at Lake Geneva, Wis., where the most approved methods for adult education were demonstrated.

This conference was an innovation and the beginning of this movement. The attendance was by invitation, all the states were represented, and high-powered educational leaders from all over the United States were present. Each representative had the privilege of choosing the one of the ten commissions into which the conference was divided she preferred to be a part of, and Mrs. Bailey chose citizenship. The commissions had leaders in discussion methods, and when the entire conference came together the skill of those directing the visual methods, the panels, forums and symposiums added strength as well as variety to the programs.

The divisions of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs for the next two years have two new chairmen, Mrs. F. I. Dixon, of Thomasville, Americanization, and Mrs. R. H. Waugh, of Albany, civil service. Mrs. C. E. Pittman, of Commerce, continues the work of law observance. In the interest of these activities two letters follow. Mrs. J. D. Atwood, general federation chairman of American citizenship, writes:

"Now that vacation days are fast drawing to an end, most of us are making plans for the programs and activities for the coming year. This respite from work should give to us renewed energy and interest. Although I have played during a part of the summer, the greater part of the time has been spent in the preparation of material designed to meet requests for fall programs. The questionnaire and study of the constitution is being rearranged and will be sent out at an early date. From letters received, I believe there will be great interest in this study among your clubs."

"You may be interested to know that new material will be available on civil service in the fall also. This division was added to our department last January. If you have manuscripts which have been submitted on the subject 'What the Statue of Liberty Means to Me,' will you kindly send them to me not later than September 1?"

"You may be one of the chairmen who have recently been added to our circle. If so, may I tell you how happy I am to work with you in the interest of better American citizenship. I hope that you will write me of your plans. Many have already written; and all letters have been gratefully received. I wish to express my appreciation for the splendid response which followed by request that chairmen should write President Roosevelt urging him to appoint Mrs. Lawson to

Mrs. Clark Heads Department Of International Relations

Mrs. John B. Clark, of Macon, recently appointed chairman of the department of international relations, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Photo by Warlick, of Macon.

In complying with the request for a picture and "something about herself," Mrs. John B. Clark, of Macon, says her acceptance of the chairmanship of international relations was induced by anticipation of pleasant contacts and association with the "charming and efficient members of the official family of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs." The federation is fortunate in securing Mrs. Clark for chairman of this special department since she is a student of international affairs and has served effectively in many offices since coming to Macon from Alabama seven years ago. In Auburn, where Mr. Clark taught in the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, she was the head of the literary department, and when her husband was dean of Judson College, at Marion, she was county chairman of the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs. After graduating from Athens College, Mrs. Clark taught there and later received her A. B. degree from the University of Alabama.

Being especially interested in dramatics, Mrs. Clark was a member of the Blackfriars' Dramatic Club at the university and played the part of "Olivia" in Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" in the leading theaters, with that organization. She studied with Estelle Davis at Columbia University and appeared in plays put on under her direction. Just recently, Mrs. Clark has coached and taken the leading part in an original play staged at the Macon Little Theater. This summer, Mrs. Clark, who is dean of Mercer, represented his university as delegate to the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia. Mrs. Clark attended the institute, enjoyed lectures, round tables on international good will and on subjects pertinent to her department of club work.

A pleasing feature of Mrs. Clark's stay in Charlottesville was the dinner given by the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs in honor of Dr. Mary E. Woolley, who spoke before the institute on "Taking Account of Our International Stock." Seated at the speaker's table, Mrs. Clark was presented and brought a greeting from the Georgia Federation. While the program for the club year on international relations has not been definitely worked out by the chairman, she has ideas on this subject, which will attach great importance to this department.

Mrs. Richard Addison, first vice president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, is acting presiding officer during the illness of the president, Mrs. William Bailey. A recent appointment in the club, Mrs. C. M. McClure, chairman of Tallulah Falls school committee.

The committee on nominations for the ninth district, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, met in Atlanta Monday. On the committee are Mrs. R. H. Kimball, Windsor; Mrs. M. C. Rhodes, Norcross; Mrs. J. P. Cooper, Maysville; Mrs. J. B. Parham, Canton; and the chairman, Mrs. J. B. Rond, Toccoa.

Members of Atlanta, Grant Park Woman's Club are rejoiced over the prospect of a clubhouse. Mr. Chosewood generously donated the lot, and all sort of ways and means are being devised to meet the financial requirements. Enthusiasm is spreading and membership is increasing.

Mrs. Ellison Cook, of West Point, chairman of legislation in the fourth district, G. F. W. C., returned August 15 with a congenial party which she conducted on a western tour.

As acting parliamentarian of the American Legion Auxiliary executive board, Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, officiated at the meeting held in Atlanta on Monday.

Mrs. J. H. Phagan, of Atlanta, chairman of the garden division of the fifth district, G. F. W. C., will be an honor guest on August 25 at a spend-the-day party at "Tuckahoe," the summer home of Mrs. Willard R. Leach, in the Tate Mountain estates.

Fifth District Club Institute Takes Place On September 2

The Fifth District of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will hold a club institute on September 2 at 10 o'clock in the West End Woman's clubhouse. Luncheon will be 50 cents and reservations must be made not later than August 31 through Mrs. W. C. Messer at 1110 Donnelly avenue, S. W., Raymond 5335.

Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, general federation director for Georgia; Mrs. A. B. O'Gee, of Bainbridge, state president; Mrs. Lamar Rucker, of Athens, state chairman of club institutes, and other prominent clubwomen will lead discussions and answer questions. Club presidents are requested to urge a large attendance of their membership for this important event and a detailed program will be published next week.

Mrs. L. O. Freeman, of College Park, is chairman of club institutes for the district and Mrs. P. J. McGovern, of Avondale Estates, is fifth district president. Mrs. W. C. Messer is president of the hostess club.

Ft. Benning Clubwoman Leaves for Washington

Georgia Federation, as well as the Columbus Federation and the Infantry School Woman's Club, of Fort Benning, sustains quite a loss in the departure of Mrs. S. W. G. Livesay, whose husband, Major Livesay, has received orders to report to Washington, D. C. Mrs. Livesay was elected president of the Infantry School Woman's Club at the close of the 1935-36 club season to succeed Mrs. W. A. McCollough, whose husband, Colonel McCollough, was transferred to North Carolina.

During 1935-36 Mrs. Livesay served as chairman of the garden division of the Infantry School Woman's Club. Among the outstanding achievements of this division was the planting of the Memory Rose Garden near the Officers' Club, which contains many roses donated by club members leaving the post, each bush bearing the name of the donor. A scroll of the donors to the rose garden hangs in the ladies' lounge of the Officers' Club.

Another achievement was the compiling of a very elaborate scrapbook which contains a record of the division, and is splendidly illustrated by Miss Olga Noyes, who also compiled the book. Planting of the entrance to Fort Benning was another successful venture of the garden division under Mrs. Livesay's leadership.

Infantry School Woman's Club which last year numbered about 200 members of the post personnel, is perhaps the most unique club in the Georgia Federation. The membership is constantly changing as the army officers are sent from post to post. A four years is the usual time limit for an officer at the post, each year sees an entirely different membership. There are three divisions of the club, the garden, the literary, which meets once a month, and the music division, which last year was a glee club, under the direction of Major George King, widely known composer and musical director. He won wide recognition for the presentation several years at Fort Benning of an Armistice song which was given several times on November 11 at one of the Benning stadiums. Opening meeting of Infantry School Woman's Club is held in the ballroom of the Officers' Club, and the divisions meet once a month in the ladies' lounge.

Club Collect Author Is Busy Woman

Every clubwoman is familiar with the prayer, "A Collect for Clubwomen," but probably few realize that it was written by a young clubwoman for her club as long ago as 1904. Miss Mary Stewart, the author, is, perhaps, even busier today than she was then, and has led a diversified life since 1904. She began her career with an A. B. from the University of Colorado. Later she was staff writer on the Sunday magazine section of the New York World, organizer of the national republican committee in the 1920 campaign, and then director of junior employment service.

Miss Stewart is a poet as well as a business woman. She helped organize the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and is now their legislative chairman. She is a trustee of the National Vocational Guidance Association and of the Southern Women's Vocational Alliance, a member of the National Arts Club of New York city, the Poetry Society of America, the Cincinnati Business Women's Club, and of the Women's Joint Congressional Committee in Washington.

Mrs. Hay Presides Over Dallas Club.

Mrs. J. W. Hay Jr., newly elected president of the Dallas Woman's Club, presided at her first meeting on Friday. Interest centered in the announcement by Miss Jessie Crew, of the library committee, that 400 books had been secured, and the project is going forward with the assurance that the club will soon have a well-established public library.

The novel program was directed by Misses Elizabeth Colquitt and Irma Mae Carruth, co-chairmen. The college contingent of the junior club, assisted by high school members, presented the program. The president, Mrs. Hay, was represented by Elizabeth Crew; Mrs. Price Kinard by Marcia McGarity; Mrs. H. L. Croker by Evelyn Morgan; Mrs. Ralph Butler by Elizabeth Colquitt; Mrs. J. I. Matthews by Mary Florence Matheis; Mrs. Herschel Ragdale by Eleanor Finch; Mrs. C. B. McGarity by Elsie Lester; and Mrs. E. D. Wheeler by Jaynelle Butler.

A series of living pictures impersonating famous women were given by Misses Mary Hardage, Mary Nell Crew, Margaret Anderson, Jaynelle Butler, Marcia McGarity, Mary Couch, Elizabeth Crew, Elsie Lester and Carolyn Finch. As each picture was posed, a short sketch was given by Irma Mae Carruth, with appropriate musical setting played by Mrs. Herschel Ragdale. Vocal selections were rendered by Miss Zora Burns, with Mrs. E. G. Bayley at the piano. Social hour hostesses were Mesdames C. A. Hart, N. G. Hardage, Ruth Harris and Dewey Hudson.

Partial Deafness Conquered by New Silver Seal Acousticon

With its fifteen outstanding improvements, speech, music and all other forms of entertainment are now enjoyed to the fullest by the hard of hearing with the new Silver Seal Acousticon which is represented in this district by the old established house of A. K. Hawkes Co., 33 Whitehall Street.

"Partial deafness is being conquered rapidly through scientific research and the development of a hearing aid that actually does all that is claimed for it," said Mr. Gus B. Sisson, president of the Hawkes Company. The latest type Acousticon with its outstanding improvements over all other models is proof that more rapid strides have been made during the past year than ever before.

"This new instrument with over 5,000 hours of better hearing with one battery, and free service for the development of the Acousticon, constitute a tremendous improvement over all other hearing aids," he said.

The Hawkes Company invites those who are afflicted with partial deafness to visit their private audition rooms for a free demonstration—no cost or obligation whatsoever. Liberal trade-in allowance is made for your old instrument. Easy terms can be had, if desired.—(adv.)

It Is Time To Think About Bulbs

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

It is time to think about bulbs, to prepare bulb beds, to gather together our bulb cobs, selecting varieties and types that add beauty to the garden early next spring, now.

Probably the best one to consider first is daffodils, for they are grown in our country and may be obtained and planted earlier than those from Holland. So today, we will confine our remarks to that family sometimes called daffodils, sometimes called narcissus, but called by every garden lover, beautiful.

Most of the members of the narcissus family, which, of course, includes trumpet daffodils, large cupped daffodils, short cupped daffodils, jonquils, poet's and poet's narcissi as grown in commerce begin their resting period in the early part of the summer, the time when their leaves die down.

At that time the large growers dig them and dry them in storage for later cleaning, grading and shipment.

Just as quickly as the larger or sale sizes are sorted out and government inspected, the others or what are termed planting stock, are put back in a fresh field to grow again.

By this time of year root development has begun in most all varieties, showing that the normal time for planting is at hand.

It is possible to plant varieties of narcissi as late as the new year, but reason tells us that the plant, lacking the normal long period of development, will be stunted in growth and the flower dwarfed quite a bit.

Bulbs planted therefore in September and October (the earlier the better) will be earlier and prettier developed than those planted in November and later.

In other words, with these bulbs just as with almost any other plant, the nearer we approach natural conditions the better the success with them.

The requirements for growing the hardy members of the narcissus family are not many nor are they difficult to fulfill.

Any good garden soil will grow good, healthy, richly colored flowers if provided with good drainage and a reasonable amount of plant food.

Soils that are inclined to be quite heavy and tight will become lighter and more porous if woods earth or peat moss are added in goodly quantities. In a like manner may light, sandy soils be made more suitable for bulb culture.

About the most important consideration, when we consider the feeding of our bulbs, is not to use any animal manures unless they have been composted for at least two years, and even then they are dangerous. Various insects and rots that affect bulbs thrive in these manures and stand ready to damage them when they come in contact with each other.

Bone meal is by far the safest of all fertilizers to use, and generally speaking, better results are obtained when it is used as a side application after the tops begin to grow out of the ground in early spring.

Commercial fertilizers applied lightly as side dressings give good results, but must be used lightly. Those with a rather high potash content are preferable.

Narcissus bulbs are best planted with the tops about three or four inches under the surface. This protects them from freezing and thawing in winter and too much heat in the summer. They will stand any amount of cold—zero or below—if they are well covered with soil, but either excessive heat or excessive cold without proper covering, is likely to cause breaking down in plant tissues giving entrance to rot and decay.

Cultivation of narcissus is most simple because its growth comes at the season when practically no grass or weeds are living and when the soil is usually quite moist. In fact, then it is almost unnecessary.

When spring brings our daffodils and jonquils into bloom we need have no fear about cutting the flowers, for it does not hurt the bulb to take them nor does it hurt to leave them, because they very seldom ever bear seed.

Under ordinary conditions no plants or bulbs either give as satisfactory results with the least attention as daffodils and jonquils. They have two main uses—in beds or borders in our gardens and out under the trees and on the lawn in a naturalistic planting. The difference between daffodils and jonquils is mainly in the leaves. Daffodils have usually large and always flat leaves while true jonquils have dark round onion-like foliage and are very sweet-scented.

Daffodils are divided into several groups. Large trumpet types best represented by the finest and most satisfactory variety King Alfred. Next comes the medium trumpet or incomparabilis type such as Sir Watkins—

Questions, Answers On Garden Subjects

By Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Cowan.

Questions: Where can I get a start of ophiopogon?

Answer: If you know any one who has some they will gladly give you some of the seed this fall. Plant them as soon as you get them and they will come up nicely in the spring. The following year they will probably bloom. The plants can also be divided either in the fall or in the spring.

Question: I have some cedar (aboretal) trees that have gotten much too big, both too tall and too big around. When shall I prune these?

Answer: For drastic pruning such as these trees need I prefer February, but a moderate amount of pruning and shearing can be done during the summer, July preferred. Be watching out for bagworms on your aboretals. Also red spider.

I hope all of you gardeners took advantage of the recent rainy spell to give your plants a good feeding of complete fertilizer. Especially your chrysanthemums. Remember not to pinch them back too late, for it makes blooming much later. Some varieties are so tender to frost that if you do not get them in bloom in October you will miss it altogether. Feed and water them until their buds are good size, then just water. How many of you have grown chrysanthemums from seed?

Another thing, keep your zinnia blooms cut. The more you cut them the longer they will bloom. They also like food and water.

What have you been doing about your roses? Now is the time to give them that last good feed for fall bloom. You know that we should not feed roses after September 1, so you have less than two weeks left for this important meal. Always give generously of water when feeding flowers. Cut your roses with long stems.

Petunias will bloom freely until frost if you cut them back as needed. It is hard to tell you to do this on a certain day, for according to their growth is this needed. But set your time and do it.

With the hundreds of varieties though that we have we may select for any purpose and any situation that we may have and so fulfill our worthy desire for the greatest of all pleasures and thrills—the first great outburst of color and fragrance signifying the general awakening of mother nature's children that is so soon to follow in the spring.

Next comes the medium trumpet or incomparabilis type such as Sir Watkins—membership in the All-American Conference."

To the state chairmen of law observance, a letter from Mrs. Harry W. Smith, general federation chairman, says: "Although these are vacation days, we have to bear in mind that during these months club programs are planned and therefore it is a vital time to call to the attention of our club leaders the necessity of giving some study to the subject of law observance this coming club year. If we are to check the growing crime of our times, we must make law observance a fixed habit in the life of our citizenry."

"Will you contact the club leaders in your state and ask that they give some time on their programs this year to law observance? The same points will be emphasized this year—knowledge of state laws covering (a) traffic in narcotics, (b) liquor control, (c) gambling and lotteries, (d) highway safety, (e) employment of women and children.

"With the idea of prevention foremost in our plans, this year we urge a study of juvenile needs in each community. I suggest the use of two books in this connection, 'Crime and Youth Today' (a report of Herald Tribune round table) published by New York Herald Tribune, price 50 cents, and 'Who Is Delinquent?' (the Los Angeles county plan of co-ordinating councils) published by the Rotary Club of Los Angeles, Cal., price 25 cents.

"Fingerprinting has been added to this division with the idea of increasing interest in this subject and willingness to be fingerprinted. Most of the state legislatures will be in session during this year. Urge your clubwomen to follow whatever legislation may come up in their states touching the subjects we are particularly stressing. I trust this year will mark progress in the work of this division. First, we aim for more knowledge of the laws of our states, and second, better observance and enforcement of existing laws. Please let me hear from you as to the progress of this work in your state—your plans and accomplishments."

WHY

are more women than ever selecting Townley Coats in August?

1 because Townley is the leader in American coat fashions. Women know that the silhouette, fabrics and fur treatments sponsored by Townley in August, inevitably become the dominant fashions of the entire season.

2 because Townley coats are created for American women who seek the fashion assurance that comes of true comfort... who prefer wider laps that do not gape... finer linings that will not pucker... slenderizing "balanced" lines!

3 because Townley's 1936-37 August Sale collections offer greater variety, wider selection than ever. They portray every mood of the mode... they adopt everything new, but only the best of the new... they're styled for enduring rightness!

4 because last winter's record-breaking cold produced the hardest, most lustrous fur catch in decades... and Townley experts spent months collecting the finest specimens to enrich the coats in this August Sale. Townley furs are worth more!

5 because every Townley coat... no matter what its price... is custom tailored by master craftsmen who believe in utilizing only the best of everything... who regard as important the little things that make Townley America's greatest coat achievement!

6 because good news travels fast... and Townley customers invariably become Townley boosters. Their recommendation is our greatest asset. Once a woman has possessed a Townley... nothing else will satisfy!

7 because women, everywhere, have the utmost confidence in the Townley label and the standards it represents... To them, the Townley signature is a quality endorsement that assures complete and lasting satisfaction.

8 because this August, as always, we have definite and indisputable proof that women who have viewed the Townley August coat collections... and then shopped the town for comparable value... invariably returned to select a Townley.

9 because it is Townley's policy to sell at lower prices in August than at any other time of the year. Furs have sky-rocketed... fabrics and labor costs are rising daily... but Townley's August prices are based on early purchase costs... and August shoppers are reaping a rich reward in tremendous savings!

10 because more women are finding Townley's "Lay-Away" plan with its convenient, liberal terms... a sensible, helpful way to attain Townley coat luxury.

State W.C.T.U. President Selects Her Subject for October Convention

By M. FRANCES MEADORS

BURGHARD
Macon, State W. C. T. U. Editor.
The fifty-third annual convention of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance Union convenes in Cartersville in October, the date to be named later. The president, Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, will speak on "The State of the Union as Time Marches On."

Georgia members appreciate the honor accorded Mrs. Russell at the national W. C. T. U. convention in Tulsa last June, when in recognition of her ability as a speaker, she was chosen with three other state presidents from the 50 state presidents to make impromptu speeches one evening when a speaker of national note was not able to keep her engagement. This was in addition to her scheduled appearance on the program at other times.

Dr. Mary Harris Armistead will return from her world tour and will bring one of her inspiring messages to the convention. Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, state evangelistic director, will arrange for daily devotionals, and Mrs. Annie Laurie Cunyus, of Cartersville, state music director, will be in charge of convention music.

Mrs. Berta Scott, of Bainbridge, state membership director, will be in charge of a membership demonstration in which the Cherokee roses, 637 of them, each representing a new member gained during the membership campaign, to which will be added roses for members entering, up to the date the state treasurer's books close for the fiscal year, will be arranged into a garland to be borne by the presidents, or membership directors, of unions gaining members. Judging by the plans outlined it will be beautiful. This demonstration will fit into the state president's speech.

Young people, Miss Aurelia Taylor, of Atlanta, state secretary of the state Youth's Temperance Council, will feature a radio program, broadcasting from station WCTI, and answering questions propounded by the announcer.

Mrs. R. Frank Pim, of Atlanta, state secretary of the Loyal Temperance Legion, will present a demonstration with the children using flags and singing their songs and giving their rally cries. Light line unions each represented by a director of temperance and missions carrying a lighted candle in demonstration, will be in charge of Mrs. C. C. Sapp, of Albany, state director of temperance and missions department.

Other state directors to present departments include press, Mrs. Annie Durham Mathis, Decatur; exhibits and fairs, Miss Sara Anne Wright, Elberton; modern contacts, Mrs. E. A. Cawthon, Atlanta; alcohol education, Miss Estelle Bozeman, Hawkinsville; international relations, Mrs. J. M. Mizrah, Columbus; child welfare, Mrs. E. L. Reeves, Atlanta; citizenship and legislation, Mrs. Marvin Williams, Cedarhurst; religious education, Mrs. J. M. Glenn, McLea; flower mission and relief, Mrs. W. H. Preston, Atlanta, and literature, Mrs. T. E. Patterson, Newnan.

Editor of the Georgia W. C. T. U. Bulletin, Mrs. August Burghard, of Macon, will call attention to the state official organ and Mrs. Byrd Lovett, Sandersville, agent of the Union Signal, will stress merits of the national official organ, and Mrs. Ewell Atkins, Milledgeville, will discuss advantages of having children read the Young Crusader, the children's temperance paper, with pictures and stories.

State officers to make annual reports are Mrs. Marvin Williams, Cedarhurst, vice president; Mrs. R. L. Miller, Waynesboro, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. William Brown, Griffin, treasurer. Reports of the year's accomplishments will be made by the district presidents, Miss Martha Kelly, Reidsville; Mrs. Robert Travultr, Moultrie; Mrs. W. N. Austin, Columbus; Mrs. C. A. Sims, Vienna; Mrs. M. K. Phillips, Bremen; Mrs. Robert McDougall, Atlanta; Mrs. J. H. Wasden, Sandersville; Mrs. John Wood, Rome; Mrs. H. L. Williams, Saxley, and Mrs. Remer Brown, Augusta.

Important reports will be made by the standing committees: Mrs. Byrd Harbour, Dublin, chairman; Mrs. Carolyn Kneer, Augusta, and Mrs. Columbus Roberts, Columbus, on resolutions; Mrs. Robert Traveler, Moultrie, chairman; Mrs. T. O. Hathcock, Atlanta; Mrs. Berta Scott, Bainbridge; Mrs. George A. Moore, Marietta, and Mrs. O. L. Taylor, Atlanta, on finances.

Prizes will be awarded, among them cash prizes for the following winners writing the best temperance essays and making the best temperance posters: High school, first, Will Wynn, Albany; second, Ann Johnson, Norcross; third, Lottie Banks, Winder. In lower grades, first, Joseph Hood, Commerce; second, Hazel Worley, Canton. For the best temperance posters, first, George Drake, Albany; second, Sarah Mitchell, Norcross.

It has been 24 years since the state W. C. T. U. convention met in Cartersville, and Mrs. T. E. Patterson was state president. Among those who have been prominent since that date and who attended the convention are Mesdames Lella A. Dillard, Mary L. McLenon, W. H. Felton, Sam P. Jones, Anna Jones, Pryor, Miss M. Theresa Griffin and others. General officers of the hostess union are Mesdames A. B. Cunyus, W. M. Dorsey, C. Griffin. The union is flourishing and has added new members during the year.

Francis S. Bartow Memorial Cottage Will Be Built This Year at Rabun Gap

By MRS. A. BELMONT DENNIS, of Covington, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

One of the outstanding achievements of the year for Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will be the building of Francis S. Bartow Memorial Cottage at Rabun Gap. This family cottage will give to a family the opportunity to not only educate their children, but the father and mother will be taught to be self-sustaining, good citizens, and will go out into their community as missionaries of better living, and contribute to the further upbuilding of Georgia. Mrs. Ed A. Caldwell, of Monroe, is chairman of Francis S. Bartow Memorial and has worked untiringly in its behalf. Mrs. Caldwell sends the following message to U. D. C. members:

"As division chairman of the Francis S. Bartow Memorial, I am writing to thank you that have sent a contribution for the Francis S. Bartow Memorial Cottage at Rabun Gap, and asking those who have not responded to please send in their contribution as soon as possible. I do hope that many of you are having benefits to raise funds for this great work, which every Daughter of the Confederacy will look on with pride. We have had many contributions but it will take many more to put it over. Many chapters have not responded and I hope to have a check from every one before the first of September. So please let me hear from you soon, with a generous check. Sincerely, (Mrs. Ed. A.) Kate T. Caldwell, division chairman, Francis S. Bartow Memorial, Monroe, Ga."

Mrs. Warren D. White, state chairman revision of constitution and by-laws, requests that any suggested changes be sent immediately for consideration of the committee which meets at an early date at the home of the chairman, 716 Piedmont avenue. U. D. C. members are: Mrs. Warren D. White, 716 Piedmont avenue, Atlanta; Mrs. Frank Harold Amerius, Mrs. Bun Wylie, Atlanta; Mrs. W. H. Perkins, Marietta; Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, Covington; Mrs. Harvie Jordan, Atlanta; Mrs. J. M. Simmons, Bainbridge.

Mrs. W. P. Smith, of Decatur, state registrar, urges chapter registrars to send in membership application papers as soon as possible in order that certificates may be issued before the October convention, which convenes in Thomasville. Mrs. Smith calls attention of presidents of chapters that the enrolling of one new member between 18 and 25 years of age is a star chapter requirement. She offers as a suggestion that each chapter select some outstanding young woman of Confederate ancestry in the community and present her with a membership, thereby bringing young life into the chapter, as well as meeting the star chapter requirement.

Division registrar reports the following papers accepted for membership in the United Daughters of the Confederacy since the last report: American, Miss Ann Walker; Eatonton, Mrs. Addie Elizabeth Preston Howard and Miss Mary Allen; Atlanta, Mrs. L. C. Burk, Forsyth. Interest the college students at home for vacations in U. D. C. work, ask them to try for student prize as listed in general prize list. Write the history of your own chapter, collect photographs of past presidents and preserve with biographies.

Chapters are earnestly requested to send Mrs. A. Belmont Dennis of Covington, state editor, a list of newly elected officers.

BRIDGE ACCORDING TO CULBERTSON

By ELY CULBERTSON.

THE possession by the responding hand of extraordinary trump support is the cause of more overbidding than any other single element. There is, apparently, some deep seated psychological quirk in a great many players that deludes them into the idea that if the trumps are both long and solid, nothing very terrible can happen. Let the partner of an opening spade bidder, for instance, hold such a hand as:

♠ K 10 9 8 6 5 3 ♥ 10 4 ♦ 7 3 ♣ 8 4 and he is apt to go on a wild bidding orgy—"Why, partner, I had seven of your trumps!" And when the declarer, perspiringly wrestling with a hopeless game contract on such a perfectly honest opening bid as:

♠ A Q J 7 3 ♥ A Q 6 ♦ Q 5 3 ♣ 9 3 goes down to a two trick defeat (having lost the heart finesse) the responder makes it plain, by his aggrieved attitude, that he feels he has been "thrown."

The fact of the matter is that only rarely will the responding hand's trumps in excess of four prove valuable, unless the distribution of the other suits is such that a cross-ruff is sure to develop. Thus, it is not the trump support alone that is important; it is the pattern of the entire hand; which is, of course, true when the trump support is exactly four long (assuming the combined trump holding to be solid.)

For all practical purposes, the following hands are of approximately equal value in support of a one spade bid:

A—♠ K Q J 9 ♥ A K Q 9 3 2 ♦ 3 2 ♣ 2
B—♠ K Q J 9 6 3 ♥ A K Q 9 ♦ 3 2 ♣ 2 with the "edge" very much in favor of the one with only four trumps. If the opening bid was made on such a hand as:

♠ A 10 8 7 4 ♥ J 10 5 ♦ A 5 4 ♣ A 4 a grand slam is a laydown with A while six-odd is the best B will produce. I could give many other examples showing how A would make a game whereas B would fall short, but I very much doubt that any one could devise an opening spade bid that would play better opposite B than A.

Surely it should not be difficult for all players to understand that, taking adequate trump support for granted, playing tricks in a side suit are fully the equal of playing tricks in the trump suit. It is the height of folly to try to appraise a hand by segments—the only practicable appraisal is of the entire hand. In line with this reasoning I must point out that when the opening bid has been overcalled by an opponent, a raise based on nothing but trump support is highly ambiguous to the partner and therefore, usually unwise. Specifically, if South has opened the bidding with one spade, West overcalls with two diamonds and North holds:

♠ K J 9 7 4 ♥ 8 6 5 3 2 ♦ — ♣ J 10 3 he has no right whatever to raise spades freely. He should pass, and hope that his partner will indicate real strength by a rebid or takeout double. Leave North with the same high card holding, but scramble his distribution something like this:

♠ K J 9 7 4 ♥ 8 3 2 ♦ 6 5 ♣ J 10 3 and now, with his enormous increase in playing tricks, instead of passing, he should actually give a pre-emptive triple raise to four spades! Please note that the trump suit is the same in both hands!

BRIDGE PROBLEM.

East opens the bidding with one diamond and South, by overly aggressive bidding, reaches the contract of six spades. West leads his singleton diamond. Can the contract be made against the best defense? See answer below.

ANSWER.

The contract cannot be made if East plays correctly to the first trick. If he covers dummy's diamond, victory for South is easy. South will ruff, lead the ace, queen of trumps, and then play diamonds through East, establishing four diamonds tricks. But if East properly ducks on the first trick, declarer can never use the rest of dummy's diamond suit. If he leads another diamond immediately, East ducks again and if South discards, West will ruff. If the adverse trumps are drawn, dummy will have no entries for the establishing and cashing of the diamond suit, and South will lose one trick in hearts and one in clubs.

tract through sheer, unadulterated carelessness. The total would run into figures that would probably confound every one but astronomers whom no figures, except feminine, can confound.

The declarer in today's hand was one of the nation's outstanding experts—but his rating did not keep him from making a careless play that would have cost him a game if his equally expert left had opponent had not, with exquisite courtesy, returned the favor:

♥ 8 6 3
♦ A J 9 5 4
♣ A 9

WEST
♠ A Q 10 7 6
♥ K 9 2
♦ Q 8 2
♣ 6 3

EAST
♠ 4 3
♥ 10 5
♦ K 10 6 3

SOUTH
♠ K J 8
♥ A Q J 7 4
♦ 7
♣ K Q 10 2

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 N. T. Pass 3 N. T. (f. b.)

South's two no trump bid over his partner's two diamonds was questionable because of his singleton in the latter suit; a rebid of hearts would have been the more conventional course, but South being a better player than his partner, wanted to be the declarer if a no trump contract should be reached.

West opened the seven of spades and, without a thought, declarer played low from dummy and won with the eight spot. A casual count would have disclosed that if the seven led were really fourth highest, which it might well be, dummy's nine would hold the trick and provide an entry for a heart finesse. Now, however, landed in his own hand, declarer had to use dummy's club ace for an entry. He led a heart to his queen and West was so shortsighted as to grab the trick with the king. After that, since he could not put East on lead, there was no defense against the game contract.

Had West properly ducked the first heart trick, declarer would have been in a very pretty quandary. He would be afraid that East held the heart king and, therefore, could not afford to play the ace and another heart to force it out, since East would then lead a spade through to West's long, tenaced suit. Thus, he would have had to play East for the king of hearts and to do this would have had to take out dummy's only other entry, the diamond ace. Now, on a second heart finesse, West would win his king, lead the queen and another diamond and on the natural spade return by East, run his entire suit for a four trick penalty:

TODAY'S QUESTIONS.

Question: Will you kindly indicate the correct bidding of the following hands? Both sides vulnerable, but the opponents make no bid.

NORTH (dealer)
♠ 5 4
♥ K 8 3 2
♦ A 7 4
♣ J 9 6 3

SOUTH
♠ K Q 10 8 3
♥ A J 10 5
♦ 8
♣ A 5 4

Answer: The correct bidding is as follows:

NORTH SOUTH
Pass 1 Spade
1 No Trump 2 Hearts
3 Hearts 4 Hearts

Question: Is it ethical for the dummy to look deliberately in both opponents' hands?

Answer: It is ethical for him to do so, but it is not good etiquette, and, of course, he forfeits his rights by this action.

SPURNS DOUBLE IN WILD RIDE

Although "doubles" are spoken of in hushed whispers in Hollywood, they do exist—but not for Jane Wyatt.

Jane, who reminds you of Park avenue, limousines and orchids, was supposed to do some dangerous riding in scenes for "Lost Horizon." In accordance with an old Hollywood custom, a double was engaged and Frank Capra prepared to shoot the long shots. After three takes still was not satisfied.

"Why not let me try?" said Jane, who was standing quietly by.

"You . . . why . . . er . . . can you ride?" asked the surprised Capra.

"I can try," replied Miss Wyatt, and climbing into the saddle she was off like the wind over the dangerous jumps. The first take was perfect. It developed that Jane is one of the first ladies of the eastern hunt and steeple-chase courses and has ridden since girlhood.

The Planets—Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenient to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

AUGUST 23—SUNDAY: After 9:28 a. m. this is a most favorable day, although it is not likely to start favorable. Previous to 9:28 a. m. you may crave excitement, tempers will be easily displayed and life will seem less congenial than is usual. This is an auspicious period, however, for getting things done which may have seemed to drag previously, provided you can keep your poise. The remainder of the day and evening you will have more influence over the people with whom you are associated. New friends made at this time will prove advantageous in a social way, and you will be filled with new inspiration and can work or play with enthusiasm.

AUGUST 24—MONDAY: During the morning hours and until 4:56 p. m. is a favorable time for obtaining the confidence of people who are in power. At this time, you may interest people whom you have not been able to convince of the value of your proposition. Further your financial interests now, make legal consultations, attend to business correspondence. This is a favorable time for appointments, travel and meetings. After 4:56 p. m., the calmness of the morning is displaced with a feeling of impatience and nervousness, and is more auspicious for attending to details of affairs previously begun.

AUGUST 25—TUESDAY: Continue with your routine duties before 4:05 p. m., and do not undertake additional responsibilities. Work that you may have thought settled, and the details completed, is likely to reappear and new details will have to be worked out. This is especially true in matters of friendship and real estate transactions. After 4:05 p. m. favors conservative transactions, produce and property.

AUGUST 26—WEDNESDAY: Plan to approach new ideas and new suggestions carefully until 1:07 p. m. Restrictions in your endeavors and a lack of cheerfulness around you may prove irksome. Your progress will be slow, but obstacles may be overcome through patience and persistence. These hours are more favorable to attend to old matters, avoiding transactions relating to land, iron, where congeniality is necessary, and artistic ideas. The remainder of the day, while slightly better, is not favorable for reversing your decisions or for too high enthusiasms. Your plans now are better for future action than they are for immediate success.

AUGUST 27—THURSDAY: After 7:45 a. m., and continuing throughout the entire day and afternoon, attend to your most important plans for the week. You can look for a few "breaks," or favorable developments. Take advantage of this auspicious day to advance your ambitions.

AUGUST 28—FRIDAY: The predominating influences for the entire day are favorable, especially for work that is of a stable nature. The good fellowship of those around you will aid you in just naturally taking the right course of action. This is an auspicious day for pleasures and work of an aesthetic nature, land and property interests, and anything of a social nature.

AUGUST 29—SATURDAY: Before 4:11 p. m. new beginnings are apt to have an angle to them that you do not perceive. Be sure those with whom you are dealing are "on the level" with you. The afternoon and evening are favorable for small interests, minor matters, but not favorable for important changes.

Edward Arnold at 14 in an early Shakespearean role.

After the Lean Years

By Edward Arnold

Then Come the Busy Years, Star Finds; There'll Be Time to Play Later for the time being. When my Five-Year Plan works out and I get the air, I'll do my playing in places I've only been able to read about.

Meanwhile I'm not trying to learn Hollywood games. I came up the hard way, and the business didn't give me a chance to be fancy.

THERE were games we played when I was a kid in the lower East Side of New York. The Germans we belonged to had a game called Vogel Schiessen. A long chain was suspended from a pole about 20 feet tall. At the end of the chain was a wooden bird with a sharp pointed beak. A target was nailed to the pole and a player stood back a certain number of paces, holding the bird. He would let go and try to hit the bulls-eye. We played this and other games at picnics we'd have in Astoria, L. I., or Guttenburg, N. J.

I learned how to play pinochle by watching my father, my Uncle Hilmer and Otto Schwenk play it in Joe Opp's saloon in the Bowery when I was 7 and 8 years old, and I've played it in theater dressing rooms all over the country, but nobody in Hollywood seems to want to play Vogel Schiessen or pinochle. So I don't play in Hollywood. What do I do? I do what I have done nearly all my life. I work; act.

I became stage struck when I was about 11 years old and heard Uncle Hilmer play the bass fiddle at Tony Pastor's.

AT THIS time my mother died and my father's health failed so that he had to go to an invalid home. My Uncle Emil took me in. I worked in a law office, as a bellboy at the old German Club, tried to learn the upholsterer's trade, then went to work at Columbia University as an oiler in the engine room when I was 15. It had been decided that I would become a stationary engineer, so I attended classes in the mornings at the university and oiled engines from 3 p. m. to midnight.

Those studies nearly killed me. A kid who has been to school only through the fourth grammar grade can't pick up in an engineering class very easily.

Meanwhile I had joined an amateur theatrical group at the settlement house at 76th St. and East River, and I would study my part while watching the engines at night. That lasted until one night, while studying lines for "Pygmalion and Galatea," I let the engines run hot. The engineer fired me, saying: "You'd better go on the stage."

I don't know to this day whether he figured I would be a good actor or just that I was a lousy oiler.

John D. Barry, the critic, who was really my patron saint, stepped into the picture then. Barry had been helping us with our plays at the settlement house, and now he sent me to Ben Greet, with a great buildup. I toured with the Ben Greet players for two years, at the then unbelievable salary of $25 a week.

Those were grand days. I was holding down such toles as Theseus in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Sebastian in "The Tempest," the Prince of Verona in "Romeo and Juliet," Charles the Wrestler in "As You Like It," and Death in "Everyman." I was a big chunk, even at 17, weighing better than 170 pounds.

I WAS 17 when I left Greet, and Maxine Elliott gave me a juvenile part that paid $50 a week. I was in the big money! I played a season and a half with Maxine and then, miracles of miracles, I found myself with Ethel Barrymore, opening the Empire in New York in "Midchannel." I got no more than $50 a week and I spoke exactly two words—"Brandy—kummel?" But I was with Ethel, and when I saw my friends after the show at night I flicked the ash from my cigar and identified myself as being "with Ethel Barrymore, you know, at the Empire."

Shortly after the Barrymore association, I went into stock. Ten very lean years followed. I remember a hotel bill I jumped in St. Paul in 1912. I paid it seven years later when, returning to St. Paul as a guest star, I was invited to tea at the State executive mansion to meet the Governor. The Governor's aide de camp was the proprietor of the hotel I had beaten!

That St. Paul trip marked the end of my first prosperity. Two years earlier I had gone to the old Essanay Studios in Chicago, succeeding Francis X. Bushman at the fabulous salary of $125 a week. I played in about 30 productions with such stars as Henry B. Walthall, Bryant Washburn, Marguerite Clayton and others. Then, after the brief St. Paul run, I worked exactly two weeks in nine months.

THE break finally came in 1932, when I had given up hope. A Theater Guild part had led to three seasons of stage work and eventually to a short run with Henry Hull in "The Gray Fox," then to the show that brought me to Hollywood, "Whistling in the Dark." In Los Angeles the movie agents spotted me and were backstage the second night, wanting to take me to dinner and talk things over. I felt my bald spot and looked at my overstuffed figure in the mirror and decided it didn't make sense.

But sensible or not, it jumped me from $185 a week on the stage to $750 a week at a film studio.

Our show was to move to San Francisco, and Garnett and Young wanted me to start right away in a picture called "O. K. America," in a gangster role like the one I was playing on the stage. When I told them I had to go to San Francisco, they made a proposition that did away with inferiority complexes for good.

"That's all right," they said. "We'll charter a plane for you and you can commute between San Francisco and Hollywood. You can leave there early in the morning, get to the studio by 9 o'clock, work a full day and get back to San Francisco in time for your night show."

AFTER "O. K. America" I tried to land the part of the doctor in "Rasputin," but the producer looked at me and said: "He plays gangster parts. He can't be a doctor."

The author as he will appear in Samuel Goldwyn's film, "Come and Get It."

But when I got back to my hotel the studio was calling me. The girl said I was to report at 8 o'clock the next morning—for the doctor part in "Rasputin."

"But they threw me out of the studio when I asked for that part," I said.

"I can't help that," she answered. "They want you in the morning, with Prince Albert coat and striped trousers, ready for work."

Here's what happened. After turning me down, the producers looked through Livingston's Casting Directory for someone who might fit the part. Some time before I had bought a page in the directory, putting in a picture of myself in the role of the Reich Chancellor in "The Miracle of Verdun," a part in which I wore a spade beard. Very impressive. The producers forgot all about throwing me out a few minutes before and said: "That's the man we need. Get him!"

It was duck soup after that. I have played in 30 pictures in four years, starting in "Diamond Jim," "Crime and Punishment," "Sutter's Gold" and "Meet Nero Wolfe."

Now I am making "Come and Get It," Edna Ferber's story of the lumber barons, for Samuel Goldwyn, and after that I am to do a series of biographical roles, Jim Fiske, Allan Pinkerton, Alexandre Dumas and Canfield, the gambler. I have assignments enough now to run over a year, and I am planning on enough for four years more.

After that I am going to play.

WHEN JUSTICE TRIUMPHED

By PETER LEVINS.

"ARE you Georgette?" asked the old woman. "And is this child the son of Dr. Malmec?"

Sixteen-year-old Georgette Parra-chon nodded. She had been wheeling Claude Malmec Jr., 18 months old, only son of Professor Claude Malmec of the medical faculty of Marseille University, in the Amable-Chanot, Marseille, when the elderly woman, garbed entirely in black and leaning on a cane, stopped by the baby carriage and addressed her. The time was the afternoon of November 28, 1935.

"I have been asked by Mme. Malmec to look for you here," said the stranger. "Dr. Malmec has been gravely hurt in an accident, and they want you home at once." "What happened?" exclaimed the nursemaid. "Where is the doctor?" "He is home, Mme. Malmec wants us to stop at the home of Dr. Cremieux, colleague of Dr. Malmec, so that he may come at once."

They hailed a taxicab at once. Georgette, the baby and the woman in black got into the rear seat while the driver struggled with the bulky carriage. They instructed him to proceed first to the home of Dr. Cremieux, on the Rue Paradis, then to 185 Avenue de Prado, the Malmec residence.

As the cab drew to a stop in front of Dr. Cremieux's home, the elderly woman said that she was tired, and suggested that Georgette go upstairs and fetch the doctor, while she proceeded with the baby to the Malmec home so that little Claude might join his mother as soon as possible. Georgette said all right, the taxi moved off, and she went upstairs.

Ten minutes later she and Dr. Cremieux arrived at the Malmec home. They learned at once that nothing had happened to Dr. Malmec. And the woman in black had not shown up with the child.

The police were notified. The Malmec family believed that it was kidnapping, and Chief of Police Couplet spread a dragnet for the baby, the old woman, and the taxi driver. Marseille has long had the reputation of being one of the worst spots in Europe, for there is always a steady influx of criminals into this Mediterranean port, but the abduction of an infant was almost a unique offense.

That evening the authorities located the taxi driver. He said he was Albert Tomassone, and that he had driven his fare to 5 Pierre-Puget square, where the old woman had left the cab and disappeared with the baby in the hall of an apartment house at that address. She also took along the baby carriage.

At the request of Dr. Malmec, the police that same evening put bloodhounds to work. They picked up the trail at 5 Pierre-Puget square, followed it to the Couronne Park, Rue Roux-de-Brignoulles and Boulevard Notre-Dame, then through neighboring streets until they reached the Rue d'Endoume. There they stopped, apparently losing the scent.

The night passed without further developments. The next morning word reached the police that the baby carriage had been found abandoned in the hallway of the building at 18 Pierre-Puget square, only a few doors from the spot where the woman had left the taxicab. Dr. Malmec and Georgette Ferrachon identified it at once. The nurse's folding chair and Claude's toy automobile were in the carriage. The cushions had disappeared.

Now the newspapers and radio stations went to the aid of the police. Descriptions of the old woman and of the baby were broadcast in the press and over the air. At the same time the anxious parents followed the example of the Lindberghs by asking the kidnapers to feed their child a diet of cooked water, sugared milk, mashed potatoes and mashed bananas.

The story of the taxicab driver was checked again.

"I had a lot of trouble stowing away the carriage," said Tomassone. "When we arrived at our destination, I helped get the carriage out of the car, but when I wanted to lift the baby out, the old woman grabbed him. She moved so fast that I said, 'Don't be afraid, he is so pretty nobody would harm him.'"

Late on Friday afternoon, the day after the crime, Dr. Malmec received the following letter:

"Don't worry about your child. It will be returned to you safe and sound if you pay the sum of 50,000 francs (about $8,500). Take good care not to notify the police and particularly the press, or your child will be in danger. If you agree to turn over the sum named, place in the 'Petit Marseillais' of tomorrow, Saturday, a small advertisement couched in the following words and placed by the Havas agency: 'With 50,000 francs at my disposal, seeking lucrative employment.'"

The advertisement appeared in the newspaper the next morning.

That same day, the 30th, Dr. Malmec asked the press to publish this appeal to the kidnapers:

"Excuse our asking you to insert this letter, but for Mme. Malmec and myself this is the only means of getting in touch with the people who in a foolish moment of error have committed this terrible crime, the kidnapping of our dear little Claude."

"We cannot believe, however, that this person or persons are completely heartless. We ask them to take good care of our son and to bring him back to his parents absolutely unharmed. We stand prepared to pay a certain amount, even in a discreet manner if this is desired. But we speak to the heart of the man or woman, asking that they understand and are willing to shorten this terrific ordeal which they have imposed upon us."

The next clue came from Catherine Juan, a servant in the Malmec home. Mlle. Juan, who was spending her vacation with her brother at the town of Alger, told the following story:

About the middle of June, while Dr. Malmec was vacationing with his family at Chamonix, an old woman dressed in black had called at the house and asked the superintendant many questions about the Malmecs. She wanted to know where the doctor came from, where he had studied, and whether a guest was staying with the family. When the concierge proved unable to supply this information, the visitor had offered him money to gather details about the domestic life of the professor.

When Dr. Malmec returned from the country the servant told him about the incident, but he had attached little significance to it.

On Monday, December 2, it became known that 12 days before the kidnapping of the Malmec baby there had been an attempt, apparently by the same woman, to abduct the child of another doctor.

A nurse in the employ of Dr. Cezatti had visited a playground with the two Cezatti children; Francois, 3, and Marie-Louise, 18 months. Suddenly an old woman dressed in black had appeared and told her that Dr. Cezatti had died, and that the children must be brought home at once.

Just at that moment, however, Mrs. Cezatti arrived at the playground—and the old woman had hurried away at once.

Had this incident been given publicity, the newspapers pointed out, the Malmec kidnapping probably would never have occurred.

As in the Lindbergh case in this country, the people of Marseille talked of nothing but the kidnapping and a flood of letters and telephone calls poured into the Malmec home. Two detectives were stationed in the apartment to handle all calls and visitors.

On the afternoon of December 2, a woman appeared at the door and asked to be ushered into the presence of Dr. Malmec. The doctor was not at home, so she told her story to the two officers.

She lived in the Beaumont section of the city, on the Boulevard des Pauvettes, and she was suspicious about a woman named Rolland, who lived in a house across the way with her son. For one thing, the old lady had not been out of the house since Thursday, the day of the kidnapping. For another, her son had been buying bananas regularly the last few days. (You will recall that the baby's diet included mashed bananas.)

As a matter of routine, the tip was investigated at once. Inspectors Le Bouzec and Aubin drove to the address in Beaumont, and noticed as they approached that the curtains were down. They rang, and presently heard a shuffling of feet inside. The door opened slightly. They saw an old woman in black, leaning on a cane.

"We've come to inspect the gas," said Officer Aubin.

"Just a moment," she said. "I'll go and call my son."

She began to close the door—and at that moment the policemen heard a baby cry.

Aubin and Le Bouzec pushed the woman aside and entered the house. Immediately they saw the infant sprawled on a bed. As they approached, a young man rushed to the bed with a revolver in his hand, shouting, "If you make one move, I'll kill the baby!"

The detectives stopped in their tracks. Aubin instinctively raised his arms in an attitude of surrender. "Don't do anything to the baby!" he said. "We'll let you clear out of here."

"Yes," said Le Bouzec. "We promise to let you go, but for God's sake don't hurt the child!"

"Do you promise on your word of honor?" the young man asked.

"We do," the officers said.

The kidnaper lowered his gun and started to leave the room, but at that moment the officers leaped into action. Aubin flung himself upon the young man while Le Bouzec rushed to the bed. The struggle was brief. The young man and the woman, who had hidden in the bathroom, were herded into the hallway. And a few minutes later the prisoners were on their way to headquarters and the baby was on his way home.

The captives, who gave their names as Gilbert Rolland, 26, and Eugenie Rolland, 67, said they were driven to commit the crime by poverty, that they had meant no

DANGER! FAY AT WORK

Second of a Series: Behind Favorite Programs

By William L. Stuart

YOU EXPECT this to be a concise, informative article about a Frank Fay rehearsal, don't you? Having heard his programs each Friday evening over the National Broadcasting Co. networks, you think this story of one of them should have a tear for the eye and a smile for the lips and a lot of the old wham!

Heh, heh, heh. Or, as Frank himself would say, Heh, heh, HEH! You see, there isn't a tear or a smile—nor even any wham. Because the Frank Fay rehearsal I attended was all like in a dream.

It was 'way last week, but it's just beginning to come back now. As I remember, it seems as though I was walking down a hall and thinking my own thoughts about this and that when all of a sudden I was seated on a tin-back chair in a radio studio looking at Bobbie Dolan, who was seated at a piano.

That's all. Me, Dolan, the piano, the four walls, the microphones, the rows of empty chairs. Then for some reason Dolan began playing a fine Irish tune with a lilt to its merry strains and enough pep to make a dozen grown men dance.

I said, "And is the Fay due yet?" The Dolan's fingers continued to dance lightly and the Dolan shook his head.

The Irish tune suddenly seemed to acquire more lilt and a half-dozen pixies and banshees tiptoed in through the doors and howled an accompaniment until the Dolan rose and banished them.

"Song pluggers," he said sadly, as the door closed softly on the last.

THE unreality left for a time then. I can remember clearly how the orchestra filed in and sat down to go over a gay Celtic tune called "Stompin' at the Savoy." But, as the light and simple strains died, it seemed that a great mist rolled over the place, blotting out the earth. Then, with the distant play of lightning and the far-off blowing of trumpets, the fog lifted to show a mighty figure of a man in a black, tan, buff, yellow and white striped polo shirt, brilliantly colored pants, and socks of a rainbow hue.

"The Fay," someone announced in my left ear with simple dignity; and the Fay walked over to the Dolan and said, "Have you told the boys they are to wear shorts to the broadcast tonight?" And the Dolan said, "I have that."

The lightning played on the horizon and the thunder rolled again and the doors opened to admit a sweet chit of a girl with flaxen hair and lips of living red. She bore a pad of paper and a dozen pencils and her head was lifted as though they were no less than the crown jewels that she carried.

"AH," said the voice in my left ear. I turned, and it seemed as though there was, all of a sudden, a young man sitting beside me—only he wasn't really sitting beside me but jumping up and running to the control room and running to Fay's side and coming back again.

"And who are you?" I asked. "I," he answered, "am the Left Hand. Did you know that the Fay rehearses his show piece by piece—now the opening number, now the commercial, now a comic spot—and not all in sequence?" "No," I said, and the Left Hand nodded as though he'd suspected as much and the Fay began to sing.

"Who is the girl?" I asked, looking at her as she sat with a brave smile on her lips and a pencil poised over the pad of paper.

"Ah," said the Left Hand. "Did you know that the Fay has his script all written—usually twice as much as is needed—by the Monday of each week and that the rest of the time is spent in looking up a guest star?"

I said "No," and the Fay stopped singing and began to practice telling a funny story. The girl's face grew smiling and eager and the thunder moaned softly as the elements clasped their sides. The Left Hand turned first a light green, then a brilliant blue as he laughed.

"HAW," gasped the Left Hand, as the Fay finished. "On Fridays—that's today—the Fay and the Dolan and the directors gather just before noon in a little studio downstairs. There they discuss the program and coach the guest star on microphone technique. Did you know that?"

"No," I said. "Does the little blond girl take the little pad into the room, too?"

"Yes," said the Left Hand. "Why?" I asked quickly. "You'll see," said the Left Hand,

This time you go behind the scenes as Frank Fay whips—and that's the proper word—a program into shape for you to hear Friday night over NBC.

"Did you know," murmured another voice—this time in my right ear, "that on Fridays—which is today—"

I turned and it seemed as though there was another young man sitting next to me—only he was running into the control room and looking out the little window into the studio and signalling to the Fay.

"Who are you?" I asked him when he came back again. "This other gentleman just told me about Fridays."

"I am the Right Hand," said the new young man.

"And," said the Left Hand, "the right hand never knows what the left is doing."

"DID YOU know," asked the Left and Right Hands together, "that the reason no one pays much attention to the timing on the Fay show is because, with his method of speaking, he can contract or expand material to fit? Or that, when he was broadcasting from Hollywood, he used to ask everyone out to his house, then put them to work in his garden?"

"Who's the girl?" I asked.

"Ah," said the Left and Right Hands. Then, it seemed as though Fay had finished a song and was snapping his tan, green, orange, yellow and pink suspenders and saying, "I've forgotten something. Where is the guest star?"

And at the words everyone began running around as, though the cameraman had speeded up the film and the Right and Left Hands became just blurs as they moved quickly hither to yon. Pretty soon I heard them say, "Ah-h-h-h," from way off and in they came with the Guest Star.

"Now," said the Fay happily. "Now we can work."

THE Right and Left Hands slowed down beside me and the Right Hand said, "Notice that Guest Star. Catch the sleek, timely look about him—just ripe for an interview. Everyone wants a Guest Star like that. In the public eye, newsy, important. Oh, boy."

I looked at the Guest Star and he was looking somewhat abashed at the rows and rows of empty chairs in front of him. "Lots of chairs," he ventured.

"Lots of chairs," said the Fay sympathetically.

"For the audience, I suppose. Do you fill 'em up? Have a big audience?"

The Fay had a tired, sad look. "Never been able to count 'em," he said. "Get in such a fearful mess rolling around in the aisles once the show starts."

"Look at the girl," hissed the Right Hand.

I looked and she was scribbling feverishly on her pad.

"The Fay's secretary," explained the Right Hand. "When he gets off a good one, she writes it down. Then, if it's still funny the next day, he might use it in a script."

"I see," said I.

The Fay and the Guest Star went through their interview and the girl looked happy and wrote down some more things and then Fay went over into a corner and looked dismal. When he had stopped, one of the musicians moved hesitatingly to his side.

"You mentioned shorts for tonight," he stammered.

"I insisted," said the Fay austerely.

"But," said the musician pathetically, "I'm so knock-kneed."

"Ignorance," said the Fay, "is no excuse."

I got to the door then and into the clean light of the hall. Graham MacNamee was ambling toward me. He said "Ah!"

That 'Certain Something'

By Lyle Rooks

MEET Barbara Pepper, who knows an amazing lot about perfume. She is an ex-New York show girl under contract to RKO and she's nicely started in pictures, thank you. She has the feminine lead in the new Wheeler and Woolsey antic-opera, "Mummy's Boys," and her part in "M'liss" was discernible.

Mention perfume in Barbara's presence and that unmistakable phenomenon, the collector's gleam, lights her eye. She describes herself as "one blond who buys her own perfume." Barbara knows the history of perfume. She can tell you, for instance, that the great French parfumeurs are distinguished descendants of humble apothecaries who were commissioned by lords and ladies of the court to make up potions so agreeably and highly scented that when worn upon the person they could be relied upon to somewhat disguise the unbathed condition of nobility. Shall we skip lightly over those details?

"ANY NOSE can be educated to be discriminating and a taste for highly evolved perfumes can be cultivated just as can a taste for classical music. But if the simplest flower scents appeal most to you, then you can't go far wrong by sticking to them. I can and do appreciate dozens of blended perfumes. I like to use a number of kinds as the mood or occasion suits. But my favorite of favorites remains the odor of lilac. And it is borne out by a preference for the color. I always manage to have at least one lavender dress.

"This is something to think about. Never rush to your dressing table, jerk the stopper out of your pet bottle of perfume and make frantic passes at yourself with it the last minute before you're going to greet somebody important to you. I've seen so many girls do just that and I knew they did it in the fond hope they would burst in upon the somebody at the peak of a delicious fragrance. Well, it doesn't work that way. Just after perfume is applied the fumes of the alcohol medium are actually stronger than the scent. It is only after perfume sets a while that the best fragrance comes out. So always put on your perfume half an hour before you go out or even say hello to your beau."

Barbara thinks the advantage of owning a number of different perfumes at one time is in the matter of adapting costumes. Light flower scents for chiffons and summer prints; spicy odors for tweeds and sports clothes; the heavy, sophisticated essences for that smart black woman-of-the-world formal, and so forth. It is all a lot of fun, but it isn't vitally necessary.

"It's amusing to have specials for rare occasions. I have a red dress perfume. It positively demands a red evening dress. And if the dress be a dull, smoldering shade of red velvet with long, full sleeves, caught into a cuff of gold embroidery, and no back, that perfume is right in character. It is a Russian scent and it is so very—er—Russian," she explained.

BARBARA is sentimental about perfumes. But aren't we all? She is superstitious about them also. Not for worlds would she think of showing up for the first day's shooting on a new picture without wearing some "Exultation." Harry Richmond, who gave her a start and helped her learn the ropes in her lettuce days in show business, presented her with her first bottle of that particular scent. Now she thinks it brings her luck.

Just to change the subject, here is a recipe for a strawberry facial for which Barbara makes large claims. Give yourself this home treatment and emerge blooming, according to that young lady. It combines two proven complexion aids. Everybody knows that an egg mask allowed to dry on the face has a refining, tightening tendency and several of the major cosmeticians think so much of strawberries they've made special and expensive strawberry creams. So what do you do but mash a cup of strawberries, add an egg to them and beat up the mixture for a minute or two. Then spread the mess, and what a mess, over your face. Let it stay on until the egg dries enough to pull. Wash it off with lukewarm water and then with cold.

Mad Hatter of Hollywood

By Grace Wilcox

IT IS as easy to snare a gnat with a lion trap as to pin down Francis Lederer for an engagement.

He moves with the speed of mercury when the temperature runs up on a hot day. He is charmingly mad, but there is meaning in both his charm and his madness. Sane and balanced people are driven to distraction by him, but their distraction is nothing to what he suffers around sane and balanced people.

His whole being seems keyed up to the marching music of his thoughts—andante, vivace, capriccioso. Before him, life rolls out like a pattern, bright with possibilities, joyous with potentialities, disturbing because of its brevity.

There are moments when he would like to smash the pattern as it is worked out today and change it to conform more nearly to his ideas for the happiness of all humanity. There are moments when he tries to so change it. Fortunately these moments are brief.

Sometimes he is seized with a "divine discontent," but this mood never lasts long; he is too busy doing, seeing, hearing, thinking, acting, living, loving.

Francis Lederer is the Mad Hatter of Hollywood. He doesn't conform at all. He is just as interested in his cabbages as in his career. He likes to watch his walnuts grow to maturity and his apricots are a source of constant wonder to him. My egg man, who comes from out his way in the San Fernando Valley, says all the neighbors are very fond of the handsome young man, who often stops his horse for a chat.

HE HAS the faculty of keeping everybody excited. One week he is in such demand he can't fulfill the contracts offered him; the next week, he is in Dutch all around. Neither one seems to matter much to him. "It ees just their way," he says, with a shrug. "Sometimes they like me very, very much; again they don't like me at all. I can't help it."

His friends get frightfully annoyed with him. They can't keep up with him at all. The only time he really lights is when tragedy or illness stalks somebody he likes. Then that side of the Lederer nature, which few can understand, comes to the fore.

There is one engagement he never fails to keep. When he is asked to lecture on peace, to which he is devoting the chief effort of his life, he drops everything. If he has to break a date with the most important producer in the business or the loveliest lady in the colony, it is just too bad, but he does it. Off he goes by motor, plane or train to whatever club, university, church or organization asks him to speak on his favorite topic.

Lederer can look as slicked up and prosperous as a young business man on his way to the office; he can muss up his hair and appear as untidy as any Bohemian in the past glories of Montmartre; his military uniforms are the despair of his friends and enemies alike—when he is in them.

In "top hat, white tie and tails," he is practically irresistible and when he gallops off swinging his ten-gallon Stetson, spurs jingling on his boots, cowboy pants and wild plaid shirts shrieking to heaven in Paramount's "My American Wife," he looks more western than Buck Jones or Ken Maynard.

When he breezed in the other morning, he wore a polo shirt of a sort of beige color, brown trousers and brown shoes. He was feeling in an informal mood and I began framing a question as to the reason for his continued bachelorhood, which has been going on quite long enough, according to some of the most attractive women on three continents.

His first words are always a subtle compliment to any woman. Whether he saw you yesterday or last summer, he remembers what you were wearing when last he cast an eye on your ensemble and with disarming frankness he tells you at once whether you are fatter or thinner.

YOU may have had your hands kissed by shoals of other men, but the gesture becomes significant and entirely natural when accompanied by Lederer's bright smile and a highly personal glance from his flashing dark eyes. You may not admit it, but you will feel as a princess should feel and seldom does, for the rest of the day.

As usual, he takes the interview into his own hands, clamps his teeth on the bit and runs off, full speed into the wind, following his own line of thought and giving you no chance to frame a question.

Having just returned from addressing several hundred boys of high school age on the highly important subject of living, he proceeded to express his views along these lines.

"Parents don't teach their children enough about the joy of living," he announced. "In fact, they can't teach what they don't know. Here we are breathing in the air, looking at the sky, the mountains, the trees and the sea, with the most beautiful examples of Nature's best forces spreading before our eyes each day—and half the time we are blind to it all." He offered a cigaret, although he doesn't smoke.

Francis Lederer, sculptor, cabbage-grower, lecturer and actor, furnishes Hollywood with many surprises.

"Now, I take these boys off for a hike—the Boy Scouts of Troop 48, of which I am a sponsor—and we learn something about life through nature. I don't believe in preaching to the young; they must be taught appreciation and understanding indirectly and in some realistic manner. You can't cram beauty or grammar down a boy's throat, but he can be taught to like both, if they are presented to him interestingly."

Francis Lederer's enthusiasms are contagious. One immediately begins to feel the necessity for doing something about whatever he is doing.

"SOMETIMES it seems to me that we are all asleep," he went on. "Good heavens, the best things are completely free, why worry so much about the things that aren't? Perhaps we don't need them anyway." He laughed and launched into a long description about his new house and the things that are going into it.

"As soon as they are arranged, I shall have a housewarming," he declared (while I wondered if he would be there to receive the guests).

"It is going to be the fulfillment of a dream," he smiled. "Every day things come from abroad for it. The house is like an old monastery, except that it is equipped with all modern improvements. Here in California, you call it Monterey style, I believe, although it is more like an ancient mission. I shall have my own vine and fig tree and enough left over for all my friends to enjoy with me."

And here was the time for the question, but I didn't ask it. He didn't give me a chance. He looked at me archly and remarked casually: "I know what you're thinking—'What about the wife in the home?' Am I not right?" His Czechoslovakian accent suits him perfectly. It is impossible to imagine him without it.

I ADMITTED that I was about to ask him about his future lady, and he laughed good humoredly.

"Everyone wonders about that," he said. "Well, I'm afraid they will have to continue to wonder—at least until I cease wondering myself. I don't know when I shall marry. I prefer that it should be after I have accomplished more than I have yet done. I'm not convinced that a strenuous career and a wife are compatible at the same time. If one could find just the right wife—perhaps."

"Also I'm afraid I expect too much of a wife. Although she might not be hard to find; after all, there are wonderful girls living today. I admire their independence, their spirit of freedom, their eagerness to make a place for themselves. But two careers in the family might be a drawback. On the other hand, they might not. It would all depend on the temperaments of both the husband and wife.

"If one falls desperately in love, nothing else matters. I admire many young women, but just when I shall marry I do not know. I should like to find out. One thing I believe firmly: When love is dead, two persons should not go on being married.

"I am enough of a European to like the idea of my wife being in the home, somewhat domestic, thoroughly feminine. However, I believe mental congeniality is just as important. I should like my wife to share my enthusiasms; to encourage me when I want to learn another language; when I want to go into my studio and carve out a head or a figure; when I labor over my parts for a play or a picture; when I become the farmer, intent on affairs of the land; when I give up everything for my peace projects; when I want to play; when I want to read.

"ALSO I feel I have certain duties and responsibilities as a husband. I should want to have time to devote to her interests, whatever they are. An acting career is usually hectic. I am always behind in my reading; books pile up in my library, books in various languages which I am most anxious to read. There are so many things I want to do and so little time in a day. When, I sometimes think, would I have time for a wife?"

When, indeed? His house will be artistic and charming, but if I know my Lederer, he will not often be in it, regardless of how much he would like to be. His is the quicksilver spirit, the mercurial temperament.

Rumors buzz about him like butterflies around a flowering peach tree. There was his protegee, said to be also his heart interest, the lovely actress, Steffi Duna. Just what the rift in the lute nobody knows, but Steffi is now said to be engaged to someone else, while Lederer's fancy settled on Miss Mary Anita Loos, a charming, highly intellectual, society girl, with no film or stage aspirations.

Lately the gorgeous Mexican girl, Margo, famous as a New York dancing and stage star, as well as moving picture actress, has come into the scene.

Who is the girl who will preside over the lovely new home of Francis Lederer?

Lederer denies that he knows, but he doesn't deny that when he loves, romance will take precedence over everything else.

They're tired of being sweet: Luise Rainer ("The Good Earth"), Jeanette MacDonald ("Maytime") and Gertrude Michael ("The Return of Sophie Lang" and "Forgotten Faces"). They seek the fans' hisses.

HOLLYWOOD wiseacres have always spouted superstitions with the unrestrained profundity of politicians making platform promises. Do this and the know-it-alls shake sorry heads and whisper that you're doomed. Do that and they mutter you're eternally damned.

Of all the Hollywood superstitions, none was more persistent or more feared than this one: Once a heavy, always a heavy! Translated, it meant that if any player accepted an unsympathetic role, he was henceforward automatically barred from stardom. Grudgingly it was conceded that a man might be able to overcome such a handicap. But a woman, never! Particularly if she was a young and attractive woman.

One performance as the scheming siren was supposed to prevent the fans from ever again believing in her as the pluperfect heroine, and feminine stars had to be pluperfect. Everybody knew that.

Thus it was for a long time in the Dark Ages of pictures. Then one fine day a blond young lady crusader with a determined lift to her chin and the fire of courage in her big round eyes simply up and defied the whole kit and caboodle.

Bette Davis insisted upon playing Mildred in "Of Human Bondage." She fought producers, agents and well meaning friends and relatives to do it.

AND what happened?
Hollywood woke up to find Bette definitely On Top. She had played to the hilt the nastiest meanie any rising young actress was ever warned away from. The result was that she wasn't rising any longer. She had arrived with a bang.
And the self-same doubters who had screamed that it couldn't be done spoke respectfully of little Bette as a great emotional actress. Bette, who has an active sense of humor, is still laughing.

She did more than boost her own stock. She started a revolution. All the ingenues in town began demanding meanie parts. The big stars called conferences and suggested that they be given roles with more "character." They were prepared to sin less discreetly for their art.

Bette waded into another unsympathetic role in "Dangerous" and got the Academy award for it. Wondering if she had developed any fear of being typed in this sort of thing, I called on her at her vine-covered cottage. It is not mentioned that way for poetic effect. It is a vine-covered cottage, and so unpretentious for the abode of a star that one glimpse restores a flagging faith that simple tastes can still endure in the mighty.

"No, I'm not afraid of being typed either in the minds of producers or the public," said Bette. "I would hate to be limited to one kind of part. But I know
I don't have to be. I was sure of it from the beginning. Producers are eager to give the public what it wants. And the difference between me and the average citizen of Hollywood is that I have more faith in the adult judgment of the movie-going public."

THAT remark makes
Bette the natural champion of all fans who are weary of being treated like children. The gravest, most consistent error the manufacturers of motion pictures have made is the fear that all the millions who pay to see their wares have arrested mental development.

"Perhaps I took a long chance when I played Mildred," Bette mused. "Certainly everyone was at pains to tell me so. I was told over and over again that if I dared to do the part as it was written, audiences would believe that Bette Davis in private life must be that sort of person."

"But I had noticed something about the theater. I couldn't see why the same thing might not be true of pictures.
Almost without exception every dramatic actress who has made an important and lasting impression on the stage is remembered for a role which put her in an unfavorable light. Don't ask me why it should be so. I don't know why, but I do know that Jeanne Eagles in 'Rain' was typical of what seems to be a rule."

THE funny part of it is that high-pitched emotional scenes aren't really the hardest to play. They just take a little imagination and the technique that any actress has to learn.
Comedians deserve more credit than tragedians. They have by far the more difficult task. It is much easier to make people cry than laugh.

"And only the very young believe an actress has to live her roles. I remember when I was cured of that idea. I was going to a dramatic school in New York.
In a play which we did for training, one of the girls' parts called for a stormy crying scene. The night of the performance the girl who played that part worked herself up into such emotional fervor that when she came off the stage into the wings she was shaking with hysteria and on the point of collapse."

"I was impressed. I thought I had just witnessed the manifestation of little less than genius. That was realism, therefore that must be great art. Well, when we went into class the next morning for criticism, the instructor made a few well chosen and scathing remarks about lack of self-control and finished by asking the girl how long she thought she could endure six nights a week and two matinees of such physical and mental strain. I hadn't thought of that."

BETTE'S determination to get her teeth into red-blooded cinematic fare probably goes back to the beginning of her career as an actress.
She was playing an ingenue role on Broadway. Young, with a cloud of fair hair and big blue eyes, she looked the perfect illustration of the nursery rhyme about what little girls are made of. She remembers that on matinee days when she first walked on the stage there would be an audible murmur of "Oh, isn't she sweet!" Now the one thing Bette did not feel was "sweet." She felt like Duse or somebody. She didn't want to be cuddled in the minds of her audiences.

"I wanted to step out of character at those matinees and speak firmly to the people out in front. I longed to say to them: 'I heard you and I tell you I am not sweet! If that's all you can say for me I'm a failure. But you wait. Some day I'll show

She hasn't much use for the word as a descriptive adjective for a woman.
There's not enough character in it, she says. Bette Davis is a singularly honest and direct person. She'd never bother to pretend about her taste in people or things, music or pictures. When she likes something she says so. And when she doesn't like it she has the courage to say that too. You must take her as you find her or not at all. If you're smart you'll take her and like her very much.

The fan mail addressed to Miss Bette Davis that has poured in since "Of Human Bondage" is a fair barometer of the disposition of the world at large. Bette's mail ballooned right after the picture was released. And it has been steadily increasing ever since. To be truthful, some of it has protested in no uncertain terms. Some people never recover from the shock of finding out there isn't any Santa Claus. But most of Bette's mail has praised her courage and complimented her ability.

GERTRUDE MICHAEL

much the same type of girl. She has never been afraid of what people say. And Gertrude comes "heavy" roles on the theory that they are heavy acting demands on Gertrude Michael. Well do I remember the day, before she started the revolution, when you couldn't find another lass in all of Hollywood who would have been enthusiastic about tackling a role like the one Gertie played in "Forgotten Women." A woman could hardly stoop lower than to blackmail her own daughter, so a more unsympathetic role couldn't be written. But it upset Miss Michael, the ex-concert pianist-ex-radio station operator from Talladega, when she cracked her heart a bit when she didn't do "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie."

Carrie is certainly valiant, but she is also off-color.

You wouldn't imagine that the girl who has young America on its ear, Ginger Rogers, would crave to be a screen meanie now and then. But she does. She says she gets a little fed up with this everlasting romance and she remembers with affection the first feature role she had in pictures.

She played a flapper siren bent on getting Claudette Colbert's boy friend in Paramount's "Young Man of Manhattan." Her favorite line from the part was "Cigaret me, Big Boy." For a year and a half after the picture was released, people kidded her about that line. Ginger got a boot out of it. She wishes they'd let her do another part like that, only more so.

In the new Rogers-Astaire dance drama, Betty Furness is cast as Astaire's rich and disagreeable fiancée. After he meets Ginger he tries to get away from Betty. But she pursues him ruthlessly throughout the picture and gives up in the end only because she is persuaded he is balmy. Betty is delighted with this chance.

"Probably I'm the only girl in Hollywood who would want a part like this. But I was glad to get it. I'm tired of being a wide-eyed ingenue," she said.

BETTY FURNESS is very wrong about standing alone with a relish for unpleasant roles. There is Maureen O'Sullivan, for instance. Where could you find a sweeter girl than Maureen? And with that fresh, wholesome look in her face, no casting director could be expected to give the child the part of a wicked woman. But Maureen pines to play a shrew just once because, "If I'm not allowed to pretty soon, no one will think me capable of doing anything but sit and look innocent or swing from trees piloted by Johnny Weissmuller."

On the "Yours for the Asking" set I came upon Ida Lupino playing a drunken little chiseler with every appearance of zest. Remembering her delicate and well-bred screen romancing with Francis Lederer in "One Rainy Afternoon," I waited to ask her how she felt about this part.

"I love it," she said.

"Aren't you afraid of the possible effect on your public and your career as a romantic leading lady?" I asked.

"Not a bit," and she was emphatic. "I don't want to play only romantic leads. They're too spineless. When I first started in pictures in England (I was 16), I was always cast as a vamp with curls plastered on my forehead. They said that was my type and I didn't mind."

Ida says she guesses she never would have become an actress in the first place if she hadn't belonged to an acting family. She dabbles in writing poetry and painting and she has the most refreshing way of announcing that she can do either exactly as well as she can act.

JEANETTE MAC-

DONALD has had a definite change of heart about the sort of thing she likes to do on the screen.

"Look at the characters I've been playing," she said. "They start out by being spoiled, undisciplined brats—think of those temperamental fits I threw in 'Rose Marie.' Then they sort of taper off into nice girls. At first I didn't like it. Now I do, because I've come to realize I have more opportunity for shading and versatility than I would in parts calling for sweetness and light from the first reel to the last."

Since she has become the prototype for invariably charming, self-controlled screen women, Myrna Loy occasionally grows a little wistful for the chance to kick over the dramatic traces.

Meanness has its rewards: Virginia Bruce ("The Great Ziegfeld"), Ida Lupino ("Yours for the Asking") and Bette Davis, remembered for her unsympathetic roles in "Of Human Bondage" and "Dangerous."

"I wouldn't want to return to those Oriental siren parts I used to play, of course," she says. "They were incredible. Still I'm grateful to them. They gave me my start."

Ask the Viennese sensation, Luise Rainer, if she has any objection to playing the kind of woman often described by a word not used in polite society and she will look at you as if she thought you were crazy.

"It makes no difference to me whether a woman is good or bad, plain or beautiful, so long as she is dramatically interesting," she says, quietly disposing of the whole subject. Having done so, like as not she will order a second piece of apple pie for lunch. To Luise apple pie is the one sane and understandable product of a bewildering country.

Luise has been presented to motion picture audiences in two very appealing roles, "Escapade" and "The Great Ziegfeld." Her portrayal of Anna Held in the latter was a sure fire heart-winger.

Now she is playing Olan in "The Good Earth." True, there is nothing vindictive in Olan, stolid Chinese peasant that she is. But neither is there anything particularly sympathetic to the average audience.

A SURPRISING answer to the question of playing disagreeable women on the screen is given by Virginia Bruce—surprising because it comes from one so deliciously beautiful and so obviously cast by nature for romantic leads. Virginia is frank to say: "Audrey Dane in 'The Great Ziegfeld' was the first character of that kind I had ever played. I liked her. She taught me more about acting than all the good girls I had played before."

These girls are willing, even anxious, to portray all kinds of women, weak, wicked and cruel females as well as sugar plums. And there are others who clamor for unsympathetic roles. Times have changed. I'm holding my breath until Shirley Temple cries into her doll clothes because Mr. Zanuck won't let her have a go at "The Taming of the Shrew." Bette, you certainly started something.

Bachelor Father

By Clarke Wales

ROSS ALEXANDER is Hollywood's bachelor father. After a typical ten-year stage career in which home was a series of hotels and furnished apartments, he is playing parent to sundry offspring of chickens, ducks, pigeons, goats, dogs, cats. When I drove out to his rented ten-acre ranch in the San Fernando Valley, I found him superintending obstetrical phenomena in the pigeon cote. In a dozen nests infant squab were emerging from their shells.

Ross Alexander calls his home Maternity Acres. His livestock is always furnishing surprises. Even the hen is amazed at the water-going ducklings.

Mr. Watson and Alexander—chickens, pigeons, cats and Nellie, the goat, couldn't get into the picture.

"Welcome to Maternity Acres," he said. "And come look at the rest of the offspring." We entered the next coop.

"This is lying-in ward," he said. "Not much activity here now, though."

He raised a clucking Rhode Island Red half off her nest and revealed four or five moist fledgling ducks.

"Her eggs went bad," said Father Alexander, "so I took half a setting away from a duck. The hen will be happy until her kids hit for the water."

IN THE YARD outside were ducks with their young, chickens with their young, and two goats. One of the goats climbed onto a wooden box and stuck her nose over the wire fence.

"Hi, Nellie," said Alexander. He rubbed her ears. "I used to name all the fowl and animals," he said, "until I discovered it was spoiling my appetite for them. It was too much for me when Willie would bring in a roast chicken, done to a perfect golden brown, set it on the table and say: 'This is Mary.' So now I just give them numbers."

"For a long time I couldn't bring myself to kill a chicken. But one day I tossed down a couple of Scotch and sodas, grabbed the ax in one hand and a chicken in the other, went out to the chopping block and—wham! That stopped my squeamishness."

A bow-legged brindle English bulldog with a face as ugly as a nightmare ambled out of the barn. On the way in I had seen a red-lettered sign on the front gate—BAD DOG. This was it—Mr. Watson.

MR. WATSON nuzzled my ankles and whined until I rubbed his ears. Mr. Alexander continued:

"This ranching is full of upsets. Ever since I moved into the valley I've had my heart set on having suckling pig for Christmas. And now I've just discovered that what I thought was a boar is not a boar."

"I think Hugh Herbert has a boar, though, so I may have my suckling pig after all. That would be funny—suckling pig by Hugh Herbert."

Ross Alexander, along with many other veterans of the stage, is glorying in California's easy rusticity. He spent 10 years in the theater (starting at 17), then to Hollywood for such roles as Demetrius in "Midsummer Night's Dream," Errol Flynn's right hand man and navigator in "Captain Blood" and leads in numerous lesser productions.

When we left the farmyard and went into the house—a modest six-room bungalow—we were discussing "Midsummer Night's Dream."

I GUESS my appreciation of Shakespeare was spoiled by my first experience on the stage," he said. "I was 17 years old, playing in 'Much Ado About Nothing' with the Jewett Stock Company. I was the villain with a long gray beard."

"Everything might have gone all right if a girl in the company who was supposed to sing a romantic song hadn't frozen up with stage fright at the last minute. Jewett adjusted his monocle and looked at me."

"'Laddie,' he said, 'can you sing the song?' I said I could. 'Very well, then, you will sing it tonight.'"

"Well, I sang the song and played the villain and rushed out to get the papers the next morning. I suppose I expected to be hailed as a combination of Booth and Caruso. But one notice said:

"In Mr. Jewett's company are two groups of players, those who seem to know something about Shakespeare and those who apparently have no idea of what they are doing. In the first group are Mr. Jewett, et al, et al, et al; in the second group is Ross Alexander."

THAT was the second slap my ego got from association with the Jewett company. The first was when I applied for a job.

"Blanche Yurka took me up to Jewett, so there was no difficulty getting a hearing. But the Packard agency in Boston had told me to get $75 a week if I got the job. I had that figure firmly in mind when I went into Jewett's office."

"Jewett, a typical old-school actor, adjusted his monocle and looked me up and down. Then he said: 'Well, laddie, what experience have you had?'"

"I lied like a trooper, and then Jewett said: 'What is your salary?'"

"When I said $75 he looked me up and down again and said: 'And what, laddie, do I get for $75 a week?'"

"Youth and a fair amount of intelligence," I said.

"For that, laddie, I will pay $30."

"I gulped and said: 'Make it $35 or I won't stay.' I went to work for $35 a week."

AALEXANDER tells stories with a healthy gusto. He laughs at the boyish mistakes he made when he first became an actor, at the period when he "went arty" and lived in a Greenwich Village cellar until his father came down from Rochester and made him move uptown; at the season when he was so broke that he lived in the John Golden Theater on Fifty-Eighth St., sleeping on a cot backstage.

He is a breezy, amusing young man, and much of his life has been breezy and amusing. If chapters have contained tragedy, he has torn out the tragic pages and put them away in the attic. In the open record he keeps the laughable incidents from stories about his great-grandfather to a scene in his latest picture—in which Alexander (six feet one and a quarter) is "beaten up" by George E. Stone and Charlie Foy, each of whom is about five feet two.

NOW GRANDFATHER—there's a man," he said. "He originated most of the famous lies. He'd go into the kitchen of his farmhouse on a cold day and say: 'Maw, heat up the fryin' pan; I was just talking to myself out in the barn and my words froze before I could hear 'em; I want to thaw 'em out and find out what I said.'"

Then Ross (Chip-Off-the-Block) Alexander continued with a story about a former servant who, when a guest did not want to answer the telephone, told the caller: "Mister Blank say he ain't here. G'by."

I discovered that in addition to being a farmer and actor, Alexander is a cook. He used to be official chef of a private actors' club in New York.

"It started the night beer was legalized," he said. Four shows were playing in one block (incidentally and amusingly, the shows were "Saturday Night," "Three-Cornered Moon," "One Sunday Afternoon" and "The Party's Over") and in the companies were nearly all the young players who have since come to Hollywood—Hank Fonda, Jim Stewart, Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy and several others.

"That night after the show I organized a party to celebrate the return of beer. We had a lot of fun, and somebody suggested that the parties ought to be continued. So we rented the lower floor of an old building that was being used for a speakeasy, put in a beer tap and had a party once a week from then on. We served beer and steak sandwiches, and I broiled the steaks."

IN CASE you are interested, Mr. Alexander broils steak by covering it with an inch layer of wet salt and holding it close to the flame until the salt hardens and lifts off the steak. Turn and do likewise on the other side.

Also, in case you're interested, it's good. Alexander, son of a leather merchant, was born in New York. When he was kicked out of Erasmus Hall High School at 16, he set about getting on the stage; he had intended going on the stage anyway.

He played in "Enter Madame," "After Tomorrow," "That's Gratitude," "No Questions Asked," "The Party's Over," "Let Us Be Gay" and several other productions, in casts with Philip Merivale, Francine Larrimore, Frank Craven, Donald Meek, Katharine Alexander, George Barbier, Alan Dinehart.

His first motion picture was "Flirtation Walk," followed by "Gentlemen Are Born," "Maybe It's Love," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "Crashing Society," "We're in the Money," "Shipmates Forever," "Captain Blood," "Backfire," "Brides Are Like That," "I Married a Doctor."

The mimeographed biography handed out by the studio says he admits collecting nothing but debts, but he is beginning to show a weakness for model ships. He also has some fighting chickens—these in brown which was topped by a little ball of mink.

Among the new campus clothes you'll find, among other things, natural and brown camel hair skirts to wear with sweaters, blouses or perky peplumed velveteen jackets under the ever popular camel hair coats. The coats are reefer type and knee length instead of three-quarter or full. Another type of coat to appeal to the collegian is one such as Marsha Hunt, pretty Paramount starlet, has selected for her fall wardrobe. It is a bold plaid topcoat in shades of green, brown and white and ideal for football games. It has big patch pockets, so useful, and fastens with big green buttons and a green belt. With it Marsha wears one of the new fall felts, a rolled brim green one with a leather bow trim.

college girl herself than a nationally famous designer of afternoon and evening clothes for the collegienne, has introduced a cocktail suit in street length for fall wear. These dresses are grand for rush affairs, sorority teas and the dinner date to follow. One, called "Miss Sorority," combines a black satin crepe, dull side out, with a vestee and collar of cire satin. The cunning short boxy jacket is also of the cire. Another shows black dull crepe for the skirt and gold colored satin for the draped bodice with a cap sleeve effect. The short full-back jacket has leg of mutton type sleeves.

Her evening clothes are snappy enough to intrigue the eye of any prom trotter. One of them called "Cock of the Walk" offers a new combination of taffeta, lace and feathers (remember what I told you a week or so ago about ostrich). Anita Louise, whose blond beauty is soon to be seen in Warner Bros. production, "Anthony Adverse," tells me that she has just taken this dress unto her heart and wardrobe. I can't blame her. It is a love of a dress. Cinnamon brown taffeta with a very full skirt and the fitted bodice has a square cut neckline outlined with a narrow pleated ruffle of cream colored lace. Sleeves, this season, are all puffed up with fashion importance and the sleeves of this dress are no exception. Lined with organdy and stitched, they're very perky. At the waistline are two ostrich tips, one green and one brown.

PATRICIA tells me her evening clothes, both cocktail suits and formals, are about equally divided between taffeta, velvet and satin back crepes, sometimes using the satin side out and sometimes the reverse. Her new four-way dress is a honey and one to delight the eye of any young sophisticate, whether college bound or not. This dress, with its empire waistline, has two infinitesimal points of white crepe at the neckline which pass for a collar. The back opening is faced with white crepe and so arranged that it can be buttoned demurely at the neckline which reveals just a flash of back or it can be left open to flagrantly expose that nicely sun tanned back.

Flowers are an all-important item to the college girl and woe betide the suitor who forgets to send his date a corsage for formal. If any young men chance to read this let me suggest, instead of the usual orchids or gardenias, a lovely tuberose begonia with a spray of lilies to be carried rather than worn (you'll see one carried by Anita Louise in the accompanying picture).

Anita Louise takes up the new practice of carrying flowers at any formal festivity. Young men, please note.

PATRICIA ELLIS, youthful Warner Bros. player, and an All-American girl as far as college boys are concerned, wears clothes which are copied by collegians all over the country. She has in her fall wardrobe a jacket ensemble which is ideal for classroom wear for early fall. It is a dress of sheer brown wool featuring the new, standup collar. The waist fastens with enameled hooks and eyes which match the bright tangerine of her boxy, hip-length jacket of light weight wool. Her Highlander cap and accessories are dark brown.

Patricia Perkins, who looks more like a

ALL YOU college girls who have concentrated this summer on a beautiful tan and a collection of new beaus (they come in handy for prom-trotting) are now concentrating on that back-to-college wardrobe.

While you've been idling in the sun designers the country over have been sitting up nights getting horrid brow wrinkles thinking up new things for you to wear this fall. After talking to several Hollywood designers whose specialties are college clothes I'm convinced you're going to see some brand, spanking, not to say startling, new things this fall.

For one thing, I'm ready to bet a big juicy dill pickle that the culotte, which started on its way to fashion fame this spring, is gradually going to replace the skirt in that good old campus uniform, the sweater and skirt. I'll go even further and say that you're going to see them ere long in both street and evening wear.

Irene Bury, who designs sportswear which is sold in some of the smartest shops in the country, is one of the Hollywood designers who is turning out culottes for fall wear. She is making some in flannel and others in pin stripe corduroy. Beautifully tailored, these culottes are made with deep inverted pleats so that the bifurcated construction is hardly discernible.

IF YOU'RE looking for something new in sweaters and are clever with your knitting needles you might try copying one of the new sweaters Dolores Del Rio brought home with her from Europe. This sweater, which originated in the Tyrol in Switzerland, is made of natural colored heavy string and knitted in alternate two-inch squares of plain knitting stitch and the stocking stitch. It has short sleeves, a crew neck and fastens down the front with four little green wooden Tyrolean hats. Appliqued on squares here and there are little flannel diamonds of bright green flannel. Another sweater has red flannel hearts and little red heart buttons. These combine beautifully with any color skirt.

With these Dolores wears LeLong's new tiny skull caps. These, I have no doubt, will take the place of the time-honored beret with young America. They are very youthful and are particularly good with the new off-the-face hair cuts. Dolores has three of these caps, black, blue and white. They are made of felt and are mitred to fit the head and edged in self-colored silk braid. At a recent fashion show I saw Anita Colby, one of America's most famous models and now under contract to RKO, wearing one of

Their Love Songs Came True

"Tea for Two" came true for Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit, stage favorites and now radio stars over CBS Sunday nights

By Mildred Black

"THEY made their love songs come true." It's a nice idea, I suppose, but we think things like that just don't happen in this modern world. When I was a little girl all good love stories wound up just one way: "And they were married and lived happily ever after." Nowadays that kind of ending, in real or story-book life, is an occasion for raised eyebrows and polite smirks.

Therefore I don't think it's strange that I was rather incredulous when I hid myself recently to Longmeadow, Massachusetts, in the foothills of the Berkshires, to examine the private life of Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson on their home grounds.

I was especially skeptical because mutual acquaintances without exception characterized their marriage as "ideal." In fact, many of the people with whom I talked went so far as to say that they considered Frank and Julia "the happiest married couple in show business."

Of course, I said to myself, any people who have that sort of a legend built up about themselves must be covering up something. Either that or they should be ranked with other strange phenomena.

I came upon them as they were going over a number for their program and the way they looked at each other as they sang only confirmed my suspicions: I was a reporter and they were simply putting on an act.

THE Crumits showed me over "Dunrovin," a hopeful title they give their beautiful country estate. The eagerness and enthusiasm with which they pointed out this or that made me a little uneasy. Houses can't pose even when people do, and "Dunrovin" certainly looked and felt like a real home. It looked "lived in" in the way so few houses do anymore.

And that air of friendliness and placidity in the faces of Frank and Julia couldn't be a pose, either, I was beginning to believe—no more a pose than the thinly veiled contempt for me which I read in the eyes of Julia's pet Boston bull. It began to look as if this visit were going to be a washout from my point of view, but I stuck to it.

Frank left us for a golf date after a while and I confessed to Julia—she's the kind of person you tell everything to after you've known her 10 minutes—that I didn't believe that everything about her married life had been all sweetness and light.

Much to my surprise, she said I was right. And, before I had a chance to recover my equilibrium, she was telling me the whole story. She had been married twice before in attempts to find what she is blissfully enjoying now; she had the courage to admit failure and started over again. Frank, too, it seems, had experienced an unsatisfactory marriage.

AS a youthful rising star on Broadway's musical comedy stage, Julia Sanderson fell in love. Wedding bells soon were ringing. She was and is a romantic. To such a person a crash comes doubly hard. Just exactly how much time passed before she realized that a break was inevitable, I do not know.

But Julia was not through with the institution of marriage, although she might have thought she was. She later married an officer of the United States Navy. This, too, was doomed to fail. So brief and, perhaps, seemingly casual review of an important phase of Julia Sanderson's life may leave the impression of flightiness. I hasten to reassure you that the contrary is the case.

The point of this story is that when Frank Crumit and Julia Sanderson met for the first time, they had learned a few things by experience. Like all things of great and lasting value, these experiences came high. It isn't every woman—nor every man, either—who can close the door on a broken marriage and face life in the same old way.

You may not realize it if it's never happened to you; but love destroyed can carry scars that never entirely heal. If you've been deeply and seriously in love—and then lost—you're not the same person, and the world itself isn't the same place. There are too many broken pieces lying around—precious pieces.

Somehow you have to gather them up and put them together again; but they don't seem to fit the way they did before. Life itself hurts you—associations upset you—even the sunshine isn't the same.

It takes character to turn your back firmly and build another life—a character that Julia Sanderson has—a character that made it possible for her to fall in love once again and make a success of a marriage.

WHEN Frank and Julia were called to the first rehearsal of "Tangerine," they both knew what they wanted. Little did they imagine that they were to find it in the artificial, make-believe world they were to help create behind the footlights. Even less, if at all, could leading lady and leading man, introduced for the first time, have considered the possibility of finding in each other what they knew must exist somewhere in the world. That neither one gave it even the slightest thought I can promise you on the assurance of each.

Although both these people had been thoroughly shaken, they clung to a few idealistic conceptions. They fell in love—a love that was anything but blind. They knew what they were doing—they had their eyes wide open.

It may have been one of those strange coincidences. As I wrote at the outset, this business of making your love songs come true is an awfully nice idea. The big moment in "Tangerine" occurred in the balcony scene, almost in the best Romeo and Juliet manner.

Romeo Crumit didn't bother to climb up to the second story. Instead he strummed a banjo and let the music waft his words upstairs where Juliet Sanderson listened eagerly.

The tune was "Sweet Lady." It makes the story better that the song was Frank's own composition. Love at first sight? Well, maybe. There is no positive evidence that it was. Night after night they repeated it. Subconsciously the make-believe began to drop its veil of unreality and eventually the fairy-tale courtship in a fairy tale setting of music and lights, gay costumes and dancing girls transformed itself into a wooing as tender and as real as the more commonplace one of two people alone together, talking in the usual way of love and of each other.

"SWEET LADY," sang Frank, looking up into Julia's clear blue eyes—

"Make believe I won your hand, sweet lady,

Make believe a wedding grand."

"If you'll make it true, I'll not be dreaming," Julia's soprano would reply.

"Tangerine" established Crumit and Sanderson as a leading musical comedy combination. Through show after show they continued their make-believe, yet not make-believe, love-making. They played in "No, No Nanette." There they sang significantly, "I Want to Be Happy," and the still popular "Tea for Two."

Never were musical comedy hero and heroine better suited to their roles. They were what the show business wiseacres call "naturals," all right. Another Crumit and Sanderson triumph was "Oh, Kay" with music by Gershwin. They sang "Someone to Watch Over Me" and "My One and Only." In 1927 they were married, and to date they have been realizing the fairy tale ending. You know—that part about living happily ever after.

ON MY way back to New York I had some time to think it over.

It wasn't a fairy story after all. Instead, I had been hearing of the marriage of two very sensible, knowing people. Air castles usually collapse. This one hadn't. Nine years it had stood where it was built, growing more and more stable all the time.

The foundations are solid. No such ephemeral factors as "love at first sight," or "boy meets girl" went into the structure. This air castle, if such it may be called, was built of far sturdier material. Frank and Julia's is no sentimental happiness, woven out of idle dreams.

Fredric March, as the Earl of Bothwell, is outstanding in R.-K.-O.-Radio's "Mary of Scotland."

"Mary of Scotland."

Katharine Hepburn and Fredric March in the romantic and occasionally stirring spectacle of the historic conflict between Mary Stuart and Elizabeth Tudor. Recommended. RKO-Radio.

Since the earliest of imposing screen spectacles, "Birth of a Nation," great historic incidents bolstered with romantic trappings, or vice versa, have been at the top of the cinematic heap. True, there have been periods when Hollywood shunned "costume pictures," but Hollywood often loses track of what the motion picture public likes.

So, at the outset, "Mary of Scotland" was first run screen material. The historic events involving Mary Stuart and Queen Elizabeth were stirring stuff and Mary's life has become a tradition of high romance. Added to the material is the treatment of Dudley Nichols, who wrote the screen play, and John Ford, the director (both of the prize-winning "The Informer"). Added to the treatment is the box office appeal of Katharine Hepburn and Fredric March. And added to the stars is the support of a large cast of competent actors.

The result of all this is inevitably something more than an ordinary motion picture. How much more may be questioned, but probably not seriously. John Ford said, after the preview, that it was the best picture he had directed. I'll not go that far, for to me "The Informer" was a more sincere piece of work. But "Mary of Scotland" is a big picture. It is a personal triumph for Fredric March. March has had practically an option on leads in major costume pictures since "The Affairs of Cellini." In "Mary of Scotland," as the hard-fighting, swashbuckling and irreverent Bothwell, he is at his best. He is the sparkplug of the picture. There is a definite lift every time he walks into a scene. There is a sag after Bothwell's death, near the end of the picture.

Hepburn's outstanding scene comes before Bothwell appears, when, on taking the throne, Mary confounds the scheming Scottish lords who are bickering for power like a pack of alley dogs snarling over a can of bones.

Florence Eldridge (Mrs. March) gives a convincing performance as Elizabeth and Douglas Walton is impressively despicable as Darnley, weak, jealous and drunken lord whom Mary marries under political pressure.

Others who give outstanding performances are John Carradine as Rizzio, secretary to Mary; Ian Keith as Moray, half-brother of Mary and her worst enemy; Moroni Olsen as John Knox; Frieda Inescort as the first of Mary's four giggling handmaidens; Alan Mowbray as Throckmorton, Elizabeth's scheming ambassador to Scotland.

The story covers the period from Mary's return to Scotland after the death of her first husband, king of France, to her death on the scaffold.

At the beginning Mary is faced with two dangers—the intrigue of the Scottish lords who seek to control her, and the plotting of Elizabeth, who fears Mary's claim to the English throne. Bothwell, her only important friend, becomes the backbone of her power. He subdues the other lords and keeps Mary out of Elizabeth's reach. When he leaves her, after her political marriage to her cousin Darnley, her rule wanes. When he returns, her power returns.

The downfall comes when Bothwell, disgusted with Mary's weakness and determined to marry her, abducts her and takes her to his castle. They lose support through suspicion that they have murdered Darnley. Faced with uprising, Bothwell agrees to leave Scotland on the promise of the lords that they will support Mary's regime.

But when he leaves, the lords break their promise. Through political intrigue, Bothwell is imprisoned in Denmark. Mary flees to England, thinking Elizabeth will protect her. But Elizabeth imprisons her, convicts her of treason, executes her.

The picture closes with the trial scene, the meeting of Mary and Simone Simon, piquant French actress who makes her American debut in "Girls' Dormitory."

"Girls' Dormitory."

Simone Simon makes her American debut with Herbert Marshall and Ruth Chatterton in a picture somewhat akin to "Maedchen in Uniform." Recommended. Twentieth Century-Fox.

The arrival of a new screen personality is always occasion for hope, trepidation and, sometimes, pleasure. In the case of Simone Simon, vivacious young French actress making her American debut in "Girls' Dormitory," there is pleasure. Here is a personality which should register. She has life, she has screen charm and she is pleasant to look upon.

"Girls' Dormitory" is the story of the schoolgirl who falls in love with her professor. In treatment the picture has something in common with the German "Maedchen in Uniform," although it is in much lighter vein. There are the girls marching in line; there is the kind teacher; there is the uncompromising and cruel element of the faculty; but there is more entertainment in "Girls' Dormitory" and no motivating factor of social protest.

Herbert Marshall, with his usual charm, plays the role of the headmaster with whom the girl, Simone, falls in love. Ruth Chatterton plays well the part of the kindly teacher who loves the headmaster but sacrifices herself for him and for the girl. J. Edward Bromberg, as leader of the unpleasant faction of the faculty, does as well as the limitations of his role will allow.

This role of Bromberg's and that of Constance Collier as his assistant persecutor are the chief fault of the picture. And they illustrate the chief fault of innumerable pictures. They are caricatures, not characters. They are symbols, not human beings. The result is a false and unconvincing note, a note which Hollywood could well stop striking.

But without, "Girls' Dormitory" is Elizabeth and the execution. These are Hepburn's biggest scenes. But the chief entertainment value of the picture centers on March. He swaggers through the picture surrounded by the skirl of bagpipes and the clash of arms. He is the only element of humor in the piece. He is more the hero than Hepburn is heroine.

good entertainment. And Simone Simon is well worth contemplating.

harm to the Malmejac baby. The young man said he had explained his purchases of bananas by saying that he had been presented with a monkey.

Soon after the news of the arrests became public, the police of Rouen informed the Marseille authorities that the prisoners were concealing their true identities. Rolland, they stated, was really Andre Clement, a municipal employee of Rouen, who had disappeared late in November, 1933, after cashing two forged checks for $20,000 at a local bank. And in Marseille a lawyer, Nassim Samama, told the police that Rolland had held him up in a park three weeks before.

The attorney said that he was walking home through the park when a man pointed a gun at him, took his watch, and then made him promise "on his word of honor" that he would not tell any one about the incident.

The old woman was identified as Eugenie-Marie Cardin, born September 4, 1867, at Roche-sur-Yon. A hardened criminal, she admitted visiting the Malmejac apartment house for the purpose of checking up on the doctor's ability to pay a sizeable ransom.

As the crime of kidnaping was punishable in France by a term of only 10 years, newspapers and officials agitated for a statute similar to the Lindbergh law in this country. Maurice Garcon, noted Paris lawyer and father of nine children, stated in the Paris L'Intransigeant that, "We must not lose a minute. If we let American gangster methods start here, we are lost."

However, the police pointed out that kidnaping would not be the only charge against Clement. The fact that he had threatened the baby's life with a gun was also punishable by 10 years.

The trial began at Aix-en-Provence on June 24, 1936. It ended two days later in verdicts convicting the defendants of kidnaping and of forgery. Both received sentences of 20 years, which in the case of Clement meant a life of exile on dreaded Devil's Island.

"Piccadilly Jim."

Robert Montgomery and Eric Blore, Frank Morgan and Eric Blore, Billie Burke and Eric Blore, Robert Benchley and Eric Blore, Madge Evans and several others and Eric Blore in a P. G. Wodehouse comedy. Recommended. M.-G.-M.

In "Piccadilly Jim," Robert Montgomery returns to the pleasant sort of comedy which has given him most of his screen fame and to which he is so admirably suited. He has, I am told, been a bit pushed around of late, forced into roles which he didn't like and denied roles he wanted.

Now, given something proper, he makes the most of it. He keeps his head up in the face of the toughest competition in the business—half a dozen experienced character comedians and a child. He can't quite keep Eric Blore, his typical Wodehouse valet, from stealing large chunks of the picture. Nobody could. But he keeps enough for himself.

The story is of an amiable young American newspaper artist living in England. Thrown out of his job because it interferes with his pleasures, he creates a comic strip based on an American family—Nesta and Herbert Pett (Cora Witherspoon and Grant Mitchell), little Ogden Pett and Eugenia (Billie Burke), Mrs. Pett's sister.

The strip is a great success, but it somewhat cramps the romance of Eugenia and the artist's father (Morgan) an improvident Shakespearean actor who has been out of work for 20 years. It boomerangs again when the artist discovers that a girl with whom he has fallen in love at first sight (Madge Evans) is Mrs. Pett's niece.

The picture is the best opportunity Eric Blore has had in his gentleman's gentleman role. Every scene in which he appears, and there are many of them, is his. He makes such simple statements as "He died in a balloon on the Marne" seems uproariously funny. I watched him make the scene in which this line appears, and time after time it struck Montgomery so funny that he broke into laughter and the scene had to be shot over again.

Morgan gives his usual excellent comedy performance. Cora Witherspoon, stage actress relatively unknown to screen audiences, is impressively humorous as Nesta, the wife who wears the trousers in the Pett household. Tommy Bupp is a typical slang-slinging English caricature of an American child. Robert Benchley is again an amusingly befuddled drunk.

The picture was directed by Robert Z. Leonard, director of "The Great Ziegfeld."

The Radio Reporter By William L. Stuart

Paul Whiteman Gets His Words Tangled

A funny thing about Paul Whiteman is the way he gets his words all tangled up in rehearsal. His show is coming to you over NBC from Texas these days—will, in fact, for a month or so yet—and I don't know what the Southwestern climate does to his vocal chords, but while he's in New York, he has a terrible time.

The last time I watched him was just before he left for the Lone Star State's Centennial. Judy Canova, with her sister Annie and her brother Zeke, were making their first appearance as regular members of the Musical Varieties cast, and Paul was rehearsing the lines with which he introduced them to the audience. He called Judy "Juizy" every time he came to her name.

The thing that amazes him, though—and everybody else—is the fact that, no matter how often he fumbles before the show, he is always pretty glib when it's time to go on the air. He doesn't worry about it anymore. Much.

Judy and her brother and sister sound as though they are pretty new to radio, but they aren't. They broke in about four years ago when Zeke and Annie left the backwoods of Georgia to do a turn over a small radio station. Those two were the original Canova team.

When Judy, who was in high school at the time, found they were doing pretty well with their hillbilly songs, she wrote them a letter in which she said that she was sick and tired of her lessons and would never graduate. When her brother saw her spelling, he decided there was some truth in her words and let her come on.

The three—another brother was with them at the time, which made them four—left radio in 1934 and the people who make up the programs kind of forgot them. However, after Judy made her big hit in the Follies last spring, she had no trouble in landing with Whiteman again.

Return

Just a month ago, Jean Dickenson—discovered by Lily Pons and featured for a time on Hollywood Hotel—returned to the air over NBC. That makes two concert sopranos NBC has gotten from CBS within the past two months.

The first was Vivian Della Chiesa, whom you hear on NBC on Tuesday evenings. You can hear Jean's pure coloratura Wednesday at 1:30 EST; or, if you're busy in the afternoons, on Mondays at 8 in the evening.

Enter Helen Hayes and Ad Agencies: Some Explanation

Helen Hayes will return to NBC on Sept. 28 and though I can't explain just why, that gives me a chance to tell you of an important phase of radio not a great many people know about. When you hear what it is—and why—it's going to make things a lot clearer for you.

We'll work up to it in this fashion:

As far as you know, there will be only two factors entering into Helen Hayes' program: One, the network that will pipe it to your local station; the other, the sponsor who will pay for it. Well, the third factor comes in between those two. It is the advertising agency; and, right now, the advertising agency in many ways controls commercial radio.

"This hasn't always been true. Four or five years ago, which was a couple of years after commercial radio had shed its baby teeth, sponsors and radio companies worked almost hand in glove on the production of a program. Those were the days when you heard so much about sponsor-trouble.

The ad agencies, which already handled all details of the newspaper and magazine campaigns of the companies that had gone into radio, woke up. They hired men with a knowledge of entertainment and put them into program production; they hired other men to do other things—until finally they had developed staffs of experts who knew more about putting together good radio shows (and keeping them together) than the networks themselves.

Some of the bigger agencies—the ones who put lots of programs on the air—put their own individual stamp on each one. J. Walter Thompson, for instance, goes in for the guest star shows like Rudy Vallee, Bing Crosby, Smith Ballew, Frank Fay and the Lux Theater. Benton and Bowles prefer the homey, uplifting type like Show Boat, Come On, Let's Sing, and Goose Creek Parson, which just started over CBS.

Young and Rubicam, another big agency, is credited with being aces on humor, among other things. They have (besides Helen Hayes) Jack Benny, Phil Baker, Stoopnagle and Budd, Fred Astaire, Tim and Irene and Fred Allen. Fred Allen's Town Hall Tonight was formerly a Benton and Bowles show. It still has a pretty folksy air about it.

Sponsor trouble, as I said, is on the wane. The agencies, being diplomatic, act as buffers between the stars and the companies that pay their salaries. They save the stars lots of detailed work, and in return the stars are willing to take out a line here and there if it doesn't set right.

Sound Effects

The most sound-affected show on Columbia is Renfrew of the Mounted, an early evening program the kids like a lot.

It's about the adventures of a mounted policeman, so the script calls for a lot of outdoor, three-dimensional sound. Just a fancy way of saying three sounds are used to make up one effect, as we see when we watch the actors do a scene where a troop of Mounties is fording a stream. There is the sound of water running, the sound of horses splashing through it, and their frightened neighing. The actors themselves supply the shouts of the men.

To supply all the sound effects Renfrew uses, the sound department keeps five men working eight hours a day all week just building special equipment.

Jack Smart

Concerning Mugging and the Microphone

The new hour-long radio program on Sunday nights at 8 over MBS is called the Wonder Show by the program boys; and the star is rotund Jack Smart, who has been supporting Fred Allen for lo! these many moons.

The Wonder Show is an attempt to picture the old-time tent and repertoire show that used to move from town to town. The program opens with a spell by the manager, who then introduces Jack Smart as the owner.

After some community singing and some orchestra music, the program goes into an old-time meller-drama—played, Jack says, with all the hokum in the world.

Jack will take off the deep-dyed villains who mess things up for the heroes and heroines. He says he will do lots of mugging as he recites the parts into the microphone.

Mugging, in case you don't know, is a generously overdone facial reaction to an emotion. John Barrymore is a great mugger—but very good. He does it with finesse; the highly arching eyebrows when he is surprised is one instance. Herbert Marshal, on the other hand, rarely mugs. He's pretty wooden-faced.

Jack says mugging is pretty important to radio acting, even if the audience can't see the actor doing it. The microphone picks up a lot more than you would think—and a listener can generally picture the face of an actor if he's living his part. He also says that a gasp or a grunt—something to kill dead air between speeches—helps to get emotions into your loudspeaker.

Whether or not Jack will return to Fred Allen's program this fall is problematical. He won't if he goes to Hollywood or into a Broadway show. And he may do either.

Relatives

The newest addition to Irene Noblette's Wacky family is Uncle Tramwell McCracken Wacky, a sly, foxy character played by Dwight Weist. In wandering around the studios, I find that Mr. Weist takes off another character, too—that of Gov. Alf Landon in the March of Time broadcasts.

Answer

Aside to Mrs. Holman, of Oakland, Calif.: Hm-m-m: "Terpse-Talk." Sounds to me as though it should suit Doris Wester's way of selling a song. I've given your note to her and she will probably write to thank you.

Shep Fields Sells a Rippling Rhythm to You Radio Fans

The newest dance orchestra to interest the public is that of Shep Fields. Last winter his identity was hidden in brief mention as conductor of the Veloz and Yolanda crew. In just a week or so now—if not already—you will be hearing him over both CBS and MBS.

Shep says it's all the fault of his Rippling Rhythm. It did the trick. He's been working on it ever since he was first engaged by Veloz and Yolanda to lead their orchestra; and—although everyone seems to like it at the moment—hopes to better it even more as time goes by.

Fields got the idea one day while sitting in a small dell way out in the country. He likes to get out and commune with nature every once in a while, so he was sitting on this grassy bank, throwing pebbles into a little stream, and contemplating this and that, when it suddenly struck him that the plup of the pebbles in the water had a definite musical effect. Nothing much, but something to work on.

You get that plup now in his theme song, which he and Sal Gioe, his pianist, fashioned out of the sounds he heard around the little stream. The violin mimics the birds, the temple blocks produce the sound of the pebbles and the piano and flutes carry out the idea of the water. The accordion and viola are added to smooth things out.

Shep thinks he owes a lot to his brother. His brother doesn't play in the band. He works in New York. When Shep was perfecting his new style out in Chicago and the song pluggers were saying how marvelous it all was, Shep's brother used to listen to his MBS programs and then send wires.

His wires would say: "Didn't quite get the right effect tonight," or, "Come on, you can do better." Those wires kept him working hard, Shep feels.

Luck

When Jack Benny returns to his Sunday evening program this fall, Tim Ryan and Irene Noblette, who have been filling in for him, won't go off the air. They'll move, along with Don Wilson, to a program earlier in the day and go right on making merry for NBC listeners.

Tim Ryan says it's the luck of the Irish; but Irene goes a little further and says it's the luck of the Ryans. He's had a lot of luck, too, she tells us. Escaped death by narrow margins on lots of different occasions, for instance.

When Tim was a tiny baby, he became very ill. Later, he became ill again. This time, they carried him around on a pillow, he was so weak—and twice during his illness he was actually pronounced dead.

He wasn't either time. He recovered and, two years later, swallowed a small can of kerosene. They got him to the hospital in time, filled him up with an antidote, shook him well, and turned him out again not much the worse for wear.

That must have taught him a lesson, Irene says. For eight years he managed to travel along his appointed way without losing any arms, legs or ears. However, at the end of the time, he fell into a concrete mixer.

Well, there were two more. At 19 he was in an automobile accident in which, he says, the car rolled along in the ditch like a loose football. Shortly after he had married Irene, he took her swimming. Even when they had gone out over his head, he was ashamed to admit he couldn't paddle a stroke. As he went down for the second time, Irene thought he was clowning; but when he came struggling to the surface again and she saw the agonized look on his face, she got down to brass tacks and hauled him into shore.

Questions and Comments from the Mail Bag

Photographers Get Applause

IN the general interest in the film stars' thoughts and deeds, I think we often overlook the importance to the movie industry of its photographers. It is an axiom that their artistic talents are often the determining factor in the success or failure of a picture. And certainly they are able to do wonders with some of the faces they have to make attractive!

I am thinking of some thrilling moments in movies which were due solely to the photographers' astuteness. First to come to mind is the start of the land race in "The Covered Wagon," when the prospective settlers dash for new land and new hope.

Then in the Hollywood version of "Crime and Punishment," when Peter Lorre came back to ring the doorbell at the home of the woman he had killed. The camera followed his steps up the stairway—then his hand on the bell.

Too, there were the scenes in "39 Steps" when the victim fled across the moorlands. He was a dot in the midst of all outdoors, but the camera was so trained on him that he was not lost—merely engulfed—in the wilderness about him.

I won't attempt to list instances when good, clear, ordinary photography was so essential, with no furbelows, in the production of a coherent story. There are too many examples of that.

JERRY MONROE,

Do other readers wish to pay tribute to other phases of the film industry which they feel do not receive the proper attention?

Summer Doldrums and New Headaches

I GUESS it's the summer doldrums. Or worse. I have just been through the siege of the Bad Film season, and am thoroughly weakened.

"Hot Money," "Two Against the World," "High Tension" and "Crash Donovan"—that's a long series of headaches.

That person who wrote in to your department and said that he enjoyed these quickies should get a sniff of these.

MORRIS GOLDSTEIN,

But think of all the actors that were fed.

What is Greta Garbo's next picture? Also Rosalind Russell's? What has happened to Dolores del Rio?

WEEKLY FAN.

Based on the Alexandre Dumas' novel, "The Lady of the Camellias," Miss Russell's next picture will be "Craig's Wife" with John Boles. Nothing has happened to Miss Del Rio, for she is making pictures right along and recently returned from England where she made a picture with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Her next picture will be "Continental" with Melvyn Douglas, to be made by Columbia.

I would like to know who took part in "The Big Broadcast" and how long ago that picture was released?

DEBATER.

The cast included Stuart Erwin, Bing Crosby, Leila Hyams, Sharon Lynne, George Barbier, Ralph Robertson, Alex Melish, Anna Chandler, Spec O'Donnell, Tom Carrigan, Dewey Robinson, Burns and Allen, Kate Smith, Mills Brothers, Boswell Sisters, Arthur Tracy, Donald Novis, Vincent Lopez and orchestra; Cab Calloway and orchestra. This picture was released in October, 1932.

First Prize-Winning Letters

ON this page Screen & Radio Weekly publishes the first prize-winning letters submitted by readers. To encourage exchange of opinion, two prizes are offered each week.

The best letter received will be awarded $10. The second best letter will draw $5. Letters should not contain more than 200 words and must be signed by the writer. Address them to the Mail Bag Editor. Please do not forget to give your address.

This week's $10 check is awarded to Michael M. Stewart and the second prize goes to Jerry Monroe.

Hearty Plea Made for Phillips Holmes

I HAVE a pet grievance, and I have kept it quiet for a long time. Can you tell me why, such an actor as Phillips Holmes does not get a chance (a real chance, I mean) in pictures?

I have been his ardent admirer ever since I saw him in "An American Tragedy." This was not a great picture (the book was excellent), but it was the fault of the producers, not of the actors. The whole film was filmed with the wrong idea behind it. Therefore, the emphasis being in the wrong place, the critics did not rate it as a great picture. I am sure that had it been filmed as it should have been, the principal actors would have become famous and the picture would have stood the test of the critics.

With such a meager popularity as Phillips Holmes achieved, it is no wonder that he has not been allowed to show his talents in anything else but light, airy romances where he has been portrayed as a weak, back-boneless, spoiled, insignificant individual.

It is true that he receives parts occasionally, but these are parts of no real undertaking. An actor who has half of Phillips Holmes' looks and poise could do as well. For example, any second or third-rate actor could have played the part he played as a government agent and as a rising young painter, respectively, in the "House of a Thousand Candles" and in "Chatterbox."

Why isn't he given a real chance to show what he can do? I am sure that if Phillips Holmes were given some great producer, such as Thalberg or De Mille, and some good part, such as Gene Raymond, Robert Taylor or Robert Young get, that he would come through with banners flying and feminine hearts fluttering. I see no reason why he should not be as popular as Robert Taylor is at present.

Come all you fans who are interested in Phillips Holmes; let's get some enthusiasm aroused for him and see if we can't get him on the screen in more and in better parts. He already has looks, build, personality and I think he would show talent if he were given a fair chance to do so.

I have waited for a long time to see some favorable criticism for Phillips Holmes, but, instead, I have seen and heard none at all, good or otherwise. So, at last, I have taken the situation into my own hands!

HOLMES ADMIRER,

Paging all Holmes fans.

Could you tell me who were the two girls who played Topsy and Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin"?

A. E. B.

Apparently you mean the Duncan Sisters—Rosetta and Vivian—who for several seasons were on the stage in "Topsy and Eva" and later made a picture of the same title.

Will you kindly give me the measurements of Joan Crawford? When will James Melton be in another picture and who will be his leading lady?

GINGER SMITH.

Five feet 4 inches, 130 pounds. Melton's next picture will be "Let's Pretend" with Patricia Ellis.

Drought Movie Called Thrilling

THE other day I walked into a motion picture theater just for something to do. After the feature, the newsreel, the comedy, the trailer and all the other trimmings, they showed a film called "The Plow that Broke the Plains."

I expected it to be just another dull picture, probably furnished free to the theater. But instead I found it to be thrilling and alive with a reality we come across all too seldom on the screen.

Without rancor but with impartiality, the documentary film tackled the question of drought and the huge waste lands created by lack of rain in the Middle West. First you see the rolling prairies, then the influx of cattlemen, then the wheat farmers and their temporary prosperity, only to be followed by the tragedy of waste—the tragedy of a land converted to the wrong use and destined to become the great American desert if steps are not taken to turn it back into its original state.

This, according to the narrator, involves returning it to pasture lands so that lack of rain and too much sun cannot bring about more dust storms.

First of all comes the photography, of course. At the first the impression of rolling grass lands is caught by some astute shots. But the thrilling moments come when the cattle men arrive, then the farmers. The plow breaks the plains. Wheat pours in an endless stream from the huge threshing machines, as the war drums roll.

But the flow of wheat begins to slacken; an anxious farmer scans the horizon for rain clouds. There is a dust storm, followed by many more. Families move, fleeing from poverty.

It is a thrilling melodrama without featured players or stars—the sun, the wind and man's greed play the leading roles. Humans, ironically enough, are merely "extras."

Who wrote the superb commentary and who were the others involved?

MERTON J. SCHWARTZ.

Produced by the Resettlement Administration, "The Plow that Broke the Plains" was written and directed by Pare Lorentz, former film critic.

Please tell me Tom Brown's first three pictures and the first two he starred in.

T. KNOTT.

"A Lady Lies," "Queen High" and "Fast Companions" were Tom's first three pictures. He has not been starred at any time but had the title role in "Brown of Culver" and leading roles in subsequent pictures.

Wasn't there a picture just like or at least similar to the recent "Private Number" by the name of "Common Clay"? It was made about five years ago or maybe longer. I believe Constance Bennett played in it.

AN ARDENT MOVIE FAN.

The story of the two pictures you cite are similar in theme. Miss Bennett was the star of "Common Clay" released in August, 1930, by Fox.

'Suzy's' Weak Spots Leave Fan Unhappy

LAST night I saw the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Suzy." The weak spots in that picture look like oversize holes in a small sieve. About the greatest one occurred in the air battle near the end of the picture.

Franchot Tone is supposedly fighting a squadron of German planes somewhere over the lines. The idea was well intended, but somewhere in the course of events one of the studio executives must have been struck with the brilliant idea of saving money by inserting the fighting scenes from an old picture instead of filming some new shots.

Throughout the picture the acting was weak and showed a lack of interest on the part of the players. Cary Grant was the only one who showed any spark of life. The rest just went through the formality.

One more picture like "Suzy" for either Jean Harlow or Franchot Tone and they will be relegated to lesser roles.

TOMMY HAWK,

It looks like there's going to be trouble in that World War. And the history books will tell you that it's all over.

What has happened to Davey Lee, child actor, and how old is he? Where can I reach Al Jolson and Lon Chaney's son, Creighton Chaney? Where was the picture "San Francisco" filmed? What is Ruby Keeler's next? Is Reginald Denny still in pictures and did he play with Mary Pickford in "Kiki"? Where can I reach Ross Alexander?

JACK DIMURO.

Davey seems to be out of pictures, as we have no record of casting since 1932. He was born in Los Angeles, Dec. 29, 1924. Address Jolson in care of Warner Bros. Studio, Burbank, Calif., and Chaney at RKO-Radio Studios, Hollywood, Calif.

"San Francisco" was made at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Calif. Miss Keeler is not currently cast. Denny is still in pictures and soon will be seen in an important role in "Romeo and Juliet" with Norma Shearer and Leslie Howard. He was Miss Pickford's leading man in "Kiki." Address Alexander in care of Warner Bros. Studio, Burbank, Calif.

Please give the age, height, weight of Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor. Where can I reach them?

ELEANORE JEROME.

Miss Gaynor is 30, 5 feet, 100 pounds; Taylor, no age data available, 6 feet, 165 pounds. Address both players in care of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Calif.

How old is Ronald Colman and his height? Is he married? What is his next picture to be and who will play opposite him? Where would a letter reach him?

E. R.

Forty-three; 5 feet 11 inches. Not married. He will appear in "Lost Horizon" with Jane Wyatt. Address him in care of either Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Culver City, Calif., or Twentieth Century-Fox Studios, Westwood Hills, Calif.

He Takes Fling As a Producer

IF I were a Hollywood producer:

I would make another "Thin Man" with William Powell and Myrna Loy, and count myself lucky if it were half as good as the original.

I would not try to make Jean Harlow act like Bernhardt, as in "Suzy," but would be just content in photographing her many charms.

I would turn out fewer pictures a year, hire the best writers to be had, buy actors on the open market; and, I think, turn out better films.

I would stop believing that Joan Crawford was the finest dramatic actress on the screen and just concentrate on putting her charms on celluloid, too. But I would be sure that she had a scene in which she throws the furniture around. She does that awfully well.

I would give Shirley Temple some opportunities to act in interesting stories, instead of just throwing her into any old vehicle that allows her to dance and sing.

I would not produce a picture with Slim Summerville or Janet Gaynor, even if they were the last actors alive.

I would put humor in funny pictures, and keep it out of dour films where it has no place.

And I'd probably end up in the back alley; but, boy, would it be fun while it lasted!

MICHAEL M. STEWART,

Picture of Mr. Stewart getting a load off his chest.

Orchids and Onions and Charles Collins

I SEND an orchid to Charles Collins for his splendid work in "Dancing Pirate" and an onion to RKO for not showing him to the public sooner.

I would like to know a little about Collins, please.

FAY MARCIANO,

Pioneer's production of "Dancing Pirate," merely released through RKO-Radio, was Collins' first venture into films. Before that he was a famous dancer in stage shows and vaudeville, where of late he has appeared with his wife, Dorothy Stone, daughter of Fred Stone.

They were married in London, in 1931, after dancing together for two years in Stone's Broadway show, "Ripples."

Collins was born in Frederick, Okla., Jan. 7, 1907, and was a bookkeeper until he was 20 years old. Then he tried a few tap steps, took some lessons and headed for a stage career.

He is 5 feet 11 inches tall, has brown hair and eyes and weighs 145 pounds. He has not been cast for another role as yet.

Would you please print the cast of "Little Women"?

BETTY SCOTT.

Jo, Katharine Hepburn; Amy, Joan Bennett; Fritz Bhaor, Paul Lukas; Meg, Frances Dee; Beth, Jean Parker; Aunt March, Edna May Oliver; Laurie, Douglas Montgomery; Mr. Laurence, Henry Stephenson; Marmee, Spring Byington; Mr. March, Samuel Hinds; Hannah, Mabel Colcord; Brooks, John Lodge; Mamie, Nydia Westman.

Tell me something about Virginia Bruce.

A. C. E.

Virginia Bruce was born in Minneapolis, Minn., and was educated in Fargo, N. D. Married and divorced from the late John Gilbert and has one daughter. Her latest role was in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Great Ziegfeld."

At home Maureen O'Sullivan and Rodger are seen at their home in Beverly Hills. Maureen is back again in a jungle film, "Tarzan Escapes."

After understudying Elizabeth Bergner in "Escape Me Never," Beatrice Pons is heard on dramatic programs over the NBC networks.

The Bowery Princess prays. Shirley Temple's new film, "The Bowery Princess," will present, besides the child star, Frank Morgan and others in a Twentieth Century-Fox production.

Many thousands of people are so interested in Gus Edson's present daily story that they "just can't wait" to see what will happen from day to day. Who is the shipwrecked stranger with all the jewels?

A HIDDEN WEAPON

TARZAN SAW THAT HIS LONE HAND COULD NOT PREVAIL AGAINST THE POWERFUL PRIVATE ARMY OF HIS FOES.

"I'LL FINISH HIM," GORREY BOASTED TO FLINT "WHEN MY MARRIAGE TO NAKONIA MAKES ME A BIG SHOT!"

BUT TARZAN, WITH HIS FRIEND HALAM, FORMED A SECRET BAND, CALLED THE SWORDS OF FREEDOM, TO PLAGUE THE CONSPIRATORS.

MEANWHILE, NAKONIA CONTRIVED TO SEE TARZAN OFTEN, AND ALWAYS IN HER EYES WAS A MUTE APPEAL FOR HELP.

ON HER WEDDING DAY, TARZAN ISSUED STERN INSTRUCTIONS TO HIS FOLLOWERS. "AND SOME OF US MAY DIE," HE CONCLUDED.

THAT NIGHT, THE GREAT ONES OF THE REALM ASSEMBLED TO WITNESS THE NUPTIALS OF THE UNHAPPY PRINCESS.

FLINT SET A SHEAF OF DOCUMENTS BEFORE THE KING. "COPIES OF THE MARRIAGE CONTRACT," HE SAID, AND THE DISTRACTED MONARCH SIGNED BLINDLY.

AS THE PRIEST INTONED THE RITUAL, NAKONIA WEPT, FOR NOW SHE ABANDONED HOPE OF ESCAPING THIS HATEFUL UNION.

THEN, LIKE A BOLT OF LIGHTNING, TARZAN DROPPED DOWN FROM THE LOFTY RAFTERS.

WITH KNIFE UNSHEATHED HE RACED ACROSS THE PLATFORM TO CONFRONT THE TERROR-STRIKEN GORREY.

"GO!" THE APE-MAN COMMANDED GRIMLY, "SWEAR TO LEAVE THIS CITY AND THIS LAND AT ONCE, OR YOU DIE—NOW!"

THEN FLINT DREW THE GUN HE HAD LONG CONCEALED FROM TARZAN. "YOU'RE THE ONE TO DIE!" HE SHARLED.

NEXT WEEK: SACRIFICE

A different TARZAN story from the pen of Edgar Rice Burroughs—"TARZAN AND THE GREEN GODDESS"—is running serially on the daily comic page of The Constitution.

A WASHDAY LESSON SHE'LL NEVER FORGET

Here's the secret of clean, soothing, "smooth-as-silk" shaves

Lifebuoy lather provides half again as much beard-softening action as ordinary lather because it absorbs 52% more moisture—keeps whiskers wet to the shave's end. That's why it gives cleaner, smoother shaves. What's more, Lifebuoy is decidedly milder than other leading shaving soaps. That's why it's so kind and soothing to tender skin. Try it—get a tube at your druggist's today—feel the difference in your shaves.
